

London:
Printed by A. Spottiswoodf,
New-Street-Square.

HORATIUS RESTITUTUS:

OR

THE BOOKS OF

HORACE

ARRANGED

IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER

ACCORDING TO THE SCHEME OF DR. BENTLEY,

FROM THE TEXT OF GESNER, CORRECTED AND IMPROVED.

WITH

A PRELIMINARY DISSERTATION,

VERY MUCH ENLARGED,

ON

THE CHRONOLOGY OF THE WORKS, ON THE LOCALITIES, AND ON THE LIFE AND CHARACTER OF THAT POET.

BY JAMES TATE, M.A.

SECOND EDITION.

TO WHICH IS NOW ADDED,

AN ORIGINAL

TREATISE ON THE METRES OF HORACE.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR

LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, AND LONGMANS, PATERNOSTER-ROW.

1837.

[Entered at Stationers' Hall.]

PO VIEW ANNOTED

770 8111

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE EARL GREY,

WHOSE UNWEARIED SERVICES,

AS AN ENLIGHTENED AND PATRIOTIC STATESMAN, AND AT LENGTH UNEXAMPLED SUCCESS,
UNDER THE AUSPICES OF AN APPROVING SOVEREIGN,
AS A WISE AND TEMPERATE REFORMER, WILL FIND AN IMPERISHABLE RECORD IN THE MEMORY OF HIS GRATEFUL COUNTRYMEN.

THIS EDITION OF HORATIUS RESTITUTUS

IS MOST RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED,

TO COMMEMORATE ONE OF THE NOBLEST AND KINDEST ACTS OF PATRONAGE EVER CONFERRED,

AND TO TESTIFY AT ONCE THE PRIVATE GRATITUDE.

AND ON PUBLIC GROUNDS THE SINCERE VENERATION.

OF HIS LORDSHIP'S

MOST OBLIGED AND DEVOTED SERVANT,

JAMES TATE.

RESIDENTIARY HOUSE, St. Paul's, August 1, 1837.

PREFACE

TO THE FIRST EDITION.

In the Dissertation here prefixed to this Book of Horatius Restitutus, I am duly sensible, that the idea may arise of something irregular and desultory in the composition of it. Let me candidly own, that I should have been very happy to meet the expectation of my readers with a performance more regular and systematic, if the peculiarity of the subject had more readily allowed me so to do.

According to my own impressions, first of all, that subject itself was so extensive at once and full of variety, that with a little elegant diffusion, (which in its occasional use I am far from disparaging,) the materials of this Dissertation might be expanded easily into a separate volume: and in the second place, from the very nature of some of the disquisitions, necessarily dry, however to the purpose essential, certain breaks of a pleasanter kind seemed desirable, to relieve the formality of argument, if that might be done without the discursive itself becoming tedious.

The straightforward plainness, however, of the great points to be proved, may serve, amidst so much detail, to excuse the want of methodical regularity in the process. That Horace published his collected writings from time to time in such an order of succession and in no other, and that his principal residences, after he became a professed Poet, were three determinate places of abode, neither more, nor less; these surely are questions, which (when aided by the Chronological Table here subjoined) will hardly alarm the mind of an intelligent reader with any apprehension of perplexity.

In the case of Horace, indeed, most remarkably so, "the Poet is always identified with the man,"

> ----- ut omnis Votivà pateat veluti descripta tabellà Vita senis. 2 S. 1. 32, 3, 4.

even just as he tells us it was in the person of Lucilius, whom he avowedly followed (sequor hunc) in his lucubrations as a Satirist.

And in the very same degree, after the attention is fairly awakened to trace the incidents of his life and the stages of his locality, the personal history of the man adds perspicuity at once and interest to many passages in the Poet, which might otherwise remain neither interesting nor intelligible.

Now therefore that his works are recovered from their long state of disjointed existence, now that the disjoetti membra Poëta once more compose a figure of fair proportions, and Horace—ad unguem Factus homo—becomes himself again; I have no doubt but he will in many important and curious respects be more easily studied and more clearly understood. The investigation of other scholars which my example perhaps may serve to excite, will be rewarded with a rich return of discovery, from comparing together many parts of Horace hitherto not seen in connexion, or, if at all, awkwardly, but hereafter visible at once in their natural perspective.

Two or three specimens of this nature have recently occurred to my own mind as well worthy of notice.

For instance, the political conduct of Horace (a conduct of the most direct integrity) after the battle of Philippi, it will be impossible hereafter to distort into any semblance of the renegade; if his words and his deeds be only traced ever so severely in the actual succession of years. Then again, his laughing in the Satires, when a young man, at "those budge Doctors of the Stoic fur," Stertinius, Damasippus and Co., will be found perfectly compatible with the calm allusion in his later Odes (e. g. 3 C. 11. 17—20; 4 C. 1x. 39—44, &c.) to those moral energies of that high doctrine, which Roman virtue alone might realize or approach.

From the same correctness of view, that topic of literature now lost, De Personis Horatianis, will yet derive considerable illustration, especially as to some of his most valuable friends. Thus, Septimius (2 C. vi.) who with an honest cordiality invites Horace to live and die with him at his adored Tarentum, is still recognised as the same worthy man and equally beloved, when after a few years, weary of retirement, he turns adventurer, and gains that exquisite letter of introduction (1 E. ix.) to the young Prince Tiberius, then in Asia.

Again, Iccius, whose pursuit of philosophy did not conceal from Horace his hankering after wealth, sustains a sharp but delicate chastisement (1 C. xxix.) at an early period: some ten years afterwards (1 E. xii.) (when in Sicily as the procurator of Agrippa) he receives an Epistle introductory of Grosphus, already settled there, (2 C. xvi. 33,) in which the sweet is very ingeniously made to predominate over the bitter, and to all appearance quite consistently with honesty and truth.

It is to Horace's moral treatment of Iccius, and to other cases like it perhaps, such as that of Quintius Hirpinus (2 C. XI; 1 E. XVI. 17, &c.) and it may be to that of Virgit also (4 C. XII. 15. 21, &c.); that his most devoted admirer, Persius, seems to bear this happy and characteristic testimony.

Omne vafer vitium ridenti Flaccus amico Tangit, et admissus circum præcordia ludit. – Sat. 1. 116, 7.

And yet—arch Horace, while he strove to mend, Probed all the foibles of his smiling friend; Played lightly round and round the peccant part, And won, unfelt, an entrance to his heart.

GIFFORD.

In the dedication of Horatius Restitutus, here preserved, it will not be considered as an extravagant compliment, if I have styled Dr. Bentley the Prince of Critics. For what is the constant language of the present generation, and amongst the scholars of the Continent? Hermann, himself confessedly, "a scholar and a philosopher of the highest order," in one of his critical works, De R. Bentleio ejusque editione Terentii Dissertatio, tells us distinctly, that from his preceptor, F. V. Reiz, he inherited the disposition to honour Bentley, tanquam perfectissimum critici exemplum: and he has admirably concentered his own eulogy of that character in the following definition which he afterwards expands.

"Erat Bentleius vir infinitæ doctrinæ, acutissimi sensus, acerrimi judicii. Et his tribus rebus omnis laus et virtus continetur Critici."

24th March, 1832.

R. S. Y.

" TO THE

MASTER, FELLOWS, AND SCHOLARS,

OF TRINITY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE,

ESPECIALLY TO THOSE PUPILS OF MINE
WHO HAVE BEEN OR NOW ARE ON THE FOUNDATION, I INSCRIBE THIS BOOK,

IN THE BELIEF

THAT THEY WILL KINDLY AND JUSTLY ESTIMATE THE TRIBUTE OF DEEP ADMIRATION

HERE PAID

TO THE CELEBRATED EDITION OF THE WORKS OF HORACE,

WHICH THE PRINCE OF CRITICS, RICHARD BENTLEY,

FIRST DATED FROM THAT ILLUSTRIOUS COLLEGE, IN THE YEAR M.DCC.XI.

JAMES TATE.

RICHMOND,

April 16, 1832.

P.S. An earnest anxiety to learn whatever yet may be accurately known about the Fons Bandusinus, maintained to be the old genuine and only fountain of that name, near to Venusia (or Venosa), induced me to consult Dr. George Errington, Pro-Rector of the English college at Rome. Accordingly I requested from him the advantage of any research which his command of the libraries there might give, into the subject proposed; he was particularly desired to examine every document which he could find, bearing on the question in the Abbé Chaupy's Decouverte de la Maison de Campagne d'Horace, Vol. 111. pp. 364. 538, &c.

In a long, curious, entertaining Letter lately received, my learned and accomplished correspondent assures me, that while the extract itself from the Bull of Pascal the 11d (about which I inquired) is indeed literally correct, he considers its application, however, as very suspicious; from the manner in which Chaupy "sees a little, presumes a great deal, and so jumps to the conclusion."

The passage quoted by Chaupy and more fully given by Mr. Hobhouse (vide the close of the Dissertation for particulars) contains, to be sure, various words—de Castello Bandusii—in Bandusino fonte apud Venusiam, &c., which seem full of excellent promise: but when rigidly examined, those words leave nothing essential, beyond the simple fact, that in the year A.D. 1103, "at or near Venosa there was a Church called in Fonte Bandusino, for what cause so called cannot now be ascertained."

The fountain itself, somewhere in that neighbourhood beyond a doubt, existed apparently in Horace's day. But while the precise spot of the Poet's birth, on the banks of the Aufidus, and therefore if geography may be trusted, not immediately near to Venusia, has but little chance now of ever being exactly determined, the original Fons Bandusinus must without a sigh be resigned to its fate; perhaps that of an extinct fountain in a country more or less subject to volcanic influence. And finally, in referring here to Mr. Cramer's Ancient Italy, Vol. 11. p. 290, I beg to be candidly understood as not at all impeaching his general accuracy: he does but exhibit, avowedly so, the specious result of Chaupy's discoveries, when he says of the Fons Bandusinus (in the Bull alluded to, APUD Venusiam), "that we ought to restore it to its true position, about six miles from Venosa, on the site named Palazzo." Let the right or the wrong of all this repose with Capmartin de Chaupy.

Habeat secum, servetque sepulchro.

INTRODUCTION

то

THE PRESENT EDITION.

On a new edition of Horatius Restitutus appearing, some account may naturally be expected of what has been done, in the way of addition and improvement, to constitute an increased claim for its kind reception with the lovers of Roman literature.

In the first place, the Preliminary Dissertation remains in the arrangement of its principal parts the same as before; and though with great enlargement in the materials of new and interesting observation, yet not so far, it is hoped, as to render any one topic disproportionate or tedious. To preserve as much as possible something like unity in the composition, such new subjects as from their importance seemed to justify a larger discussion, it has been thought advisable to form into separate articles of Appendix, with the best arrangement which the diversity of nature in many of them would permit.

Amongst other additions, the Chronological Table now so much extended in its plan, pp. 90—94, may fairly be reckoned. I am indebted to Lord Holland's kindness, who has taken a most friendly interest in Horatius Restitutus, for the very just suggestion, that greater particularity and fulness of detail would give increased value to the Chronology, which beyond a doubt was too brief before. And Mr. H. Fynes Clinton, whose judgment I solicited on the MS. in its altered state, honoured me with the following reply:

that after a careful examination he thought it very much improved by the addition made of testimonies from the works of Horace in the fourth column, and that he perfectly understood the design in this Chronology, not to illustrate history from Horace, but rather Horace from history. "This design," he adds, "you have fulfilled in a very complete and satisfactory manner; and your tables, as now enlarged, will render great assistance to the future students of Horace."

It cannot be impertinent here, in allusion to P. D. 81, 2. to announce; that a Memoir of the Life and Times of Horace—with a regular parallel in the events of Roman history and in the biography of contemporary poets—has been sketched with great exactness by Mr. Charles Wordsworth, of Winchester, in a sheet privately printed and for limited circulation only. Professedly formed, as it is, on the basis of the Preliminary Dissertation and of the Fasti Hellenici, and already carried down to the publication of the third book of Odes, it has deserved and received my very hearty approbation. And I record with much pleasure Mr. Clinton's opinion, which on such a subject is quite decisive: "it will be a valuable guide and eminently useful to young men engaged in academical studies."

In the additional space which this volume has demanded, the largest share is claimed by the Dissertation on the Metres of Horace; which in its prefatory pages (159—161) sufficiently enumerates the different authors to whom my obligations are due. Let me, however, in particular reference to Dr. Herbert, take this opportunity to premise that as far as he has clearly shown the way, in that curious line of the leading accents essential to the right constitution of verse, I have freely availed myself of his guidance; and that where I have felt less assurance on any points in his doctrine, I have stated the facts without comment, and left the farther application for other scholars to demonstrate. Nor may the gratification be denied to me of stating, that in the month of January, 1836, the Dissertation itself was drawn up as it now stands, chiefly on existing materials, with the aid of my son and successor in the School of Richmond, Mr. James Tate, a sound and elegant scholar, as well as a faithful and diligent preceptor.

And here, if the overflowing matter may be excused for seeking admission into a place not properly its own, let the two following Addenda be accepted towards completing or extending the separate articles to which they belong.

I. In the Familiar Day of Horace, Appendix, pp. (100), (101), (102), I have shown in what style and on what conditions he professed to entertain his friends, and have exhibited another variety of good fellowship, which was partly managed at the common expense of the parties. Now a reader who is not sufficiently aware of the difference betwixt that age and our own, may naturally ask: " Had the gentlemen of Rome then no other plan for enjoying the social hour but those which you have here described?" None, that I am aware of, is apparent in the pages of Horace. For the scenes which you may perhaps imagine adapted to that purpose, were in our poet's time evidently unknown in any such use. With him, the caupona occurs only as an inn for the entertainment of travellers, 1 S. v. 51; 1 E. xi. 12; xvii. 8; the popina, as an eating-house (with its frequenter popino) dirty and discreditable, 2 S. IV. 62; VII. 39; 1 E. xiv. 21; and, finally, the taberna (in the only pertinent acceptation of the word) as nothing more or less than a mere wine-shop, and one to which very low persons resorted, 1 E, xv. 24. In short, any thing like our tavern, or other place of reception for a party to dine, seems to have been unknown at Rome in the age of Augustus.

In the well-known invitation to Torquatus, 1 E. v. 2. that olus omne of a dinner may well excite our wonder; and if strictly so understood, can hardly expect to be credited. Let any person, however, who entertains such a doubt, betake himself to Tully's Epistles, Fam. v11. 26, and there he will read, among the practical effects of the Lev sumtuaria rigidly enforced during the usurpation of Caesar, that Cicero from eating vegetables only, but very highly dressed, in canâ Augurali apud Lentulum, incurred a dysentery which had nearly been the death of him.

If such was the habitual frugality of Horace's meal, we may be the less surprised at his unquestionable nicety with regard to its concomitant, good water. With him, indeed, this was a necessary of the first importance: and it is curious to trace his own repeated mention of it from 1 S. v. 7, 8. where he could eat no dinner because the water was bad, through his wish, 2 S. vi. 2. for the jugis aquæ fons, and his pride in possessing, 3 C. xvi. 29. Puræ rivus aquæ.—down to the inquiry at a late period, 1 E. xv. 15, 16. what kind of water the inhabitants of Velia and Salernum enjoyed.

Collectosne bibant imbres, puteosne perennes Jugis aquæ.

II. Horace, when recounting the many annoyances from which his comparative poverty and his humble rank exempted him, includes this also:

The necessity then to maintain those comites would have formed in his estimate one of the miseries of wealth and high birth. From whence, it may be asked, did this adjunct of nobility and opulence arise, which so marked civil society in the age of Augustus? Clearly enough, its origin was military, in the custom for young men of family to go out as contubernales to commanders in chief and governors of provinces, and under their eye to learn all the virtutes imperatorias whether of provincial policy or of the art of war.

The authority of Cicero for the military practice in his day is very explicit. Take two instances as presented by Ernesti in his valuable Index Latinitatis. Pro Cn. Plancio, § 11. and Pro M. Cœlio, § 30. it is stated as a fact highly honourable to their characters, that the one enjoyed the contubernii necessitudo with Aulus Torquatus, and that the other went into Africa to be Q. Pompeio Proconsuli contubernalis. For a period not much later, the words of Horace may be considered sufficiently clear, as when at 1 S. vii. 25. he mentions the comites of Brutus, and at 1 E. viii. 2. he writes to Celsus Albinovanus, comiti scribæque Neronis, with the cohors also of that young prince (v. 14) alluded to. In a brief sketch like this, one more example, but that of a splendid name, may suffice. The young Agricola, as we are told by Tacitus, § 5. Prima castrorum rudimenta Suctonio Paullino diligenti ac moderato duci approbavit, electus, quem contubernio æstimaret.

Now, by what process the transition took place from the contubernalis of the Prætorium abroad to the comes of the mansion or the villa at home, it may be a difficult office to develope. But the two Epistles, xvII. and xvIII. to Scæva and to Lollius, (of which the latter supplies the term comitem, v. 30. in sequence to dives amicus, v. 24. as the correlative, followed by potentis amici, v. 44. in the same meaning,) abundantly demonstrate, that the relation of such a minor to such a major amicus prevailed much in the highest Roman society, at the time when Horace wrote those two Letters of advice with such masterly skill and such beautiful execution.

Before concluding, it is incumbent on me to acknowledge, with many thanks, the valuable assistance which I received in the summer of last year, when at Richmond, from the fine taste and talent of Mr. William King, in very carefully drawing up the principal articles of Appendix. Mr. King is already known, I trust, from the just compliments paid to him as my coadjutor in editing the Analecta Majora Poetica of Professor Dalzel in 1827; and he well deserves to be known from his labour so judiciously bestowed on the last edition of Mitford's History of Greece.

Nor may the valuable services of Mr. Robert Baldwin be allowed here to pass unacknowledged. Without his friendly assistance and judicious advice, these sheets could never have been carried through the press; under the peculiar difficulty of so many MS. additions and corrections to be incorporated with the old text, and the difficulty itself aggravated by that text being so singular a compound of original matter blended with quotation.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

ΟĔ

PRELIMINARY DISSERTATION, &c.

CHRONOLOGY OF THE WORKS.

	Page
De Temporibus Horatii, according to Bentley	3
Faber, Dacier, Masson, and Mitscherlich	6
M. Sanadon's errors exposed	8
(The term Epode explained	10
And Carmen)	11
Absurdity involved in the common order of the books of Horace, and congruity arising from Bentley's arrangement, as to internal evidence and historical truth	1.5
Advantage of that arrangement in placing the fourth book of Odes after the first book of Epistles, particularly shown vace area are appeared, particularly only in	.,
LOCALITIES.
LOCALITES.
Horace's three places of residence, Rome, Sabine Valley,
Tivoli	20
First great source of error in Suctonius	21
Second source, opposite to that, in the discoveries of Domenico	- 1
de Sanctis and De Chaupy	22
Correction of the latter error	23
Confirmed by Cabral, &c.
Communicary covins, co	24

	Page
N. Hardinge's important emendation. 3 C. XXIX. 6. Ut semperudum, &c	24
Proofs of Horace's frequent residence at Tivoli	25
And of his there first becoming a Lyric poet	27
His occasional resort also to Præneste and Baiæ	28
Essential distinctions betwixt his mode of life in the Sabine Valley and that either at Rome or at Tivoli	29
The Ode to Phidyle (3 C. xxIII. Calo supinas) placed in its true light	-30
The invitation to Q. Hirpinus (2 C. x1. Quid bellicosus)
dated from Tivoli, and not from the Sabine Valley	32
Singular errors as to the wishes of Horace, and as to the actual qualities of his Sabine estate	34
1
Management of the Committee of the Commi
LIFE AND CHARACTER OF HORACE.
His father, a Coactor	37
Condition of the Libertini	ib.
Horace born at Venusia	38
His adventure when a child	40
(With allusion to his escape from other dangers) .	ib.
Carried to Rome for his education	41
(Reminiscences afterwards of his native place) .	42
The liberal character of his appearance at Rome	44
His moral training under his father's eye	45
After the death of his father, Horace goes to Athens	47
His studies, his attainments in Grecian literature, and his Sodales
there	48
(Examples of Horace tracked in his own snow) .	50
Places which he appears to have visited	51
(Epistle (x1.) to Bullatius; peculiarity of his style)	ib.
As military tribune, under Brutus, at Philippi	53
He returns to Rome and becomes a clerk in the treasury .	54
His mode of life at this period, and afterwards	56
He is introduced to Mæcenas by Virgil and Varius	58
The journey to Brundusium. (1 S. v.)	59
His personal and literary friends	ib.

Probable origin of the Satire, (1 S. vul.) Proscripti Regis . 61 On the snecession of the pieces in his books; the separation of some, the conjunction of others	TABLE OF CONTENTS,	xix
On the snecession of the pieces in his books; the separation of some, the conjunction of others		Page
Some, the conjunction of others	Probable origin of the Satire, (1 S. vut.) Proscripti Regis .	61
Canidia traced through all the pieces respecting her	On the succession of the pieces in his books; the separation of	f
The new stage of Horace's history, when just possessed of the Sabine estate. 2 S. vi. Hoc erat in votis	some, the conjunction of others	62
Sabine estate. 2 S. VI. Hoc evat in votis	Canidia traced through all the pieces respecting her	64
(Lays the foundation of his Epodes)	The new stage of Horace's history, when just possessed of the
His happiness and kind reception among his Sabine neighbours	Sabine estate. 2 S. vi. Hoc erat in votis	ib.
The historical bearing of his Epodes considered	(Lays the foundation of his Epodes)	66
Progress from the Epodes to the Odes, from the Odes to the Epistles	His happiness and kind reception among his Sabine neighbours .	. 67
Epistles	The historical bearing of his Epodes considered	69
Publication of the fourth book of Odes	Progress from the Epodes to the Odes, from the Odes to the
Preceded by the Carmen Sæculare	Epistles	. ib .
And marked by peculiar circumstances	Publication of the fourth book of Odes	72
In that book no direct address to Mæcenas, and why	Preceded by the Carmen Sæculare	. 73
Maceenas Horace's only patron	And marked by peculiar circumstances	74
Horace's temper and disposition, that of contentedness and gratitude	In that book no direct address to Mæcenas, and why .	. ib .
gratitude	Mæcenas Horace's only patron	76
By no means without a sense of religion	Horace's temper and disposition, that of contentedness and	l
Maccenas's visit to Horace at Tivoli	gratitude	. 77
Chronological table, in its several particulars, explained . 80 Dates regarding Virgil, Quintilius Varus, and Lucilius, considered 83 In historical facts no real objection to Bentley's chronology . 85 The localities of Horace, as here stated, not affected by the supposed discovery of the Fons Bandusinus near Venusia . 87 BRIEF CHRONOLOGY OF THE LIFE AND WRITINGS OF HORACE . 90 APPENDIX. I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it	By no means without a sense of religion	78
Dates regarding Virgil, Quintilius Varus, and Lucilius, considered 83 In historical facts no real objection to Bentley's chronology . 85 The localities of Horace, as here stated, not affected by the supposed discovery of the Fons Bandusinus near Venusia . 87 Brief Chronology of the Life and Writings of Horace . 90 APPENDIX. I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it	Mæcenas's visit to Horace at Tivoli	. 79
In historical facts no real objection to Bentley's chronology . 85 The localities of Horace, as here stated, not affected by the supposed discovery of the Fons Bandusinus near Venusia . 87 Brief Chronology of the Life and Writings of Horace . 90 APPENDIX. I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it	Chronological table, in its several particulars, explained .	80
The localities of Horace, as here stated, not affected by the supposed discovery of the Fons Bandusinus near Venusia . 87 Brief Chronology of the Life and Writings of Horace . 90 APPENDIX. I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it	Dates regarding Virgil, Quintilius Varus, and Lucilius, considered	83
Posed discovery of the Fons Bandusinus near Venusia . 87 Brief Chronology of the Life and Writings of Horace . 90 APPENDIX. I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it	In historical facts no real objection to Bentley's chronology .	85
APPENDIX. I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it	The localities of Horace, as here stated, not affected by the sup-	-
APPENDIX. I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it	posed discovery of the Fons Bandusinus near Venusia .	87
APPENDIX. I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it
I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it	BRIEF CHRONOLOGY OF THE LIFE AND WRITINGS OF HORACE	. 90
I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it
I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it	P
I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with it
it	APPENDIX.
it	I. Horace's familiar day, and Roman customs connected with	l
 111. On Maccenas and the first Ode of the first book	**
 111. On Maccenas and the first Ode of the first book	II. On the Sabine Valley and the second Epode	107
IV. On Augustus Cæsar and the second Ode, Jam satis terris 121 V. De Personis Horatianis	III. On Mæcenas and the first Ode of the first book	. 111
V. De Personis Horatianis		s 121
VI. On Horace's obligations to the Greek poets 139
•		139
VII. On Khemier's Questiones Horatiane 140	VII. On Kirchner's QUESTIONES HORATIANE.	. 140

Pa	age
VIII. Some account of the text of this edition, and of the read- ings different from that of Gesner adopted for its improvement	49
Treatise on the Metres of Horace	59
INTRODUCTION.
The terms Caupona—Popina—Taberna, explained	xiii
No places of reception for a party to dine x
	ib.
His peculiar nicety as to good water	ilį.
On the Comites of Horace's day, and the military origin of that ib.

DISSERTATION

ON

THE CHRONOLOGY OF THE WORKS,

AND ON

THE LOCALITIES AND LIFE AND CHARACTER

OF

HORACE.

HAVING now, for more than one third of a century, been engaged in reading the works of Horace with my Pupils, and having long witnessed in his commentators the confusion very often attending their neglect of his chronology, (let me add of his localities also,) I have been strongly inclined for some time past to undertake the illustration of Horace, in that department alone. By the light of Bentley's discoveries in his celebrated Præfatio, the question De temporibus librorum Horatii (though the result only of his investigations without any part of the regular process is given) I ventured to consider after all as in the main decisively settled. And therefore if on the strength of Bentley's name I had proceeded to publish a new edition of the works, without any other recommendation than that of their being printed in the very order in which they were originally published in successive books by the author himself; it struck my mind very forcibly, that such an edition would be hailed by Scholars as an era in Horatian literature.

That design, however, still hung in suspense, and might yet have been indefinitely delayed. But in the course of last year, (1831,) I was led to expect the appearance of a Second Part of the Fasti Hellenici, &c., by Mr. H. Fynes Clinton, brought down to the death of Augustus: and that expectation inspired me with a strong anxiety to learn what the Master Chronologist had done, under the head of Roman Authors, towards fixing or correcting the calculations of Bentley. My satisfaction of course was very great to find, that all the principal points which had been laid down one hundred and twenty years ago for the foundation of that arrangement, may now be received as determined once for all by the very highest authority.

Mr. Clinton himself on being informed of my intention gives me the kindest encouragement to persevere: he approves of my undertaking so useful a work as an edition of the books of Horace, arranged in chronological order: and he assigns as a reason for his approbation, that the neglect of that order has produced much perplexity to the student not of Horace only, but of many other authors of the Augustan age.

Under all these circumstances, I now am emboldened to proceed in the task; and as the design in the first instance is submitted to the judgement of scholars, which it candidly invites, I shall at once lay before them as preliminary to all other disquisition the following extract from Bentley's Præfatio. The title is copied from the formula adopted by Gesner, who in his edition of Horace gives all this extract except what stands as the first section of it: and the division here made of the whole into parts commodious for reference, will on that account be readily allowed.

DE TEMPORIBUS LIBRORUM

HORATII

ET

POEMATUM ADEO

RICH. BENTLEII SENTENTIA.

- ¶ 1. Jam vero et illud monendum est, editiones principes et recentioris ætatis codices alio ac nunc solemus ordine Artem Poëticam collocare, post carmen nempe Sæculare ante Sermones et Epistolas: vetustiores vero omnes Membranas post Carminum libros Artem Epodis præponere. Si quæris, quisnam ex his ordo recte se habeat, seriemque temporum, quibus singula ab auctore edita sunt, rite conservet, vetustusne ille an medius an hodiernus; nullus profecto omnium.
- ¶ 2. Magno quidem studio et acerrima contentione post Tanaquilli Fabri operam Clarissimi viri Dacerius Massonusque in hanc arenam descenderunt; quorum equidem acumen et eruditionem in partibus laudo; in operis vero summa totoque constituendo rem eos infeliciter admodum gessisse censeo. Horum enim rationibus, et Carminibus et Epodis et Sermonibus Epistolisque scribendis uno ac eodem tempore vacavisse Nostrum necesse est; et singula quæque poëmatia separatim in vulgus edidisse: quorum utrumque a vero alienum esse mihi pro comperto est.
- ¶ 3. Quippe omnibus, qui ejusmodi Poëmatia scripserunt, id in more erat, ut non sparsas Eclogas, sed integros Libellos semel simulque in lucem ederent. Ita Catullus fecit, ut ex Epigrammate 1. constat, Cui dono lepidum novum Libellum: ita Tibullus, quem vide Elegia 1. libri tertii, v. 7. et 17. ita Propertius Eleg. 1. librorum 11. 111. et 1v. ut et Libri 11. Elegia x, v. 25. et xix, v. 39; ita Virgilius

Bucolica dedit, uti patet ex ultimo illo, Extremum hune, Arcthusa, mihi concede laborem: ita Naso Amorum et Tristium et Ponticorum libros, ipso teste: ita Statius Silvas suas: ita Martialis Epigrammata, ut Præfationes eorum fidem faciunt: ita Persius Satiras; Phædrus et Avienus fabulas; Ausonius, Prudentius, Sidonius, Venantiusque sua Carmina; quod ex eorum Prologis abunde patet.

- ¶ 4. Quid quæris? Ipse quoque Horatius Libellos suos junctim editos aperte indicat; primum Carminum librum ex Prologo; secundum tertiumque ex Epilogis; Epodos ex illo x1v. Inceptos olim promissum carmen Iambos Ad umbilieum adducere; Sermonum priorem librum ex versu ultimo, I puer atque meo citus hæc subscribe LIBELLO; posteriorem ex Prologo; priorem vero Epistolarum et ex Prologo et ex Epilogo. Quartum vero Carminum, et Epistolarum secundum longo post cetera intervallo emissos esse, plenissimum est Suetonii testimonium; quod qui aut refellere aut eludere conantur, inanem operam insumunt.
- ¶ 5. His jam positis; primum Horatii opus statuo Sermonum librum primum, quem triennio perfecit intra annos ætatis xxvi, xxvii, xxviii; postea Secundum triennio itidem, annis xxxi, xxxiii, xxxiii; deinde Epodos biennio, xxxiv et xxxv; tum Carminum librum primum triennio, xxxvi, xxxvii, xxxviii; Secundum biennio, xl, xli; Tertinmque pariter biennio, xlii, xliii: inde Epistolarum primum biennio, xlvi, xlvii; tum Carminum lib. quartum et Sæculare triennio, xlix, l, li. Postremo Artem Poëticam et Epistolarum librum alterum, annis incertis. Intra hos cancellos omnium poëmati∞n natales esse ponendos, et ex argumentis singulorum et ex Annalium fide constabit.
- ¶ 6. Inde est, quod in Sermonibus et Epodis et Carminum primo, Cæsar semper, nunquam Augustus dicitur; quippe qui id nomen consecutus est, anno demum Flacci xxxix; in sequentibus vero passim Augustus appellatur. Inde est, quod in Sermonibus et Epodis Juvenem se ubique indicat; et quod sola Satirarum laude inclaruisse se dicit, ut Bucolicorum tum Virgilium (Serm. 1, 10. v. 46.) nulla Lyricorum mentione facta.

- ¶ 7. In ceteris autem singulis procedentis ætatis gradus planissimis signis indicat: idque tibi ex hac serie jam a me demonstrata jucundum erit animadvertere; cum operibus Juvenilibus multa obscæna et flagitiosa insint; quanto annis provectior erat, tanto eum et poëtica virtute et argumentorum dignitate gravitateque meliorem castioremque semper evasisse.
- ¶ 8. Ceterum ubicumque viri doctissimi extra limites hic positos in adsignandis temporibus evagantur, toties illi in errores prolabuntur. Facile quidem mihi foret id in singulis ostendere; verum unum modo alterumve hic attingam, cetera tuæ industriæ relinquens. Libri 1. Carmen 21, Dianam teneræ dicite Virgines, perperam Sæculare vocant, et ad Horatii annum xlix. referunt; ringente Suetonio, qui tres Carminum libros longo intervallo eum annum præcessisse testatur. Atqui nihil quicquam hic de Sæcularibus ludis proditur; sed aut ad Dianæ aut Apollinis festum spectat, quorum illud mense Augusto, hoc Julio singulis annis celebrabatur. Eodem pertinet Catulli carmen xxxv, Dianæ sumus in fide; quod Sæculare etiam a viris doctis pessime inscribitur; cum nihil ibi de Sæculo habeatur, isque diu diem obierit ante Ludos Augusti Sæculares.
- ¶ 9. Tum et 11, 17, Ad Mæcenatem ægrotum, immani parachronismo ad Horatii annum Lv. ultra libri quarti tempora ablegant; idque levi et futili argumento, quod co anno continua insomnia vexari cœperit Mæcenas triennio aute diem fatalem. Quasi vero non plus semel in tam longa vita ægrotaverit, quem Plinius major v11, 51. perpetua febre ab adolescentia laborasse tradidit.

10. Illud vero in Sermone vi, libri 2, Quid, militibus promissa Triquetra, Prædia Cæsar, an est Itala tellure daturus? non, ut volunt, ad pugnam Actiacam annumque Flacci xxxv. referendum erat, nec ad Philippensem annumve xxiv: quippe de agrorum divisione hic agitur, quæ post Siculam de Pompeio victoriam et Lepidi deditionem in Campania alibique facta est, anno Flacci xxxi, ut disertis verbis narrat Dio p. 456, 457. Plutarchus Antonio p. 941, Paterculus 11, 81; et Appianus p. 1176. Alia omnia pari facilitate refutari possent; sed his fruere et vale.

In all this extract, confessedly, we have little more than the result of Bentley's investigations: the regular process throughout, by which facts and arguments were drawn up into a chronological system, we do not possess. Much less can we venture to say how far the internal evidence on which he so acutely proceeded in demonstrating the dates, turned entirely on facts of a public, or partly on those of a private, nature also. Still, however, one thing to me seems quite undeniable: the system of Bentley remains to this day unshaken from any quarter by legitimate confutation, unassailed indeed by any regular and systematical attempt to confute it. Whatever in the course of much reading I have hitherto seen, whether totally adverse or in part only contrary, I have found to involve such gross neglect of unquestionable truth, such absurdity springing up in immediate consequences; that seldom has more than one effort of thought been necessary to penetrate and discard it.

To the several labours however learned and plausible of Faber, of Dacier, and of Masson, after the decisive judgement of Bentley so declared (¶ 2.), it will not be expected, that any particular attention should be devoted by me. And yet, just as if Masson's accuracy in the Vita Horatii (1708) had never been disputed, (though he was held by Dacier in great contempt,) that work has been quoted with much deference by later editors; and more or less formed on the basis of Masson's Vita or of the Chronologia per Consules of Dacier have been those compilations under the title of Q. Horatii Flacci Vita per annos digesta, which have even recently appeared.

Amongst the very latest of those who have merely gone in the old path so long trod before them, let not Mitscherlich, the German editor of the Odes, be overlooked. He wholly rejects the scheme of Bentley, and in his Preface, p. xxi. after daring to pronounce...infirma omnino Bentleii temporum ratio...he brings forward an objection founded on an allusion to the Cantabri. 3 C. viii. 21. Whoever will turn to the Fasti of Mr. Clinton, B. c. 23. p. 237, may see how the objection is answered and the credit of Bentley maintained by a touch of the pen from that unrivalled chronologist.

I embrace the occasion here offered, to acknowledge the great faithfulness and talent so conspicuous in the recent biography of Bentley; and on the general question before us, I adopt with much gratification the judgment (perfectly coincident with my own) which the biographer so strongly and comprehensively delivers.

"Bentley's scheme of the Tempora Horatiana is condemned by Mitscherlich, the Leipsic editor: but he is a person of little or no authority; and in this case he appeals to the life of Horace, by Jani, an abridgement of Masson's, one of those productions to correct the errors of which, Bentley's theory was composed."—Dr. Monk's Life of Bentley, p. 245, 8vo.

But whatever excuse I may thus plead for leaving the now obsolete merits of Messrs. Faber, Dacier and Masson under "the balance and the rod" in Bentley's hands; some distinct notice is unquestionably due to the subsequent name of Monsieur Sanadon, from its being so eminent in the criticism of Horace for right or for wrong.

In the year 1728, from the press of Claude Robustel, à Paris, there came forth in two handsome quarto volumes primà specie a very splendid work: Les Poésies d'Horace disposées suivant l'ordre chronologique et traduites en François: avec des Remarques et des Dissertations critiques. Par le R. P. Sanadon, de la Compagnie de Jesus.

The object of Mr. Sanadon avowedly embraces a very bold and radical change. He does not restore (according to the plan in this volume proposed) the Opera Horatiana to that order of books in which it is highly probable at least that they were first published by the poet himself. He revolutionises every thing; and exults in the magnificent mischief. "De toutes les pièces d'Horace je n'en laisse que trois dans leur ancienne situation." p. vi.

Now I am duly aware that the celebrated D'Orville (in the year 1750) left on record the severest condemnation of this barbarous concern. "Sanadon," he says, "qui nuper Horatium temerario ausu Absyrti instar concidit truncavitque, et triviali commentario obruit." D'Orville ad Chariton, p. 239. ed. Beck.

Klotzius too, in his Lectiones Venusinæ (1770), speaks of Sanadon's conceitedness at once and servile plagiarism in a strong tone of bitterness. Take the following examples: "Sanadonius interpretatur mire, et explicat defenditque versionem perperam, ut fere semper, quoties aliorum animadversiones non compilavit." p. 321.—"Sanadonio, servilis ingenii homine, cuique nihil magis succedit, quam si Bentleium aliosque compilat." p. 406.

To these severe expressions most probably Dr. Parr refers in the very clever and very playful Letter to Mr. Henry Homer on his projected variorum Edition of Horace. After calling him "a great coxcomb" in one part of it, he finally says: "Beware of that rascal Sanadon: and be sure to quote what Klotzius says of him, and I say too."—Dr. Johnstone's Life and Works of Dr. Parr, Vol. 1. p. 412.

Let me not be understood, however, as wishing to shelter myself under authorities like these from the responsibility of delivering an opinion of my own. From me, the first person who has ventured to print the books of Horace in the order of their original publication, something more in the direct way of reply may naturally be expected; especially as against Sanadon, who proceeding de novo in utter defiance to all and every arrangement of the books as such, has dislocated and dismembered the whole body of the Poet.

The compilers of Horace's life, indeed, in allotting such a poem to such a year of it, had very freely violated all respect in any way due to the consideration of collective books successively published: but no editor before Sanadon had ever on system printed the works of Horace in any other than the common series, or disturbed the common arrangement at all.

The two volumes of Sanadon now before me contain 1400 pages, exclusive of the Indices to the Work. To peruse carefully such an extent of translated and critical matter, with a view to examine, detect and refute, would be an Herculean toil. If according to Bentley (Pref. to Phalar. p. cxi.) a man "may commit more mistakes in five weeks' time and in five sheets of paper, than can thoroughly be confuted in fifty sheets and a whole year;" the complete examination of Sanadon's pages might form the labour of a very long life.

A much shorter operation must serve the present purpose. To disable his judgment, in the phrase of Shakspeare, may of itself be sufficient. And to that end let the following specimens of particular but very gross errors be accepted, instead of a more general and extensive reply.

(1.) With Sanadon, the Epodes (of which he discards the name entirely) are considered as a fifth book of Odes;

and they are variously scattered through the mass and mixt multitude of the real Carmina. He thus makes up five books of Odes altogether; and, as with an Epilogos to the whole, concludes the fifth of them with the last ode of our third book,

Exegi monumentum ære perennius.

Now it is most true that the great Muretus in the year 1551 remarks thus on the book EPODON. "Cur Epodos liber hic vocetur, non equidem satis intelligo: ac vidi veterem librum, in quo hic quintus Odarum liber inscribebatur." In his Var. Lect. too, L. iii. C. xix, he entitles it expressly thus: "Horatii versus e quinto Odarum illustrati." But at that day, the critical knowledge of Horace was yet in its infancy: and Sanadon stands without excuse for not attending to the Grammatical signification of Epodi, when in all the editions by Craquius from the year_1578 downwards, the old commentaries on Horace had been regularly published with the commentator's clear and explicit definition of (a) προφόδε, and of (β) ἐπφόδε.

u. Ibis Liburnis inter alta navium,

β. Amice, propugnacula.

That Archilechian metre which from its predominance (and that of others similar) gave in an early century its own appellation to the whole book of Epodes, is not at this day much better understood from Gaisford's Hephæstio, (1810,) pp. 129. 368. or from Hermann's Elementa Doctrinæ Metricæ, (1816,) L. iii. c. xv. than it might have been known for any practical purpose in the year 1578.

Of all this, however, Sanadon has shown, if not a profound ignorance, yet a most offensive contempt. His comment on the very first Epode, Ibis Liburnis, &c., he thus introduces, "Cette Ode est proprement une lettre en vers liriques!" No wonder, that an Editor who found lyric Odes in what should become enamoured of his own inventions and create a chaos accordingly.

Horace himself denominated (Ep. xiv. 7. cf. 1 E. xix. 23-25.)

Inceptos, olim promissum carmen, Iambos,

It is true indeed, that among his lyric odes, Horace has not scrupled to insert some pieces in a metre not strictly lyric: as, 1 C. IV, VII, VIII, XXVIII; 2 C. XVIII; 3 C. XII; 4 C. VII. But then among the Epodes there is nothing lyrical whatsoever; of itself, surely, a decisive fact, that to the odes, a higher class of poetry, he did not devote his mind at all till a later period.

And here it may be observed, that the word carmen, though specifically applied to lyric odes, as 2 E. 11, 59. Carmine tu gaudes: hic delectatur Iambis.—yet is applicable, as in the line above quoted, even to Iambie verse, that in the Epodes; and that in the Epistle to Augustus, v. 85, media inter carmina, means that the drama was interrupted. Let no conclusion therefore be drawn from the use of that word, independently of circumstances in the context to determine its character.

(2.) In the whole personal history of Horace, if one spot be marked with brighter joy than another, it must be the auspicious day of his migration into the Sabine Valley: that day formed an era in the happiness, in the moral as well as literary character of his life.

Henceforth, of course, we find him much less resident at Rome; and when occasionally there, annoyed with matters of business, invisa negotia, 1 E. xiv. 17, and, aliena, 2 S. vi, 33, on the Esquiline, to a much greater degree than before; or at any rate he likes so to represent it.

All that new delight of his in the rus and villula among the Sabines, in the scenery which adorned his estate, and in the shrewd and virtuous people into whose society it threw him, Horacc exquisitely describes in the vith Satire of the 2d book,

Hoc erat in votis, &c.

The more so from its contrast with the plagues and vexations of the great city; which he touches with such playful impatience, 2 S. vi. 20–23. Matutine pater. Rome sponsorem, &c., or still later in life, 2 E. II. 65, 6.

——— me Romæne poëmata censes Scribere posse, inter tot curas totque labores?

The whole passage to v. 75, is full of characteristic matter, not only as to those annoyances peculiar to Horace, but as to the general distraction and bustle in the streets of the metropolis.

And yet the good natured, kind hearted man, when he had only his house at Rome, with a small establishment, not very rich, but cheerful enough and content, delighted too with the humility of his condition, made a maximum of his comforts there; before he even dreamed apparently of any higher pleasures, better suited to his genius and taste, to be enjoyed in a different locality, and under very different circumstances.

The vith Satire of the 1st book. Non quia Mæcenas, &c., which describes his familiar day at Rome, is not less exquisite in its way, not less fraught with characteristic and entertaining narration, than the vith of the 2d book.

Will it be believed, except on ocular inspection, that Sanadon has committed the monstrous ὕστερον πρότερον of placing Hoc erat in votis before Non quia, Mæcenas, making the latter l. 2. Sat. 8. and the former l. 1. Sat. 7. in his Nouvelle distribution!

(3.) The six Odes 1, 11, 111, 1v, v, v1, of the third book of Horace, written in one common metre and wonderfully agreeing in a well sustained high didactic tone of moral, religious, patriotic sentiment, with that striking prelude to the whole, Odi profanum vulgus, &c., must impress on every sensible mind a deep feeling of solemn grandeur, varied by amenity, and pathos, and fine imagination.

If therefore any juxta-position of Odes preserved in all MSS, and editions, might command reverence from an editor of Horace; Odes like these six could not possibly suffer violation by being torn asunder. Sanadon disjoins these six Alcaic Odes from one another entirely, and has not left even any two of them in any connection or contiguity whatsoever!

(4.) On minute examination it has been ascertained, (vid. Treatise on Metres, No. XIX.), that in the third line of the Alcaic Stanza, are contained in the first and second books of Odes; while in the third and fourth books, as they commonly stand, not one instance is now to be seen of a verse so constructed in any of those ways.

Surely no argument can be more striking, than this plain fact is, to demonstrate, that Horace after publishing the 1st and 2d books of Odes, was by some cause or suggestion led to consult his ear with acuter delicacy than before; so that he vigilantly ever after guarded the third line, the key-stone of the Alcaic stanza, against modes of structure, which his improved sense of harmony condemned. Briefly to place the matter in the strongest light, no other hypothesis will account for the phenomena.

In this nice predicament, what part does Sanadon play? The truth is, that such exactness of metrical observation was unknown in his time: and we must acquit him on the charge of neglecting distinctions, not then brought into notice. But for all that excuse, the main ground of conviction remains the same. Sanadon, in his Nouvelle distribution, acts ignorantly on this behalf, but he acts grossly wrong also: for those Odes marked with the faulty structure he has scattered promiscuously over the later books in his arrangement and over the earlier, very much alike. No difference is known; no discrimination is preserved. Need one say more? And here with these proofs of his judgment disabled, let us take our leave of Mr. Sanadon for the present.

The strange and accumulated mistakes in which the personal history of Horace has been long involved, it would be an irksome task to discuss one by one in detail. The most important of them, however, shall be duly noticed in the course of these pages; and the whole mass will be put into a way for ultimate clearance. It may be too much to assert that the publication of the books of Horace in the original series of succession will at once set all other things right: yet there can be no doubt, but the wrong, unnatural, confused order, in which his works have hitherto been exhibited, has given rise to a great portion of all the errors existing at this day. And so long as the common arrangement shall continue to influence the train of thought by the order of perusal, it will be difficult if not impossible to overcome that proneness to false combinations, which the working on a distorted view must of necessity create.

But when once that disorder is banished and the natural succession restored, then the mind, instead of being misguided by the mechanical progress of the hand and the eye, will be by that progress directed and sustained all along in tracing the personal and poetical history of Horace. All the stages of his career will then develope themselves in beautiful transition: especially, the Parian Iambics of the Sabine Poet will precede as they ought, the Sapphic and Alcaic stanzas of the Lyrist of Tivoli.

Let us now proceed to exemplify by a few striking instances what absurdity is involved in the common order of the books of Horacc being taken for the true one, and what immediate congruity on the other hand arises from observing the arrangement of Bentley.

(1.) Horace in the 1vth Satire of his 1st book, vv. 39—55. shows a great anxiety to disclaim all pretence to the higher character of a poet: and well he might, without any mock modesty, disavow it. At that early period of his life and writings, he had nothing to ground the claim upon, except the limited publication of a few satires, and the farther promise of talent in that particular vein.

But hear what M. Dacier says, as reported by Dr. Francis.

"54. Ergo | Non satis est puris versum perscribere verbis.

M. Dacier thinks, that Horace would not have been so modest with regard to his Satires, and so fearful of prostituting the name of poet, if he had not secured his own right to it by his Odes."

Hear next M. Sanadon. (Vol. 11. p. 169.)

"39. Primum ego me illorum, dederim quibus esse poetis, Excerpam numero.

Horace s'étoit déja assuré par ses odes le nom de Poète, ainsi il ne risque rièn à se dégrader pour ses satires. Sa modestie n'en est que plus grande, et cette vertu ne sauroit être petite dans un poète, pourvû qu'elle soit bien sincere." No exposure can make blunders like these more ridiculous: they cannot be aggravated by any comment. Père Hardonin, on the contrary, (Vid. Klotzii Lectiones Venusinæ, pp. 15, 39, 40. 1770.) who amongst many paradoxes maintained this, Horatii Poetæ nihil superesse genuinum, præter Epistolas et Sermones, draws a very different conclusion out of the verses before us.

From this passage, Hardouin very ingeniously and justly concludes, Horatium se nullas odas scripsisse profiter: nothing in itself more true at that the But the good Father too hastily assumed, that the Odes if written by Horace at all, had been written as their collocation to him indicated, at some period prior to that of the Satires. Hardouin would have been disarmed of at least one argument, perhaps in his opinion a very strong one; if he had ever viewed the books of Horace in the order of their original publication.

(2.) If there be any truth in Bentley's calculations, the 2d book of these Satires was collectively published not later than the year B. c. 32. If there be any faith in the Fasti Hellenici, the restoration of the Roman Eagles from Parthia did not take place earlier than the year B. c. 20.

Horace $(2 \, \mathrm{S.} \, 1.10 - 15)$ when thus urged by his learned friend Trebatius, Aut si tantus amor scribendi te rapit, aude Cæsaris invicti res dicere, mu ta laborum Præmia laturus.

declines the task with much elegance and address, on the ground of inability to describe the scenes of heroic warfare.

—— cupidum, pater optime, vires
Deficiunt; neque enim quivis horrentia pilis
Agmina, nec fractâ pereuntes cuspide Gallos,
Aut labentis equo describat vulnera Parthi.

The Parthians and Gauls, from having been the principal objects of dread to the Roman armies, are the nations selected to furnish, each of them, a very tremendous image of battle; with a tacit reference perhaps to the exploits of Marius at a distant period and of Ventidius on a later occasion, B. c. 39.

What is the remark of Baxter on this passage?

"15. Bene labentis equo: nam Parthorum pugna fere erat equestris. Apposuit autem ista, quo gratificaretur Augusto, ob recepta signa Marco Crasso adempta."

Anachronism and confusion like this might be expected from Baxter. One may wonder that the cautious and accurate Gesner should interpose no correction of it. But neither is he found always faithful to his qualified declaration of agreement with Bentley.

Hoc certe confirmare possum, mc, dum recenseo singulas Eclogas, diligenter attendisse, si quid esset Bentleianis temporum rationibus adversum, nec deprehendisse quidquam, quod momentum aliquod ad eam evertendam haberet; licet quibusdam Eclogis non improbabili ratione forte tempus etiam aliud, recentius præsertim, possit adscribi.

The clearness of view which arises from placing the Satires before the Epodes, and the Epodes before the Odes, cannot be denied. The advantage to be derived from Bentley's arrangement in placing the 4th book of Odes after the 1st book of Epistles, may not perhaps be quite so evident. One example or two will serve to show the importance of that distribution.

There is an intellectual as well as a linear perspective. And some space for time and thought must be allowed to intervene: or in the case of great moral and political changes taking place, without the aid of that interval, very often all the probabilities of expectation will be shocked. Thus, if seven or eight years are considered to elapse betwixt the average date of the 3d book of Odes and the publication of the 4th; even in the omens of moral improvement displayed in the latter we shall see nothing extravagant, in those of political alteration we shall see the highest credibility.

In the vith Ode of the 3d book, Horace traces the vice and immorality which he there laments, to the predominance of luxury and corruption, which no Censorian regulations could control: and in the xxivth Ode, impressed with the very same feeling (vv. 35, 6.) he exclaims,

Quid leges sine moribus

But in the vth Ode of the 4th book (addressed to Augustus) he piously exults in the blessings of a new era; and by the very phrase (v. 22.) adopted there, he recalls in contrast that vicious state of social life which now seemed to be past or to be passing away.

Mos et lex maculosum edomuit nefas.

Then again, in the xvth Ode of the same book, with what energy does he hail the revival of the virtues under the reign of a reforming Prince!

Tua, Cæsar ætas—
——et ordinem
Rectum evaganti fræna licentiæ
Injecit, emovitque culpas,
Et veteres revocavit artes.

In the year B. C. 24, Augustus came home from the Cantabrian war: Horace, catching a happy allusion to the heroic wanderings of Hercules, congratulates the commonalty of Rome on the victorious return of their sovereign.

Herculis ritu modo dictus, O Plebs, Morte venalem petiisse laurum Cæsar, Hispanâ repetit penates Victor ab orâ. 3 C. xiv.

Here Sanadon (at times so acute and intelligent) condemns at once the opening line of this Ode; and betrays exactly what Dr. Parr would call the coxcomb, in the following remark.

O Plebs.] On ne peut disconvenir que ce vers n'est pas le meilleur de la piéce. Cette chute est assommante, et je ne pardonne point à nôtre Poète d'avoir si mal débuté.

The fact is, that Sanadon saw nothing here beyond the surface. Augustus, tribunus plebis, be it remembered, and plebi gratior quam optimatibus, had been very dangerously ill in Spain: ille rumor (of course) plebem maxime terruit. Klotz. p. 317. the commons were trembling for the loss of their protector: the nobility caught at the chance of regaining their old ascendancy in the state.

Or take it from the Argumentum of the Ode, as it stands in Gesner's edition. Bello Cantabrico maximus erat novorum tumultuum a partibus Optimatium metus, ob diuturnam Augusti Tarracone decumbentis valetudinem. Illo igitur jam domum reverso, publicas ferias Palatio universaque Plebi Horatius indicit.

Several conspiracies a formed against the life of that Prince are recounted by Suetonius in D. Oct. Cæs. Augusto, § xix. But the most affecting story of the kind is that related by Seneca, of Cinna's desperate design...non occidere, sed immolare: num sacrificantem placuerat adoriri. The recorded exclamation of Augustus carries a point with it, which renders all comment unnecessary. Ego sum nobilibus adolescentibus expositum caput, in quod mucrones acuant! Seneca de Clementia, 1. 9.

Turn now to the 4th book of Odes: imagine the lapse of a few eventful years, say from B.C. 24 to the year 15, when Augustus yet remained in Gaul; and then, in the absence of all alarm, mark the lofty tone of pride and security, and the oblivion of all political distinctions.

ii. 50. Non semel dicemus, Io triumphe! | Civitas omnis.

v. 1—8. Divis orte bonis, optime Romulæ
Custos gentis, abes jam nimium diu:
Maturum reditum pollicitus Patrum
Sancto concilio, redi.
Lucem redde tuæ, dux bone, patriæ:
Instar veris enim vultus ubi tuus

³ For "the conspiracy and death of Murena," &c., &c., vide Fast. Hellen-B.c. 22.

Adfulsit populo; gratior it dies, Et soles melius nitent.

xiv. 1—5. Quæ cura Patrum, quæve Quiritium,
Plenis honorum muneribus tuas,
Auguste, virtutes in ævum
Per titulos memoresque fastos
Æternet? O quå Sol &c.

PART II.

LOCALITIES.

To understand the writings of Horace with complete satisfaction in those parts which at all involve his personal history, the knowledge of his actual residences will be found similarly useful, if not equally necessary, as the correct distribution of his books in their original order. His localities, indeed, when rightly ascertained, are so directly connected with the Chronology and just arrangement of his works; that even Bentley's masterly calculation may derive support from a careful development of the scenes of his residence, hitherto partially or erroneously stated.

For the sake of clearness in what follows, though it be in part anticipating, let the principal places in which I believe Horace to have resided after his return from Philippi, be here at once laid before the reader.

At an early period, then, he had beyond all dispute a house in Rome, (on the higher ground of that city, Fuge quo descendere gestis. 1 E. xx, 5.) which during his life time he appears to have kept: by the liberality of Mæcenas not long after, he was possessed of a Rus and villula in the Sabine valley: and charmed with the scenery of Tibur, which on his way from Rome into the Sabine country he often halted to admire, he finally became master of a cottage with a garden to it in the precincts of Tibur or as it is now called Tivoli.

It was on this latter spot, if I may be allowed to anticipate, that he dedicated the pine-tree to Diana, (3 C. XXII. Montium custos...) in an ode remarkable also for its contiguity in position to that beautiful ode to Phidyle, Cwlo supinas... which will be found to bear such decisive evidence to the very same locality. May we not also with some probability suppose, that of the two passages in which a fondness for building is imputed to Horace, the first, 2 S. 111, 308. Ædificas, &c., must be referred to the new erection or repairs required for his comfort in the Sabine valley; while the second, 1 E. 1, 100. Diruit, ædificat, &c., written at a latter period, naturally carries our thoughts to improvements at Tivoli, in which he might then be engaged.

And here at setting out, let me avow that I feel no scruple in imputing the FIRST great source of confusion and error to that unlucky expression in the Life attributed to Suetonius. "Vixit plurimum in secessu RURIS sui Sabini aut Tiburtini: domusque ejus ostenditur circa Tiburni luculum." And the phrase itself, Sabini aut Tiburtini, had its origin, there can be no doubt, in the Iambic Scazons of Catullus Ad Fundum. XI.

O Funde noster, seu Sabine, seu Tiburs, Nam te esse Tiburten autumant, quibus non est Cordi Catullum lædere; at quibus cordi est, Quovis Sabinum pignore esse contendunt.

The author, whoever he was, of that Life, apparently quite ignorant of the Sabine valley, never seems to have supposed, that Horace had any rural residence except at Tivoli, or any property and estate except in that place or just across the Sabine border.

Mr. Gifford, indeed, in his preface to Persius, considers the lives under the name of Suetonius as compilations from different Scholia of unequal value. But allowing Suctonius himself to have been the author, yet even he lived and wrote a full century after the death of Horace. And to a spot in Horace's own time evidently so little known and frequented as the vale of Digentia, (now called Licenza,) unless Suetonius had gone from curiosity and on purpose, it was very improbable in the common course of things that he should ever pay a visit at all; situated as that spot was in the mountains, fifteen miles above Tivoli, and four miles out of the line of the Via Valeria. In the course too of a hundred years or more, the inhabitants of a place circumstanced like Tivoli, might very easily lose all account of the Poet's estate and habitation lying so far out of their way; of his residence on their own spot the tradition, if founded in truth, was little likely for a very long time to be forgotten. The words therefore, domusque ejus ostenditur circa Tiburni luculum, whenever written, show expressly that the people of Tivoli continued to claim the honour of having had Horace as a sojourner, and to point out with pride the very house in which he lived. It is true, that the site of the Poet's dwelling cannot now be determined with anything more than probable conjecture: but what has that difficulty at this day to do with the distinct tradition of the second or third century? Ages upon ages of change and revolution since then have made sad havock with the palaces as with the cottages of Tivoli.

The SECOND great source of dispute and difficulty is of a more recent date and rises in a contrary direction to the former. The Life imputed to Suetonius seemed to fix the RUS with the domus of Horace at Tivoli or in its immediate neighbourhood. When therefore the Avvocato D. Domenico de Sanctis ^a first, and after him the Abbe Capmartin de Chaupy ^b, had succeeded in demonstrating once for all that the RUS and the villa lay in the Sabine vale of Licenza; our obligation to the rival discoverers would have been complete, and all would have ended delightfully well, if they had been content to stop there. But led astray by their favourite conceit of unicity, Satis beatus unicis Sabinis. 2 C. xvIII. 14.

(which in the Poet's meaning carried only unicity of Rus or Estate,) they proceeded to demolish every vestige of property, or of habitation involving property, any where else; of course therefore house and garden at Tivoli entirely disappear.

But without such a residence granted to the Poet, there will soon be occasion to show, that we shall be constantly at fault in the localities of his poetry; from the 1st Ode of the 1st book, ——Me gelidum nemus, Nympharumque leves cum Satyris chori, Secernunt populo.

to the 111d Ode of the 4th,

Sed quæ Tibur aquæ fertile præfluunt, Et spissæ nemorum comæ, Fingent Æolio carmine nobilem.

In the meanwhile, as it is far more gratifying to the ingenuous enquirer, to acknowledge himself anticipated, than to wrangle for prior title or to assert originality, in ascertaining the truth; I bring forward with pride a third authority

^a Dissertazione della Villa di Orazio Flacco, in Ravenna, 1784, is perhaps the latest edition. It first appeared at Rome in 1761, and a second time in 1768.

b Decouverte de la Maison de Campagne d' Horace, 3 Vol. à Rome 1767, 1769.

on this Tivoline question, decisively in agreement with every previous judgment and notion of my own. The learned Signori Abbati Cabral, e del Ré à, in their Ricerche delle Ville, &c. della Città e del Territorio di Tivoli. Roma, 1779. Cap. iii. par. 1. § 5. and in their Nuove Ricerche, pag. 94. maintain the existence there of a Villa of Horace, but consisting only in un tenue rural soggiorno in un Casino entro un Orto.

A modest rural abode, a Cottage within a garden, there, is precisely, after his house at Rome and his Villa in the Sabine country, the one place needful to complete the Poet's list of accommodations; equally needful, let me add, to render his writings, especially the Odes, intelligible and consistent to an inquisitive reader.

My own mind unquestionably was first set a thinking on the subject of his Tivoline residence by that noble emendation of Nicholas Hardinge; which comes down to us recommended by Markland, approved by Bentley, and applauded by Parr.

——Eripe te moræ;
UT semper-udum Tibur et Æsulæ
Declive contempleris arvum et Telegoni juga parricidæ. 3 C. XXIX. 5-8.

That emendation itself I first saw in Markland's Explicationes reterum aliquot auctorum (p. 258—267) subjoined to his edition of the Supplices Mulieres: but having since read the suggested change in a Letter from Nicholas Hardinge to a friend of his then making the tour of Italy, I prefer to record it here in the very words of that Vir capitalis ingenii, as he is justly styled by Markland in the passage referred to.

"Ne semper udum, &c., I suspect to be a false reading in all the Editions and MSS."

a Vid. Domenico de Sanctis. u. s. p. 33, and in Risposta all' Appendice dei Signori Abb. Cabral, e del Ré, p. 3.

"For as Horace invites Mæcenas from Rome to his Tibur, it seems inconceivable that he should press him to make haste, lest he should be always taking a view of Tibur. How much properer would it have been to recommend his departure from Rome that he might enjoy the scenes of Tibur! I therefore change NE to UT. N. H."

To a great variety of disquisitions, more or less intelligent and entertaining on this text and on the topics naturally connected with it, the references below given a will direct the reader; if any of the books happen to be within his reach. But here it may be as well to add, however, that the combination of semper with udum, so essential to the establishment of the new reading, is happily defended not only in general by his own expression, (1. E. xvIII, 98,) Nec te semper-inops agitet vexetque cupido; but by the specific authority of Ovid where he describes his natalia rura.—Fasti 1y, 686.

Parva sed assiduis uvida semper aquis.

Having thus secured the compliment due to an Etonian and King's man for starting the question so vitally important to the Lyric bard of Tivoli, I shall not however proceed on credit taken for his emendation being true: I shall rather appeal for corroboration of its truth to the internal evidence which the 1st, 2d, and 3d books of Odes, the 1st book of Epistles, and the 4th book of Odes in that order, all contribute to yield, not only of Horace's often visiting Tivoli, but of his residing in that quiet town very much and often during a great part of his latter days.

——— me gelidum nemus,
 Nympharumque leves cum Satyris chori
 Secernunt populo.
 1 C. I. 30—32.

² Nichols's Illustrations of the Literary History of the xviiith century, Vol. i. p. 651, pp. 720—736.—Poems, Latin, Greek and English by N. Hardinge, pp. 222—236.—Classical Journal. No. xxxii. pp. 363—367. J. T.—Gentleman's Magazine, April, 1818. pp. 291, 2. J. T.

- II. Me nec tam patiens Lacedæmon, Nec tam Larissæ percussit campus opimæ, Quam domus Albuneæ resonantis, Et præceps Auio, ac Tiburni lucus, et uda Mobilibus pomaria rivis. 1 C. VII. 10—14.
- III. Tibur Argeo positum colono Sit meæ sedes utinam senectæ; Sit modus lasso maris et viarum Militæque. 2 C. v1. 5.—8.
- Iv. Vester, Camænæ, vester in arduos Tollor Sabinos; seu mihi frigidum Præneste, seu Tibur supinum, Seu liquidæ placuere Baiæ. 3 C. Iv. 21—24.
- v. Parvum parva decent: mihi jam non regia Roma, Sed vacuum Tibur placet; aut imbelle Tarentum. 1 E. vii. 44, 5.
- v1. Romæ Tibur amem ventosus, Tibure Romam.

 1 E. v111. 12.

(just as at an earlier period of life, he accused himself of oscillating betwixt his Rus and Rome.

Romæ rus optas, absentem rusticus urbem Tollis ad astra levis. 2 S. VII. 28, 9.)

viii. Sed quæ Tibur aquæ fertile præfluunt, Et spissæ nemorum comæ,

Et spissæ nemorum comæ, Fingent Æolio carmine nobilem. 4 C. 111. 10—12.

Carmina fingo. 4 C. 11. 27-32.

Surely, an accumulation of proofs like these, leaves no ground for any reasonable doubt. The woods and the waters, the cool groves of Tivoli, fashioned and inspired the soul of the Poet; while the amenity of its scenes with the retired quietness of the town, attached his heart to the place. He had a hortus there and a domus within it (4 C. xi. 2. 6.), and his mundæ cænæ, parvo sub lare (3 C. XXIX. 14—16.), were calculated to smooth the brow of the statesman Mæcenas. And to his ramblings, when first a resident at Tivoli, with such delight amid that romantic scenery—we are clearly indebted for Horace's assuming a poetical character entirely new, in the translation to the Romanæ fidicen lyræ (4 C. 111. 23.) from the writer of Satires and Epodes only. In one word, then, on his own express authority, on that spot, and at that time, his lyric writings had their actual commencement.

(— per lucos, amenæ Quos et aquæ subeunt et auræ. 3 C. iv. 7, 8.

Two out of the eight passages, here adduced, on which I rely for the establishment of Horace as a sojourner at Tivoli, may in that view justify a more particular notice.

His invitation (No. 111.) to Septimius has been well illustrated by the late Mr. George Hardinge. (Nichols. Literary History. u. s. p. 732.)

"Horace begins by telling him that he knows his friend would accompany him to the remotest and wildest part of the world:

Septimi, Gades aditure mecum, et

Cantabrum indoctum juga ferre nostra, et

Barbaras Syrtes, ubi Maura semper

Æstuat unda.

"Of course he should be equally desirous to accompany his friend: but he means to decline it, and he is to give the reason for it, which is, that he wishes for no Tarentum, unless driven from Tibur. The Ode in any other sense would be unintelligible, and the wish for Tibur absurd, especially with a reference to his old age, which had not then arrived," &c. &c.

That Alcaic Stanza (No. IV.) forms quite a locus classicus in the personal history of Horace.

Vester Camonæ, vester in arduos Tollor Sabinos; seu mihi frigidum Præneste, seu Tibur supinum, Seu liquidæ placuere Baiæ.

For such were his FOUR peculiar places out of Rome, of usual residence or occasional resort. The first was his Sabine villa and estate in the vale of Licenza; after Chaupy and Domenico de Sanctis, described and verified (as it should have been sooner told) by Mr. Bradstreet, in the "Sabine Farm," 1810. The second spot refreshed him by its coolness in the dog days, sometimes: in one summer, it bequeathed to our instruction that delightful Epistle (1 E. 11.), Trojani belli scriptorem, maxime Lolli, &c.

To the fourth, his resort on the Campanian shore, he betook himself, often perhaps, for its fine mild air in winter.

> Quod si bruma nives Albanis illinet agris, Ad mare descendet vates tuus, et sibi parcet. 1 E. v11. 10, 11.

The third scene, long and early admired, from being frequently visited, became at last one of his two favourite and regular places of residence out of Rome. For there is not the shadow of evidence, to rank on the same level with Tivoli as an habitation, either Praneste, the mere astiva delicia of our Poet, or Baia resorted to for its warm climate and its baths; least of all the distant Tarentum, deeply beloved, much talked of, but very seldom visited.

Tarentum, indeed, if he were to change from Tivoli, we have just seen he would prefer to all places for his residence. And yet, of any actual visit to that spot, though so well known, with its peculiar charm; ver ubi longum tepidasque præbet | Jupiter brumas. 2 C. vi. 17, 18. he has bequeathed no memorandum whatever. None of his writings exhibit the slightest indications of having been written there; nor any where on the coast in winter does he seem to have used his pen at all: Contractusque leget, are his own words, 1 E. v11. 12, when meditating to go down to the sea, most probably to Baiæ.

Let me not be considered as dwelling too long on this investigation of the Poet's principal localities. Or should it be asked, in what way those points when determined, can give aid towards the illustration of Horace, the following examples with the deductions arising out of them may serve at present for a reply.

(1.) For the entire separation of Horace's residence in the Sabine valley, not only from his house at Rome, but from his humble mansion at Tivoli, we are very much indebted to the information conveyed in his xivth Epistle.

As the picture of country life in all its simplicity and innocence which the 2d Epode (Beatus ille, &c.) presents, was in its general character drawn from Horace's personal knowledge and observation in the vale of Licenza; so we may with the greater zest enjoy the moral repose in those of his writings which bear the stamp of that valley, as the subject at once and the scene of composition.

Now that Epistle (the xivth) to his Villicus, besides much that it tells us not otherwise known of Horace in Rure suo and of his employments there, most fortunately tells us also, from what pests or pleasures that abode of Sabine virtue was free.

vv. 21—26.

Incutiunt Urbis desiderium, video; et quod Angulus iste feret piper et tus ocius uvă;
Nec vicina subest vinum præbere taberna
Quæ possit tibi; nec meretrix tibicina, cujus
Ad strepitum sallas terræ gravis, &c.

In consequence of this discovery, for in its application I believe it so to be, we are enabled directly to mark the scene of several of his writings as limited either to Rome or to

Tivoli; and thus we distinguish, very often with little difficulty, what the great city allowed him to write from what the vacuum Tibur suggested or inspired.

Look at the light and elegant Ode to Phyllis. 4 C. x1.

vv. 2, 3. Est in horto, | Phylli, nectendis apium coronis, &c.

But he had no hortus at Rome; as the same Epistle testifies,

vv. 41, 2.

Lignorum et pecoris tibi calo argutus et horti:

therefore this Ode was not written in that city.

Horace goes on thus:

vv. 34, 5. -- condisce modos, amandà | Voce quos reddas.

But here is the meretrix tibicina, or a lady hardly of purer quality: therefore it was not written in the valley.

Of course Tivoli was the scene of this gay celebration of Mæcenas's birth-day.

(2.) Let us proceed to place in the true light that beautiful Ode with its rational piety, Calo supinas, &c. 3 C. XXIII. The Rustica Phidyle, there addressed, is considered as having been haud dubie Villica in fundo Horatii Sabino; and even the grave and cautious Gesner says, Lepida certe Dacerii et Sanadoni suspicio, Horatium astute dissimulată Epicurei personă sic voluisse impedire, ne in villă suă nimii sumtus fierent in sacrificia.

Now it certainly does appear from Cato De re rusticâ, in sacrificia, that the Villica in his time was bound to offer no sacrifice without order from her master or mistress. Scito dominum, he adds, pro totâ familiâ rem divinam facere; and Columella, who after the lapse of two centuries, has to lament the progress of refinement as deteriorating the character of the rural domini, (Lib. XII. Præfat. pp. 551,2. Ed. Schneider,) inserts amongst the qualifications of a good Villica, that she be a superstitionibus remotissima.

All this might so far very well agree with the idea of Horace's astuteness, in checking the religious expensiveness of such a servant at the Sabine farm; either if any vestige of his having had a Villica on that small establishment were extant in his writings, which it is not, but rather the contrary; or if we found that Horace himself appeared to neglect the proper sacrifices which rustic devotion required: on this latter point we may rather presume that his feelings and his practice went in unaffected conformity with those of the good people, amongst whom, so delighted with their simplicity and probity, he was accustomed to dwell: and in confirmation of that view, the following references, as obliquely or directly bearing on the question before us, may be consulted with advantage.

Ep. 11. 59. 1 C. IV. 11, 12. 3 C. XIII. 3. XVIII. 5. XXII. 7.

But lastly, what shall we say, if after all neither the scene nor the subject of that ode could belong to the vale of Lucretilis?

Now if the reader will but look to v. 5, he will discern among the blessings which Phidyle might expect:

Nec pestilentem sentiet Africum Fæcunda vitis.

Let him turn next to the Epistle (XIV.) ad Villicum suum, (his bailiff,) and there he will read at v. 23,

Angulus iste feret piper et tus ocius uvâ.

The Sabine valley then produced no grapes at that time. And as to the Sirocco, elsewhere called the plumbeus Auster of Autumn (2 S. vi. 16—19.), so far from being annoyed with it there, Horace fled thither in montes et in arcem ex urbe on purpose to avoid it: very often for two months together apparently, or more: Sextilem totum (1 E. vii. 2.) Septembribus horis (xvi. 16.). He could however endure and even enjoy the city, (this we find from his epistle to Torquatus, 1 Ep. v.,) even so late as Julius Cæsar's birth-day, the 10th of July.

In one word, then, what is the plain inference from all this? Phidyle (whether a real person or in part imaginary) must be considered as a yeoman's wife in the neighbourhood of Tivoli. Such a person we may well suppose to have been the pudica mulier (Ep. 11. 39.) elsewhere described; and, innocence of character being therefore presumed, we have only to take immunis at the beginning of that fine stanza, in its natural sense of costless, with little or no cost; which Casaubon (Persian. Imit. Horat. ad S. 11. 75.) and Bentley (in loc.) agree in maintaining against the vulgar interpretation of innocent, as unauthorized as it is unnecessary.

Immunis aram mica,

But we have not yet done with this Odc. From Tivoli or the high grounds near it, Phidyle might probably see Algidum or Alba (vv. 9—11). In the Sabine valley, the Villica of Horace (if such a person there was) most assuredly could see nothing of the kind; and was far too remote to hear anything of places like those. There would have been a violation of all nature and probability in addressing such an Ode, even nomine tenus, to a person so circumstanced.

Then too, (v. 16,) from whence was the myrtle to come? from the same genial soil which yielded the rose, the iry, the apium, and the rine; from the mite solum Tiburis (1 C. XVIII. 2.), to be sure.

(3.) On similar internal evidence to that contained in the two Odes, (already considered,) 4 C. XI, and 3 C. XXIII. I should date in Tivoli the invitation to Quinctius Hirpinus, 2 C. XI.

Quid bellicosus Cantaber, &c. Examine if you please the following particulars:

21, 22. Quis devium scortum eliciet domo Lyden? eburnâ dic age cum lyrâ, &c. 18—20. — Quis puer ocius

Restinguet ardentis Falerni

Pocula prætereunte lymphå ?

 Cur non sub altâ vel platano vel hâc Pinu jacentes sic temere, &c.

and let the hâc pinu be especially remarked, for the same scene, apparently, as that in the beautiful stanza, 2 C. 111. 9—12. Quâ pinus, &c., rivo.

On the authority of Mr. Hobhouse (in his note 71 to Canto IV. of Childe Harold) and from his own lively report we learn, that the Pine is now as it was in the days of Virgil, a garden tree [pinus in bortis. Buc. VII. 65.]; and that there is not" at present, "a Pine in the whole valley" of Licenza. I venture to add, that not one verse of Horace decisively records a single Pine in that valley; and it is barely possible, that in the course of the few years which elapsed betwixt the 2d book of Satires and the 2d or 3d book of Odes, any Pine tree of Horace's own planting there should have been imminens villæ (3 C. XXII. 5.) or as in the Ode before us, like Virgil's plane tree, (Geo. IV. 146.) ministrans potantibus umbras.

As for Quinctins Hirpinus in particular, it is quite clear, that he had never visited (what friend of Horace, does it appear, ever did visit?) the vale of Licenza: or we should not have now possessed that Epistle (the xvith) with the Poet's description of his delight (hæ latebræ dulces) in the Sabine valley, and of the romantic beauty (amænæ) which adorned it. He did not rest his attachment to that sequestered spot, on the ground of a partiality merely resulting from habitual residence, "cum locis etiam ipsis montuosis delectemur et sylvestribus, (these are Cicero's words,) in quibus diutius commorati sumus." Lælius. s. 19. For such scenery of the picturesque kind he avows at once his taste and admiration, in a way that we should hardly expect, writing thus to his Villicus, 1 E. xiv. 19, 20. on the contrast of their respective likings, quæ deserta et inhospita tesqua

Credis, amæna vocat, mecum qui sentit

(4.) Horace had a way of his own, an oblique way of mentioning sources of anxiety or objects of ambitious desire in other men, from which he considered himself fortunately free.

Thus in a passage of the 1st Epode, to Mæcenas, Ibis Liburnis inter alta navium, Sc. in which he so tenderly begs as his companion to share the dangers of the ensuing war (called Actian from its issue); he declares his heart to be influenced by honest affection alone, by no speculation of splendid reward.

vv. 23—30. Libenter hoc et omne militabitur
Bellum in tuæ spem gratiæ;
Non ut juvencis illigata pluribus
Aratra nitantur meis,
Pecusve Calabris ante sidus fervidum
Lucana mutet pascua;
Nec ut superni villa candens Tusculi
Circæa tangat menia.

It will hardly be believed, that instead of seeing in these lines a disavowal of any wish for wealth and splendor, some critics have found in the two last the fancied enlargement of a magnificent villa at Tusculum which Horace already possessed there! Chaupy, Vol. 11. pp. 262, 3. with great acuteness sets this matter in its true light.

Let us take another instance.

Horace in a moody and wayward humour, real or affected, 1 E. vIII. Celso gaudere, &c. instructs the Muse thus to answer if Celsus Albinovanus should inquire about him:

—— die, multa et pulchra minantem, Vivere nec recte nec suaviter; haud quia grando Contuderit vites, oleamve momorderit æstus, Nec quia longinquis armentum ægrotet in agris; Sed quia mente minus validus, &c. &c. That is, denying olive yards and vineyards to be the cause of his fretfulness, he in fact disclaims the ownership of either: and he disclaims also any possession of what even in the privileged hour of dedication he had declined to ask from Apollo Palatinus

Non æstuosæ grata Calabriæ Armenta. 1 C. xxxi. 5, 6.

The vale of Licenza, let it be remarked, appears at that time to have grown neither vines nor olives. Even now, though the difference of culture, as Mr. Bradstreet assures us (pp. 25, 27.) has introduced a great number of olives, &c. the grapes do not succeed so kindly, as the hardier fruit trees, and still produce but a rough kind of wine.

After this indirect determination of the extent of Horace's wealth, it may not be amiss to render the statement in some measure complete by noticing the lines, ambiguous certainly, which commence the Epistle (xvI) to Quinctius Hirpinus.

Ne perconteris, fundus meus, optime Quinti, Arvo pascat herum, an baccis opulentet oliva, Pomisne, an pratis, an amictà vitibus ulmo; Scribetur tibi forma loquaciter et situs agri. Continui montes; nisi dissocientur opacă Valle: sed ut veniens dextrum latus aspiciat Sol, Lævum decedens curru fugiente vaporet. Temperiem laudes: quid, si rubicunda benigne Corna vepres et pruna ferunt? si quercus et ilcx Multà fruge pecus, multà dominum juvat umbră? Dicas adductum propius frondere Tarentum.

From this passage, M. Chaupy, (Vol. 1. p. 335,) in defiance of Sanadon and the common interpreters, avowedly so, maintains that Horace's estate was richly productive of olives, grapes, and other fine fruits also. Now, in good truth, if from these lines (liable enough, perhaps, if taken alone, to be misunderstood) we had to gain our only intelligence on the subject, the continui montes with the opacă valle in that high elevation might indeed be pleaded against the probable culture of the vine: and still it could not palpably be made out, that the cornfield, the meadow, and the wood with its wild fruits, really constituted the whole income of our Poet's estate. But from the definite object on which the great pains were taken, the improvement and extension of his arable land,

1 E. xiv. 3, 4. Certemus, spinas animone ego fortius, an tu Evellas agro: &c.

---- 39. Rident vicini glebas et saxa moventem.

And here may we not remark, that the ilev of 1 E. xvi. 9. and the borem disjunctum of 1 E. xiv. 27, 8, both clearly in the Sabine valley, and answering to the fessis romere tauris and ilicem of the ode to Bandusia, 3 C. xiii. 11, 14. incidentally corroborate the truth of the locality assigned in these pages to that fountain?

From a detail of facts like these, we may well conclude, that the Poet's answer to Quintius might have briefly stood thus.

Arvo pascit herum.

For though it is true, that the meadow would on all accounts possess its natural value, 29, 30. Addit opus pigro rivus, si decidit imber, Multa mole docendus aprico parcere prato.

unquestionably, however, the ground in tillage formed the most profitable source of revenue and nearly the whole of it.

3 C. XVI. 29-32. Puræ rivus aquæ, silvaque jugerum Paucorum, et seget is certa fides meæ, Fulgenten imperio fertilis Africæ Fallit sørte beatior. Let thus much then suffice to show the clear and indisputable connexion betwixt the localities of Horace and the right understanding of many other most important points in his writings or in his character.

PART III.

LIFE AND CHARACTER.

A SKETCH of the principal facts and circumstances in the early life of Horace, especially where that tends to illustrate the formation of his character as afterwards seen in his writings, shall next be attempted.

The father of Horace, after having gained his freedom in the family from which that distinguished name was derived to his son, was doubtless for many years afterwards in the laborious and profitable office (1 S. vi. 36.) of a Coactor at sales by auction; and had gathered together a considerable property by success in that employment.

At this period of the Roman Commonwealth, the condition of the Libertini was fast rising to that importance on account of its wealth, which afterwards excited so much indignation in the Ingenui, whose poverty was embittered by their pride: an indignation, be it observed, neither merited nor reasonable. Whoever now reads in Tully (Offices. L. r. C. 42.) Jam de artificiis et quæstibus qui liberales habendi, qui sordidi sint, &c., will in a moment discern, that so many lucrative and not necessarily disgraceful employments, given up entirely to men of servile origin, must have lowered and lessened the class of old citizens without raising a class of new to occupy their rank and their influence in the state: the vacuum in fact was very imperfectly and very unhappily filled up.

The topic here started is full of matter for curious and interesting investigation: whether on the one hand we suppose that several ingenious arts, being already introduced into Rome in the persons of slaves, would only very slowly be admitted as objects of liberal pursuit; or reflect, on the other hand, that the system of clientela, however well it might work in an earlier stage of the commonwealth, at a later period could only tend to keep the clientes too proud to gain what we should call an honest and reputable livelihood, so long as they were able barely to live on the allowance made by the patroni. Hence the pride of caste was maintained, but at the cost of all manly independence: and in the client whom Juvenal describes thus subsisting as the poor gentleman of his day, we see the miscrable wreck of Roman freedom, and of all the higher virtues by which it was once adorned.

Sat. I. 117—120. Sed cum summus honor finito computet anno,

Sportula quid referat, quantum rationibus addat,

Quid facient comites, quibus hinc toga, calceus hinc est,

Et panis fumusque domi?

Among the Libertini upon record it might be difficult to point out any one person entitled to a higher degree of respect than Horace the elder. And in the year B. c. 66, (when the Mithridatic war was committed to Pompey by the Manilian law,) we may probably enough fix that worthy man's marriage and establishment in the neighbourhood of Venusia upon the Lar et Fundus (2 E. 11. 52.), in which he had invested the whole of his honest acquisitions.

On that estate then, not far from the town of Venusia, apparently very near to the river Aufidus,

4 C. IX. 2. Longe sonantem natus ad Aufidum, VI¹⁰ Idus Decembres. Dec. 8. B. c. 65, the great Roman Poet, Quintus Horatius Flaccus, was born; who more than once in his writings, while he distinctly marks the place of his birth, records it as inauspicious for any chance of poetic fame to the native of a spot so rude and obscure.

Of course, potens here is interpreted of Horace in that higher sense which the words, Virtus et favor et lingua potentium | Vatum. 4. C. VIII. 26, 7. so aptly convey, and which sense of potency Horace in fact claims to himself in the very next ode, vv. 30, 1, when he thus addresses Lollius;—non ego te meis | Chartis inornatum silebo, &c.

4 C. 1x. 1—4. Ne forte credas interitura, quæ

Longe sonantem natus ad Aufidum

Non ante vulgatas per artes

Verba loquor socianda chordis.

We find him, however, in a passage to which the emendation Argivæ (vid. R. B. in loc.) gives the required distinction and contrast, combine even with an epithet of his local origin, a designation of proud eminence as the lyric poet of Rome.

4 C. vi. 25. Doctor Argivæ fidicen Thaliæ
Phæbe, qui Xantho lavis omne crines,
Dauniæ defende decus Camænæ,
Levis Agyieu.

In B. c. 63. (the year famous for the Consulship of Tully and the Plot of Catiline) there came to Rome where he taught, "majore famâ quam emolumento!" a very celebrated Schoolmaster; Orbilius Pupillus Beneventanus, better known as the Plagosus Orbilius (2 E. 1. 70, 1.) under whose chastising hand Horace, on being carried from his native place to that city, was destined first to smart and to learn.

No idea is here entertained of hitting the exact year for that extraordinary incident which marked the childhood of Horace: but some aid may be given to memory, if B. c. 60. be assumed for it, the year of the first triumvirate, that betwixt Pompey, Crassus, and Cæsar.

"In sooth," almost from his cradle, young Horace "was no vulgar boy;" if we may credit his own story, with the interpretation of it by the neighbours attached to circumstances of so surprising and delightful a nature.

In the spring therefore, B. c. 60. (in the spring, for it was nová fronde) when Horace was a few months beyond his fourth year complete, that danger and deliverance befel him in his adventurous wanderings, which no pen should describe but his own.

3 C. Iv. 9—20. Me fabulosæ Volture in Appulo, Altricis extra limen Apuliæ,
Ludo fatigatumque somno,
Fronde novå puerum palumbes
Texere: mirum quod foret omnibus,
Quicumque celsæ nidum Acherontiæ,
Saltusque Bantinos, et arvum
Pingue tenent humilis Ferenti;
Ut tuto ab atris corpore viperis
Dormirem et ursis; ut premerer sacrå
Lauroque, collatâque myrto,
Non sine Dîs animosus infans.

How beautifully after this follows, how triumphantly indeed!

Vester, Camœnæ, vester in arduos Tollor Sabinos; &c. &c.

An accident, which at a much later period of life befel him in agro Sabino, may yet without impropriety be noticed here; inasmuch as he gratefully attributes his protection from that danger also to the favour of divine agency. The event alluded to produced at the time an ode, itself no mean specimen of the triumph of poetry, (2 C. x111.) if we trace the progress of fine reflection and splendid imagery from its opening,

Ille et nefasto te posuit die,

to its close

Nec curat Orion leones, Aut timidos agitare lyncasThe impression on his mind was altogether deep and awful. Accordingly, in that affectionate address to his patron, Cur me querelis, &c. (2 C. xvII), with Mæcenas's recovery from illness and the loud joy on his reappearance in public, is associated his own happy rescue as deserving of similar remark,

----- cum populus frequens Lætum theatris ter crepuit sonum.

Me truncus illapsus cerebro Sustulerat, nisi Faunus ictum Dextrâ levasset, Mercurialium Custos virorum.

And elswhere in connection with his escape from the perils of battle and of shipwreek, when addressing the Muses, he imputes that preservation also to the same kindly influence.

3 C. iv. 25, 27. Vestris amicum fontibus et choris Devota non extinxit arbor.

Finally, in an ode of invitation to Mæcenas, (worthy to be classed with those other two, 1 C. xx. Vile potabis, &c., and 3 C. xxix. Tyrrhena regum, &c.,) we find the Poet, in pursuance of a solemn vow to Bacchus, (2 E. 11.78. Rite cliens Bacchi somno gaudentis et umbrâ.,) celebrating on the Calends of March the anniversary of his deliverance.

It may be a more difficult attempt to assign the probable year, in which the elder Horace, dissatisfied with the country school of Flavius, determined to remove with his son to Rome, for the benefit of the highest instruction which could there be obtained. That son, on the retrospect of this interesting period, when he asserts his own exemption as well from low profligacy as from the sordes of avarice; gives this account of whatever was innocent or amiable in the whole of his character.

1 S. v1. 71—76. Causa fuit pater his: qui macro pauper agello
Noluit in Flavi ludum me mittere; magni
Quo pueri magnis e centurionibus orti,
Lævo suspensi loculos tabulamque lacerto,
Ibant octonis referentes Idibus æra:
Sed puerum est ausus Romam portare, &c.

Horace at the time of their migration, I think, could hardly be less than twelve years old. That age will agree well enough with the term, mihi parvo, which chronicles the stripes of Orbilius (2 E. 1. 70.): and an earlier date, I fear, will hardly allow sufficient age for many points of observation on life and manners, picked up by the boy Horace before quitting the neighbourhood of Venusia. I speak advisedly, when I say, that there appears no proof or vestige of his ever having lived in that country again: a hasty visit, perhaps, in some year soon after the battle of Philippi, to settle old accounts, and to see once more the friends of his youth, seems the only feasible supposition which his own history of his life and writings will possibly admit.

On this presumption, too, we gain the opportunity for Horace to have witnessed the manly constancy of Ofellus under his adverse fortune,

2 S. 11. 114. ——— videas metato in agello

Cum pecore et gnatis fortem mercede colonum,

Non ego, narrantem.

and to have derived from Ofellus's conversation at that time the materials of his admirable satire, Quæ virtus et quanta, boni, sit vivere parvo, &c. (2 S. 11).

In his boyhood it appears that he had known that paragon of an honest man,

 S. 11. 112. Quo magis his credas; puer hunc ego parvus Ofellum Integris opibus novi non latius usum, Quam nunc accisis, &c.—to v. 136.

Let us now see what other remarks had occurred to his mind, before he left the banks of the Aufidus, or by what stories he had been instructed: the following instances are not void of interest.

- 2 S. 111. 168, 9. Servius Oppidius Canus? duo prædia, dives Antiquo censu, gnatis divîsse duobus, &c.
- Ep. 11. 41, 2. Sabina qualis, aut perusta solibus Pernicis uxor Appuli.
- 3 C. vi. 37 44. Sed rusticorum mascula militum
 Proles, Sabellis docta ligonibus
 Versare glebas, et severæ
 Matris ad arbitrium recisos
 Portare fustes; sol ubi montium
 Mutaret umbras, et juga demeret
 Bobus fatigatis, amicum
 Tempus agens abeunte curru.
- 1 E. vii. I4, 15. Non, quo more pyris vesci Calaber jubet hospes,

 Tu me fecisti locupletem.
- 1 E. xv1. 49-51. Sum bonus et frugi: renuit negitatque Sabellus.

 Cautus enim metuit foveam lupus, accipiterque
 Suspectos laqueos, et opertum milius hamum.

The character of the rural population of Italy cannot be too reverently traced, with a view to show by what virtues (humanly speaking) Rome became mistress of the world:

4 C. xv. 12—16. Per quas Latinum nomen et Italæ Crevere vires, famaque et imperi Porrecta majestas ad ortum Solis ab Hesperio cubili.

At some time then B.C. 53. (a year famous for the calamity of Crassus in the East) or B. C. 52. (a year remarkable for the death of Clodius and the oration pro Milone), in Horace's twelfth or thirteenth year of age we may probably fix his migration to Rome.

From that date, till he took the Toga Virilis, may be reckoned the first period of his literary and his moral education. Under Orbilius he appears to have been early instructed in the antique poems of Livius Andronicus.

2 E. 1. 70, 1. ——— memini quæ plagosum mihi parvo Orbilium dictare.

His learning of the Greek language would follow next, and his pride in becoming acquainted with the Iliad, an acquaintance which at a much later period, we know, he cultivated with renewed edification and delight. Thus he writes from Palestrina to the eldest son of his friend Lollius.

2 E. 11. 41, 2. Romæ nutriri mihi contigit, atque doceri Iratus Graiis quantum nocuisset Achilles:

1 E. 11. 1,2. Trojani belli scriptorem, maxime Lolli, Dum tu declamas Romæ, Præneste relegi, &c

But besides all this, the extent of those liberal instructions which at any cost his father obtained for him, the handsome style of appearance which placed him on a level with the first gentleman's son in Rome, and then the paternal prudence which at once secured for him the accomplishments of mind with purity of morals, shall now with the best effect be exhibited in his own language, that of the most grateful of sons. Poor as the father was, 1 S. vi. 71. macro pauper agello, we have seen that he was not content to send his son to the country school of Flavius, though consequential centurions thought it good enough for theirs;

1 S. vi. 76—89. Sed puerum est ausus Romam portare, docendum
Artes, quas doceat quivis eques atque senator
Semet prognatos. Vestem servosque sequentes,
In magno ut populo, si qui vidisset; avità
Ex re præberi suntus mihi crederet illos.
Ipse mihi custos incorruptissimus omnes
Circum doctores aderat. quid multa? pudicum
(Qui prinus virtutis honos) servavit ab omni

Non solum facto, verum opprobrio quoque turpi:
Nec timuit, sibi ne vitio quis verteret olim,
Si pracco parvas, aut (ut fuit ipse) coactor
Mercedes sequerer; neque ego essem questus. Ob hoc nunc
Laus illi debetur, et a me gratia major.
Nil me pæniteat sanum patris hujus, eoque, &c.

We have next to contemplate Horace in a new light, as trained under his father's eye to become the future Censor and Satirist of that avaricious and luxurious, that voluptuous and yet superstitious age, amidst all its passions labouring under the fear of death, the epidemic of that day. For the Epicurean philosophy, however ingeniously recommended by Lucretius, and in its grand practical maxim adopted by Virgil, was poorly calculated to console by its prospect of annihilation those who clung to life for its sensual indulgences: as little was it adapted to administer to a mind diseased with the consciousness of crime or the cravings of avarice. In the language of Job, xvi. 2. might not such victims feelingly exclaim "we have heard many such things; miserable comforters are ye all."

Geo. II. 491, 2. Atque metus omnes et inexorabile fatum Subjecit pedibus, strepitumque Acherontis avari.

In his very earliest efforts as an Author, when he apologises for the freedom exercised on the follies and vices of those around him, Horace gives all the credit of that cherished inclination, very distinctly, to the wise lessons of his admirable parent; and that too after disclaiming any toleration for personal malignity in the very strongest terms.

1 S. IV. 101—103. —— quod vitium procul afore chartis, Atque animo prius, ut si quid promittere de me Possum aliud vere, promitto, &c.—to the end.

The whole of that Satire, Eupolis atque Cratinus, &c., though in composition somewhat careless and desultory, must be attentively studied by any scholar who wishes to comprehend the character of Horace's mind in that its early moment of fire and effervescence. The next stage, that of the Epodes, is thus described by himself at a later period of life.

1 C. xvi. 22—25. — Me quoque pectoris
Tentavit in dulci juventà
Fervor, et in celeres iambos
Misit furentem.

It is important also to show by what influence of his father's instruction, at a yet earlier day, young Horace, from being warned to avoid such or such an example of profligacy and extravagance, was afterwards led to make it the object (illudens chartis) of his keen and playful satire also.

Cum venià dabis. Insuevit pater optimus hoc me, Ut fugerem exemplis vitiorum quæque notando. Cum me hortaretur, parce, frugaliter, atque Viverem uti contentus eo quod m'i ipse parasset; Nonne vides, Albi ut male vivat filius? &c. &c.

In this career of unexampled advantages, (what son of a Roman Senator could enjoy more?) it becomes a nice question to fix how long he retained the enjoyment of such a father's guidance and love. The latest allusion to that parent's precepts may rather seem to indicate, that he did not live till his son became invested with the Toga Virilis and with the discretion attached to it.

1 S. IV. 116-121. ____ ini satis est, si

Traditum ab antiquis morem servare, tuamque,
Dum custodis eges, vitam famamque tueri
Incolumem possum: simul ac duraverit ætas
Membra animumque tuum, nabis sine cortice. Sic me
Formabat puerum dictis: &c.

From this very last mention (no later hint of time any where occurs) of Horace's being under his father's eye, one may safely conclude, that the good old man must have died before the son entered on his seventcenth year. Let that in the absence of all certainty be conceded as a probable calculation.

In B. c. 48. then, the young Horace assumed the Toga Virilis, and became his own master with succession to his father's estate. This year too may well be remembered, from its giving date to the battle of Pharsalia.

A long interval now occurs from B. c. 48. to the battle of Philippi in 42. for which the materials extant are exceedingly scanty; from the 17th to the 23d year of Horace's age.

In the passage already quoted

2 E. 11. 41, 2. Romæ nutriri mihi contigit, atque doceri Iratus Graiis quantum nocuisset Achilles :

he gives no intimation whatever of the time which elapsed, but says at once, v. 43,

> Adjecere bonæ paullo plus artis Athenæ : Scilicet ut possem curvo dignoscere rectum, Atque inter sylvas Academi quærere verum.

Of these lines it may not be impertinent to suggest, that while the study of moral truth was included in the third, the science of Geometry was meant to be described in the second. That science was then pursued as a fit exercise and discipline for the intellectual faculties, independently of any benefit from the knowledge which it yields; and the admirable Quintilian in his day refers with great respect to that as an established opinion, before he delivers a professional judgment of his own on its usefulness otherwise.

In Geometria partem fatentur esse utilem teneris ætatibus; agitari namque animos, et acui ingenia, ac celeritatem percipiendi venire inde concedunt: sed prodesse eam, non ut cæteras artes, cum perceptæ sint, sed cum discatur, existimant. Lib. 1. Cap. 1X.

Here I must candidly confess, that though, chiefly for the valuable remark from Quintilian, the preceding paragraph is now [1837] retained, my opinion is decisively changed as to the mathematical meaning attached to.. curro...rectum...in the second of the verses last quoted. For the acceptation however of currum metaphorically in a moral sense, (for which pravum is the proper term as opposed to rectum,) no authority is to be found but in Persius alone, sometimes the best incidental commentator on Horace: and unless therefore the following passages could be produced, which must remove all doubt on the subject, the question might still be mooted, which of the two interpretations is the true one.

SAT. III. v. 52. Haud tibi inexpertum curvos deprendere mores.

 vv. 9—11. Scis etenim justum gemina suspendere lance Ancipitis libræ: rectum discernis, ubi inter Curva subit, &c.

If Horace tells us little of himself while a resident in Athens, he gives a yet shorter account of the cause which removed him from a spot apparently so much entitled to his veneration: but he wrote this at a late period of his life; when it was not likely that he should enter into any particulars of his engagement in the civil war.

v. 46. Dura sed emovere loco me tempora grato.

Whenever he began to reside at Athens, probably B. c. 47. his attainments there in Grecian literature must have been very considerable, from the early allusions made in the Satires alone. 1 S. IV. 1. 2 S. III. 11, 12: where, besides Archilochus, we have Eupolis, Cratinus, and Aristophanes, mentioned, as well as Plato and Menander. His familiarity indeed with the language, and his command of it for elegant composition we find also intimated in the following passage, where he records his attempts in Greek verse, and the judicious reproof, (for better effect assigned to Romulus,) by which he was deterred from pursuing that design.

1 S. x. 31—35. Atque ego cum Græcos facerem, natus mare citra, Versiculos; vetuit me tali voce Quirinus,
Post mediam noctem visus, cum somnia vera:
In silvam non ligna feras insanius, ac si
Magnas Græcorum malis implere catervas,

During his stay in Athens that city would doubtless gratify his natural taste for retirement, as the Vacuum Tibur (1 E. v11. 45.) afterwards did in more settled indulgence.

2 E. II. 81, 2. Ingenium, sibi quod vacuas desumsit Athenas, Et studiis annos septem dedit, &c., &c.

Horace might in B. c. 45. have formed acquaintance with the son of Cicero, somewhat his senior, who was sent to Athens in the April of that year: but not a vestige exists of any such fact. The Messala and Bibulus, so splendidly grouped in the list of his friends, 1 S. x. 81—6, &c., (a Locus Classicus in the biography of Horace,) we may fairly presume to have been there and well known to him; for Tully tells us, that two young men of those very names, very soon after his son went, were going to that celebrated seat of learning ^a.

Of all the Sodales of Horace, however, not one seems to have been more dearly beloved by him, and in all probability on an early friendship, commenced (as we say) when at College together, than Pompeius Varus; who must on no account be confounded with Pompeius Grosphus, a very worthy man, who at that time (2 C. xvi. 33.) and several years after (1 E. xii. 22.) resided in Sicily. This Pompeius, distinguished also on good authority by the cognomen Varus, (vid. Torrentius,) was just then happily restored

^{*} Middleton's Life of Cicero. Vol. 11. p. 364. ed. 1742.

"Dis patriis Italoque cœlo," to the great delight of his friend Horace. That Ode, O sæpe mecum, which after so many years of long separation records the joyful hour of their meeting again, is imbued with all the spirit of the kind-hearted man and the convivial bard. As an authentic record also (in part) of Horace's own history, it is invaluable; ranking indeed with those principal sources of authentic intelligence, Nunc ad me redeo... 1 S. vi. 45—131. and Rome nutriri... 2 E. 11. 41—52.

With a verse in that Epistle it may be worth the while to compare two lines of the Ode, as no bad example of Horace tracked in his own snow.

vv. 15, 16. Te rursus in bellum resorbeus
Unda fretis tulit æstuosis.

v. 47. Civilisque rudem belli tulit æstus in arma, &c.

The bad conscience or the diseased mind, the Atra Cura, of our Poet may be similarly traced, and not without interest, through the different stages of its progress. 2 S. vii. 114, 5.—2 C. xvi. 21, 2.—3 C. i. 39, 40.—4 C. xi. 35, 6. That splendid imagination reached its acme in the third of those passages.

vv. 37-40. ——— Sed Timor et Minæ
Scandunt eodem, quo dominus : neque
Decedit æratå triremi, et
Post equitem sedet atra Cura.

Though in less interesting parallels, the Scholar with Horace's writings in true succession placed before him, may derive some amusement from tracing in different stages the remarkable similitude of sentiment: the following instances may deserve attention.

(1) Ep. xvII. 65. Optat quietem Pelopis infidus pater, &c.

2 C. xvi. l. Otium Divos rogat in patente Prensus Egge, &c.

- (2) 2 S. 111. 91, 2. ——— quoad vixit, credidit ingens Pauperiem vitium, et cavit nihil acrius, &c.
 - 3 C. xx1v. 42. Magnum pauperies opprobrium jubet Quidvis et facere et pati.

Or even the humbler similitude of the family table; as where Horace describes Ofellus,

2 S. 11. 116, 7. Non ego, narrantem, temere edi luce profestà Quicquam præter olus, fumosæ cum pede pernæ.

and where he sighs for his own hospitable board in the country,

2 S. vi. 63, 4. O quando faba Pythagoræ cognata, simulque Uncta satis pingni ponentur oluscula lardo?

About this period of the life of Horace, from his first residence in Athens to the battle of Philippi inclusive, the following notice of different places which he appears to have visited, will be quite sufficient for any illustration of his character or writings to be derived from that source.

- 1 C. vii. 10-14. Me neque tam patiens Lacedæmon,

 Nec tam Larisæ percussit campus opimæ,

 Quam domus Albuneæ resonantis,

 Et præceps Anio, ac Tiburni lucus, et uda

 Mobilibus pomaria rivis.
 - 1 S. vII. 4, 5. Persius hic permagna negotia dives habebat Clazomenis, etiam lites cum Rege molestas.
 - ——23, 4. ————laudat Brutum, laudatque cohortem, Solem Asiæ Brutum appellat.

In a manner quite incidental and oblique we gain another fact of locality, from the Epistle (x1.) to Bullatius. Horace, after several questions put to his whimsical and odd tempered friend then on the coast of Asia, at last thus asks him:

v. 6. An Lebedum laudas, odio maris atque viarum?

This question apparently was meant to hit the very point of his friend's absurdity in acting as he did.

Horace then supposes Bullatius thus to reply to him, as equally with himself knowing the spot alluded to,

vv. 7—10. Scis, Lebedus quid sit; Gabiis desertior atque
Fidenis vicus: tamen illic vivere vellem;
Oblitusque meorum, obliviscendus et illis,
Neptunum procul e terra spectare furentem.

But here again, Horace most acutely and sensibly rejoins, vv. 11, 12. Sed neque qui Capuâ Romam petit imbre lutoque

Aspersus, volet in cauponâ vivere ; nec qui, &c. &c.

The dialogue of the Epistle thus analysed may be taken to exemplify a great peculiarity in the manner of Horace; I mean, in the delicate, sudden, and slightly marked transitions, of which his readers have justly to complain. The abrupt and involved style of the Satires on this ground alone affords frequent matter of obscurity and doubt: while in the high-finished and perspicuous composition (generally so) of the Epistles, difficulty from that cause very seldom occurs.

If there be any truth in these principles of criticism, no scholar with any judgment or taste to discriminate could possibly imagine, for instance, that the Satire which ends,

2 S. vIII. 95. Canidia adflasset, pejor serpentibus atris, and the Epistle which begins,

1 E. 1. 1. Primâ dicte mihi, summâ dicende Camœnâ, were ever written in continuity, as they have stood hitherto edited. For with all his recorded slowness of revision in satiric writing, (2 S. 111. 2. scriptorum quæque retexens,) the great and striking difference, so visible now, in the whole tone and style of composition betwixt the Satire and the Epistle loudly forbids such an idea. Horace in the interval between those two books (as it is well remarked by Bentley, ante p. 5, ¶ 7.) had evidently become both an older man and a sounder as well as a more elegant writer.

To return to Athens: early in B. c. 43. on the arrival of Brutus, then raising an army to oppose the second triumvirate, "all the young nobility and gentry of Rome" (in the old Pompeian interest) whom he found in that seat of education, most readily joined his standard. The son of the illustrious Cicero, we know, became a Legatus under him: young Horace, catching the spirit of his associates, naturally entered the service, and with the rank of military tribune, but not without some jealousy on that account, as we are told, in certain persons of high birth.

1 S. vi. 48. Quod mihi pareret legio Romana tribuno.

In the course of those campaigns, as is acutely observed by Masson, (Horatii Vita, 1708. p. 55,) he must have seen much variety of hard service: he could not else have addressed his friend Pompeius in language like this.

2 C. vII. 1, 2. O sæpe mecum tempus in ultimum Deducte, Bruto militiæ duce, &c.

And we gather from the sketch of his own character, (1 E. xx. 23. Me primis urbis belli placuisse domique,) that he could long afterwards refer with satisfaction to the favour of the commander-in-chief enjoyed at that period.

The great battle of Philippi took place towards the end of the year B. c. 42; and Horace shared in the common ruin of the unfortunate Republicans. The proscription, perhaps, did not reach him: in the confiscation he certainly was involved. Of the worse consequences of that battle to himself he speaks thus:

^{*} Hooke, B. x. Ch. x111.

E. 11. 49—51. Unde simul primum me dimisere Philippi,
Decisis humilem pennis, inopemque paterni
Et laris et fundi, &c. &c.

while in respect of his escape afterwards from ill fortune, (besides his general language of thankfulness,

2 C. vII. 13, 14. Sed me per hostes Mercurius celer Denso paventem sustulit aëre:)

we may without much hesitation assume, that when returning home by sea, in the winter B. C. 42 | 41. he encountered that peculiar danger off Cape Palinurus, which he so gratefully classes with his other deliverances.

3 C. 1v. 25—28. Vestris amicum fontibus et choris,
Non me Philippis versa acies retro,
Devota non extinxit arbor,
Nec Siculâ Palinurus undă.

The old commentator in Cruquius speaks without scruple, indeed, of that promontory as the scene of danger "ubi Horatius se redeuntem ex bello Philippensi periclitatum fuisse dicit:" and it was thus the Poet acquired that vivid knowledge of the tempestuous sea, which enabled him to aggravate the picture of Hannibal as a mighty agent devastating the cities of Italy.

4 C. iv. 42—44. Dirus per urbes Afer ut Italas,

Ceu flamma per tædas, vel Eurus

Per Siculas equitavit undas.

In the spring then B. C. 41. Horace is once more at Rome. Out of the scattered hints which remain, the following brief narrative may with a fair claim to credibility be drawn up. The words rictis partibus venia impetrata of Suetonius in Vita Horatii express no more than what Horace's actual return to Rome would in itself imply. But as the estate in the neighbourhood of Venusia was certainly gone, the next fact asserted, Scriptum quastorium comparavit, may require some ingenuity to conjecture, how he could buy for himself a patent place as clerk in the Treasury; which of course must have been the lower way of getting admission into that respectable office. That such purchases were made, and as early as B. c. 70, appears to be an unquestionable fact, from Cicero, In Verren. L. 111. §§ 78, 9, &c. Of so much as is quoted of that Oration by the acute and diligent Ernesti, in his Claris Ciceroniana, under the word Scriba, the following extract may suffice.

Scribæ, qui digni sunt illo ordine, patres familias, viri boni atque honesti—ad eos me revoca. Noli hos colligere, qui nummulis corrogatis de nepotum donis, ac de scenicorum corollariis, cum decuriam emerunt, ex primo ordine explosorum, in secundum ordinem civitatis se venisse dicunt. Mirabimur turpes aliquos ibi esse, quo cuivis licet pretio pervenire?

The whole passage in the original is singularly curious, especially under the head of collybus and cerarium; as showing the extent of knavery which then could be practised in the provincial governments of Rome.

But in the apparent wreck of all his fortunes, it may be asked, how was Horace enabled to buy this Munus Scribæ, this decuriam? nummulis corrogatis, it may be answered: but from whence the corrogatio? Perhaps, from goodnatured friends still at Rome, even in those days of confusion: perhaps, it has sometimes struck my mind, from persons in the neighbourhood of Venusia, where on old accounts in his long absence unsettled, money might yet be due to him for arrears of rent.

At all events, however, one can hardly resist the conclusion, that Horace did buy a kind of patent place as clerk in the Treasury. The words of Suctonius, scriptum quæstorium comparavit, are quite express and distinct. The allusion in the well known passage, where his presence was required, as customary, at a general meeting,

2 S. vi. 36, 7. De re communi scribæ magnå atque novà te Orabant hodie meminisses, Quinte, reverti:

is inexplicable on any other hypothesis: the old commentator in Cruquius asserts it without scruple. And if one may suppose, that the duties of the place could be performed by deputy with occasional attendance of the principal, nothing can be more natural than so, in part, to interpret two lines in the Epistle (xiv) to his Villicus, vv. 16, 17. Me constare mihi scis, et discedere tristem, Quandocunque trahunt invisa negotia Romam.

Nor is it impertinent to remark, that if the profits of the situation bore any proportion to the increase of the public revenue after the year B. c. 41. Horace must have found his original purchase a very lucky one, in the twenty years or more, during which he seems to have retained it.

Whatever were Horace's means of living during the period which elapsed before he was enriched by Mæcenas with the Sabine estate; from his own description of the style in which he lived at Rome,

1 S. vi. 114-118. --- inde domum me

Ad porri et ciceris refero laganique catinum. Cœna ministratur pueris tribus: et lapis albus Pocula cum cyatho duo sustinet; adstat echinus Vilis, cum patera guttus, Campana supellex:

we may well believe, that a very narrow income was adequate to so frugal an expenditure with so humble an establishment. His usual diet, indeed, was little altered by his increase of fortune, itself not very large in those times.

When he had got the Sabine estate, the value of which we are partly enabled to estimate by the eight slaves upon it, implied in the threat to Davus;

2 S. vm. 117, 118.

---- ocius hinc te

Ni rapis, accedes opera agro nona Sabino.

he is thus addressed on his style of living by that clever rogue, (during the Saturnalia, and at Rome, be it remembered.)

The very dinner which Lucilius shared with Lælius and the younger Scipio;

2 S. 1. 71—74. Quin ubi se a vulgo et scena in secreta remôrant Virtus Scipiadæ et mitis sapientia Lælî; Nugari cum illo, et discincti ludere, donec Decoqueretur olus, soliti....

And such also in Horace's day was the ordinary fare;

2 E. II. 167, 8. Emtor Aricini quondam Veientis et arvi

Some fifteen years afterwards, in the Epistle to Torquatus, 1 E. v. 1, 2. his invitation very candidly promises the plainest entertainment; though, as we are told at the conclusion, there would be a small party to meet him, with room for a few friends (locus est et pluribus umbris) if he chose to bring them. Nor did he hold other language at any period between that of the Satire here first adduced, 1 S. vi. 115. and that of the Epistle just quoted. Of the homely fare on which from choice he actually lived,

Si potes Archiacis conviva recumbere lectis, Nec modica cœnare times olus omne patella, &c.

1 C. xxxi. 16, 7. —— me pascunt olivæ, Me cichorea levesque malvæ.

he only prays to have the enjoyment continued: "Frui paratis," with the superadded blessing of health and the use of his faculties during the remainder of life,

Morally speaking, Horace could hardly ever want the means to maintain a style of living like this. With his own Ofellus, he could truly say,

2 S. 11. 126, 7. Sæviat, atque novos moveat Fortuna tumultus, Quantum hinc imminuet?

So that even if the storm of adversity were once more to befall him, he feels certain that his light boat will weather the gale; while the heavy-laden ship with its votaries of wealth might go to wreck.

3 C. XXIX. 62. Tunc me biremis præsidio scaphæ
Tutum per Ægæos tumultus
Aura feret, geminusque Pollux.

The first introduction of Horace to the acquaintance and favour of Mæcenas, that most memorable of all events in his life, may be placed in B. c. 41.

1 S. v1. 54, 5. — optimus olim

Virgilius, post hunc Varius, dixere, quid essem.

and perhaps rather late in that year. for some time must be allowed to elapse after his return from Philippi, before Virgil and Varius could well acquire a sufficient knowledge of his genius and his worth, to which they were strangers before.

But for his second visit to Mæcenas, with the latitude of a round number (v. 61. revocas nono post mense) we may assign an earlier date to it in B. c. 40. than a strict computation would admit.

From the year B. c. 40, when Horace could for the first time retort on those who had envied his rise, the proud fact itself with the moral praise implied in it, down to the year in which his patron gave him that estate in the Sabine hills; the personal history of Horace must be traced in the first book of Satires. The composition of that book evidently belongs to the years fixed by Bentley, and probably enough to a year or two lower down.

1 S. vr. 47. Nunc quia sum tibi, Mæcenas, convictor : &c.

Two Satires alone (the vth and viith) in the number of those ten seem to require any particular notice, from political connection with the times to which, by the subjects of them, the reader's mind is naturally carried.

The journey to Brundusium (Sat. v.) when determined to the right year in the spring a of B. c. 38. will receive the only farther illustration which it can admit or require, from the history of the Commonwealth, to which it belongs, or from Mr. Cramer's Description of Ancient Italy. The most beautiful passage in that poem shows how rapid and deep the growth of affection had been betwixt Horace and his two friends, Virgil and Varius: of Plotius we know little but by name.

vv. 39 -44. Postera lux oritur multo gratissima: namque
Plotius et l'arius Sinnessa, l'irgiliusque
Occurrunt; anima, quales neque candidiores
Terra tulit, neque quis me sit devinctior alter.
O qui complexus, et gaudia quanta fuerunt!
Nil ego contulerim jucundo sanus amico.

A subsequent enumeration of the distinguished authors of that period embraces in fact so many of his personal friends;

a "I incline with Wesseling and Heyne to refer the journey of Horace to the intended conference at Brundusium described by Appian, Civ. v. 78. And you will observe that this date, the spring of u. c. 716, B. c. 38, for the poet's journey, will bring that vth Satire of the 1st Book within the dates of Bentley." H. F. Clinton. MS. communication.

1 S. x. 40—45. Argutà meretrice potes, Davoque Chremets
Eludente senem, comis garrire libellos
Unus vivorum, Fundani: Pollio regum
Facta canit, pede ter percusso: forte epos acer,
Ut nemo, Varius ducit: molle atque facetum
Virgilio annuerunt gaudentes rure Camœnæ.

The comic author Fundanius we meet again, (2 S. viii. 19,) as the pleasant narrator of what happened at Nasidienus's dinner. Varius, whose fine tragedy of Thyestes is so highly praised by Quintilian, appears already to have been celebrated for that epic talent alluded to in 1 C. vi.,

Scriberis Vario fortis et hostium Victor, Mæonio carminis aliti; &c.

and Pollio had acquired eminence in the tragic drama, which we find him still maintaining when afterwards engaged in the history of the civil wars;

2 C. 1. 9—12. Paulum severæ Musa Tragædiæ
Desit theatris; mox, ubi publicas
Res ordinâris, grande munus
Cecropio repetes cothurno.

while in regard to Virgil the clear information is gained, that he was then only known as the writer of Bucolics, but in the delicacy and high finish of his style, (molle atque facetum,) even then indicating the consummate poet that was soon to arise.

And here from the same satire not unaptly may be introduced the proud list of all Horace's friends at that early day.

vv. 81—88. Plotius, et Varius, Mæcenas, Virgiliusque,
Valgius, et probet hæc Octavius optimus, atque
Fuscus; et hæc utinam Viscorum laudet uterque:
Ambitione relegatâ, te dicere possum,
Pollio, te, Messala, tuo cum fratre; simulque
Vos, Bibule et Servi; simul his te, candide Furni:
Complures alios, doctos ego quos et amicos
Prudens prætereo, &c. &c.

Well then might Horace, when allowing in other respects the superiority of Lucilius, justly assert that he too had shared the friendship of the great;

2 S. 1. 74-78.

Quicquid sum ego, quamvis Infra Lucili censum ingeniumque, tamen me Cum magnis vixisse invita fatebitur usque Invidia, et fragili quærens illidere dentem, Offendet solido.

Let us now proceed to the viith Satire, Proscripti Regis Rupili, &c., which might be supposed (and not without some plausibility) to have been Horace's carliest attempt in Satiric writing, having the scene of its story at Clazomenæ, and in the presence of the great Brutus. In that view M. Sanadon speciously enough assigns for its date a few months before the battle of Philippi, and even discovers, in its juvenile carelessness of composition, an argument to favour that date.

The old Scholiast, however, quoted by Baxter, appears to give a different, and, as I understand it, a very satisfactory account of the matter.

Publius Rupilius cognomine Rex, Prænestinus, commilito fuit Horatii in castris Bruti. Hic ægre ferens quod Horatius Tribunus esset, sæpe ignobilitatem generis illi objiciebat: idcirco nunc eum ex personâ alterius lacerat.

This idea derives additional support and development from two remarks of the judicious Gesner.

Forte hæc demum post victoriam Cæsarianorum scripta, cum partes Bruti objiceret Horatio recepto, receptus ipse Rupilius: ut Tubero olim Ligario.—Rem non plane recentem commendari versibus, ipsum exordium declarat.

And on Gesner's supposition that Rupilius had thus given offence to Horace at Rome, after they both returned, the viith Satire, viewed as a retaliation, will be found not unhappily subjoined as a kind of appendix to the vith, Non quia Mæcenas, &c., which resents (vv. 6-45.) the ill-natured imputation, libertino patre natum, cast upon him by certain envious detractors.

Assuming this origin of the Satire to be correct, we may accept as literally true, Horace's own account of his beginning to write verse; that he was first driven to it by necessity after the confiscation of his paternal estate;

In all the books of Horace, indeed, those of Satires, of Epodes, of Odes, and of Epistles, as the constituent parts now stand arranged in each, I am strongly of opinion, that after a due allowance for much caprice and casualty perhaps, there may still be discovered great ingenuity shown by Horace himself in the close succession by which some pieces are brought together, and not less of skill, judgment, and delicacy in the intentional disjunction of others.

The peculiar consideration here suggested from internal evidence, will support the whole hypothesis of Bentley by a train of argument not perhaps suspected before. To exemplify the nature of that reasoning, let a few clear instances suffice for the present.

Thus the similarity of attachment which Horace bore to both his friends, Septimius and Pompeius, may fairly account for the neighbourly collocation which those two beautiful Odes (2 C. vi, vii.) now occupy.

And thus the general similitude of subject in the two Epistles, xvII. to Scava, and xvIII. to Lollius, (younger brother to him addressed, Maxime Lolli, 1 E. II. 1,) though addressed to two characters totally dissimilar, doubtless led to their juxtaposition when published.

Strangely enough, with all the obvious difference between the characters, even Gesner (ad 1 E. XVIII. 1.) is inclined to think that the two persons might be identically the same, and that of the two Epistles as they now stand, the latter was either a continuation of the former, or arose as a reply out of Seæva's supposed answer to it.

Now is it not clear, on a close comparison, that Lollius, being a young man of rank, the son of a vir consularis, hot and high-spirited, was liable to offend by want of due complaisance? With his natural brusquerie and his fits of contradictory or unaccommodating humour, he was the most unlikely man in Rome (scurrantis speciem prabere) to be mistaken for a sycophant. Scava, on the other hand, timid apparently and somewhat necessitous himself, with relatives perhaps ill provided for, while he required encouragement to undertake the office of living with the great, might stand no less in need of delicate caution, how to improve his fortunes as the comes (v. 52) to a rex (v. 43) without meanness and without importunity.

This view of the matter I am happy to find confirmed by Wieland as quoted with approbation by Morgenstern, in a Dissertation to be noticed more particularly by and by. After remarking the skill of Horace in similibus argumentis tractandis, he refers for illustration of it to these very Epistles; Sic Epistolæ ad Scævam et Lollium eandem docent cum principibus virendi artem: at quam callide diverso utriusque ingenio et conditioni attemperantur præcepta! p. 61.

The vth Epode on Canidia, is by several others separated from the xviith on the same Beldame: evidently to keep the pathetic and the horrible apart in reading from the invective and ironical.

And to take another example from the same family:

The two Odes (1 C. xv1, xv11.) O matre pulchrá, &c. and Velox amænum, &c. are now generally considered as addressed to one person, the daughter of Canidia, (or Gratidia,) under the Greek name of Tyndaris. Assuming as a fact what is most highly probable, then, in the position of the apology first and of the invitation immediately afterwards, we instantly see the fine address of the Poet. Once disjoin the two odes in arrangement: by what attraction should they find their way back again?

M. Sanadon, instead of recognising the criminosi Iambi (vv. 2, 3.) in the extant Epodes v and xvII, imagines those libellous verses to be lost; and as well in disjoining as in conjoining—on a plan of his own—the different pieces here alluded to, surpasses even his usual reach of extravagance; whereas in the natural succession which is now given to those pieces, 1 S. vIII. Olim truncus eram ..., (and 2 S. I. 48. Canidia Albuci, quibus est inimica, venenum.) Ep. v. At O Deorum ...; and xvII. Jam jam efficaci ...; 1 C. xvII. O matre pulchrá ...; and xvII. Velox amænum ...; the history of all the parties concerned may be read straightforward with every advantage of interest and perspicuity.

It is time to proceed to the 11d Book of Satires.

As far however as the personal history of Horace is involved in settling the question of his chronology and localities, I have already anticipated in those pages the principal remarks which belong to this part of the Dissertation. Nor will the reader be displeased, after so extended and discursive a range, to be told that we are now approaching towards the conclusion so far of my original design. A few points only remain to bring matters down to the closing date of the Epodes. And then, the writings of Horace either in the Odes or in the Epistles, when those works are once set in chronological order, may well be allowed to tell the story of his life, which in fact his writings then constitute; illustrated only by a few references to the public annals of Rome.

Let us now, therefore, take up the second book of Satires. At this stage of Horace's history, when he was just possessed of the Sabine estate, we find him forming grand resolutions as a kind of censor and moralist.

2 S. 111. 9. Atqui vultus erat multa et præclara minantis.

He had this year retired on the Saturnalia (v. 5) into the country for leisure and for warmth.

v. 10. Si vacuum tepido cepisset villula tecto.

The latter charm we know the country possessed.

1 E. x. 15. Est ubi plus tepeant hyemes?

If it be asked what were the causes of that advantage, the Cato Major § xvi. may be consulted for explanation: Ubi enim potest illa ætas aut calescere vel apricatione melius vel igni, aut vicissim umbris aquisve refrigerari salubrius?—the command of a sunny position on the one hand, and the plenty of fuel on the other. And it may be remembered that in that famous Epistle (xiv.) on the Sabine farm, Horace tells his Villicus that the Calo in the city envied him amongst other things (vv. 41, 2.) the ready supply of logs; which at Rome they had not.

____ invidet usum
Lignorum et pecoris tibi calo argutus et horti.

Horace (who reports himself [1 E. xx. 24] solibus aptum) when more advanced in years, loved to pass his winters on the sea-coast.

Thus in that fine Epistle to Mæcenas, 1 E. vii. 10-13.

Quod si bruma nives Albanis illinet agris, Ad mare descendet vates tuus, et sibi parcet, Contractusque leget; te, dulcis amice, reviset Cum Zephyris, si concedes, et hirundine prim².

Incidentally we gather from another Epistle, that to Scæva, (xvii. 52, 3,) that Brundusium and Surrentum also were scenes of resort in winter;

Brundisium comes aut Surrentum ductus amænum, Qui queritur salebras et acerbum frigus et imbres, &c. and in that (xvth.) to Numonius Vala, Quæ sit hyems Veliæ, quod cælum, Vala, Salerni, &c. when he thought of going to the cold-baths of the one place or the other, after he has stated (vv. 2, 3.) Antonius Musa's judgment on his case, Mihi Baias supervacuas... Horace proceeds to tell his friend, that he will have to ride his horse past the hitherto well known houses of call, on the way to Cumæ or Baiæ;

Mutandus locus est, et diversoria nota Præteragendus equus: Quo tendis? non mihi Cumas Est iter aut Baias. &c.

To return to the 111d Satire; on the literary design then alluded to, in packing up his books to carry with him from Rome, he did not forget (v. 12) Architochus: and when we come to the Epodes, we shall discover in the assaults on Mæna (1v), on Cassius Severus (v1), on Mævius (x), and on other unlucky objects of his wrath, that in studying under that great master of Iambic bitterness he had learned his trade well;

πολλοί μαθηταί κρείσσονες διδασκάλων.

as the man said when he stole the Mercury. This fact too, in its way, is demonstrative of the Epodes being absurdly collocated in the old order before the Satires: the fruit produced, and then the tree planted!

Of the vith Satire (Hoc erat in votis, &c.) good use has been made in the former part of this Dissertation, as bearing on the great object, to illustrate the life and localities of Horace: one only remark shall be drawn from it now.

In the golden treatise De Senectute (§ xIV.) old Cato describes in general his convivial enjoyments: Me vero et magisteria delectant, &c. (he proceeds to transfer the scene into the country:) quæ quidem in Sabinis etiam persequi soleo; conviviumque vicinorum quotidie compleo, quod ad multam noctem, quam maxime possumus, vario sermone producimus.

Yet even Cato's party, in his hour of enthusiasm,

(3 C. xxi. 11, 12. Narratur et prisci Catonis Sæpe mero caluisse virtus.)

could hardly have enjoyed with higher zest

"The feast of reason and the flow of soul;"

than Horace gave and received in that delightful society, which at his own villa (Sabine also) he so cordially entertained.

With those neighbours of his, to whose cheerful instruction he contributed while yet a novus incolu among them, he appears to have been a great favourite from his earliest residence. And many years after he first occupied that estate.

1 E. xıv. 2, 3. — [olim] habitatum quinque focis, et

Quinque bonos solitum Variam dimittere Patres,

we find not only every sign of their being reconciled to his superiority, for such it must have been, but the best proofs possible of good sense and good humour on his part and theirs. He amused himself with rustic labour, for which his figure (pinguis, 1 E. IV. 15. and Corporis exigui, XX. 24.) did not exactly adapt him and they as naturally laughed at his awkwardness.

vv. 37—39. Non istic obliquo oculo mea commoda quisquam Limat, non odio obscuro morsuque venenat : Rident vicini glebas et saxa moventem.

In passing to the Epodes, very little appears for remark to my purpose which is not already forestalled. We have seen Horace carry the Poems of Archilochus with him for study and imitation into the Sabine valley. And as we know the severe model of correctness in writing which he laid down for himself and enforced upon others, the conclusion is fair, that he had taken most faithful pains with the task, when he afterwards expresses such pride in the execution.

1 E. xix. 21—25. Libera per vacuum posui vestigia princeps, Non aliena meo pressi pede: qui sibi fidit, Dux regit examen. Parios ego primus Iambos Ostendi Latio; numeros animosque secutus Archilochi, non res et agentia verba Lycamben.

By the bye, Horace has paid himself a compliment here which truth does not warrant. Canidia alone might testify, that when in the Parian vein, Horace wanted neither talent nor bitterness to drive a Lycambes mad.

On the historical bearing of the book of Epodes, nothing can be more satisfactory and singularly distinct than the paragraph quoted in the Chronological Table from Mr. Clinton's Fasti Hellenici, under the year B. c. 31.

It ought however to be remarked, that in the Epodes also Horace by no means intended to arrange the several pieces according to the exact order of time. Thus Epode vii. Quo, quo scelesti.... contemplates the impending war betwixt Cæsar and Antony as yet distant, and with horror and dismay deprecates such an event. The date of it, therefore, must be carried back as far as other considerations will allow; and the same remark may be extended to the xvith Epode, Altera jam teritur.... which from similarity of subject might be expected to stand in conjunction with the viith, were it not (as we have seen in other cases) for the sake of variety, perhaps, kept separate.

Both those Epodes, in any thing like allusion to the leaders of the great political parties, are obscure now, from the Poet's studied delicacy at the time: as long as any hope remained of healing the breach, Horace was not the man to aggravate the discord. But when matters had come to an open rupture, in that Epode, 1. Ibis Liburnis . . . he testifies at once his personal devotedness to Mæcenas, and his earnest desire to accompany his Patron to the scene of approaching conflict: and in the 1xth Epode, Quando repostum... on the first news of Cæsar's victory at Actium, Horace naturally addresses Mæcenas in a strain of the most delighted gratulation, yet even then (v. 29) not naming Antony, though he clearly alludes to him; while the disgraceful phenomenon of (Cleopatra's) gauze-curtain, in a scene like that, is represented as moving the indignation even of foreigners to forsake such a leader;

Ep. 1x. 15-18. Interque signa turpe militaria
Sol aspicit conopium.
Ad hoc frementes verterunt bis mille equos
Galli canentes Cæsarem.

It was about a year (B. c. 30) after that memorable engagement, when the affair at Alexandria had left Cæsar without a rival, that Horace broke out in his final effusion of joy, 1 C. XXXVII. Nunc est bibendum ..., connected with that eventful epoch.

Now that we are advancing from the Epodes to the Odes, it is lucky that Horace in his Epistle, Prisco si credis... to Mæcenas, (xix.) de suis et Poetastrorum sui sæculi scriptis, has himself afforded a delicate clue for the transition.

After asserting (vv. 21-25, recently adduced) his claim to originality in having first adopted Parian Iambics as a Latin poet, he proceeds to defend himself for borrowing an old metre instead of attempting to devise a new one. "Well: and had not Sappho blended her song with the measure of Archilochus? Had not Alcæus likewise partly availed himself of that Poet's metre?"—Alcæus, whom it was Horace's greatest pride to acknowledge as his Master in Lyric verse. In that department also (vv. 32—34) he represents himself as the first adventurer, but content to have his original productions (immemorata, elsewhere, 4 C. ix. 3. non ante vulgatas per artes,) privately read by the intelligent few: he was too shy or too proud for public recitation and the common modes of courting popularity.

Ac, ne me foliis ideo brevioribus ornes,

Quod timui mutare modos et carminis artem:

Temperat Archilochi musam pede mascula Sappho;

Temperat Alcæus;.....

Hunc ego, non alio dictum prius ore, Latinus Vulgavi fidicen: juvat immemorata ferentem Ingenuis oculisque legi manibusque teneri.

In our next transition, that from the Odes to the Epistles, is it at all surprising, that Horace, when, satisfied with his laurels, he had expressly taken leave of the Lyric Muse at the close of the third book, should adopt the Epistolary form of writing, if any temptation afterwards arose to resume his pen? Now, on the occasions which would frequently arise for communicating with his friends by letter, nothing could be more congenial to the habits of a Poet, than to prefer verse (and that the commonest) as the vehicle: and with Horace in particular, his Odes on various subjects addressed to individuals whom he loved and esteemed, naturally preluded to the more serious and discursive style of argument which marks the Epistles to his friends.

Under these circumstances, and especially considering the great change of age and character, which the Author had undergone in that interval betwixt the last date of his Satires and the first of his Epistles, the wonder is that any idea should have occurred to a Scholar like MORGENSTERN of writing a formal treatise De Satiræ atque Epistolæ Horatianæ discrimine (Lipsiæ, 1801.); when perhaps, unless from the Epistles immediately following the Satires as hitherto published, even he, aware as he was of Bentley's arrangement, would hardly have thought either of contrast or of comparison between them. Unquestionably, however, Morgenstern has rendered one great service to the cause advocated in these pages: no reader of his elegant and generally judicious Essay will ever again be misled by the juxtaposition of the Satires and Epistles to consider the latter as a continuation merely of the former. That source of error and confusion is now finally closed.

To go on with the real succession of Horace's works here recommended to the Scholar's notice; not only, as it has been well observed, " is the writer of the Epistles"-from the "moral turn" of the composition generally-"discerned in the Odes:" but more particularly we may discover also somewhat of the same dexterity with which his Odes are often concluded, in the abrupt but happy conclusion of many of his Epistles. In both classes of writing Horace seldom seeks or regards any plan of regular termination. After saying what he principally thought of saying when he set out, whenever he finds himself arrived at some point which supplies a piquant or pleasant mode of dropping the subject, there he suddenly slips away from his reader; leaving him on the one hand to recall in quick review the train of images which had just been passing before his mind, or on the other, to wind up the argument in its practical inference for himself, with the less of offence given to his vanity and self-love.

To exemplify all this by adducing the passages at full, would be a work of labour. The Odes abound with endings where the great felicity of art is shown in leaving the reader con la bocca dolce: and for Epistles which end hastily with some passing simile or some quaint turn of thought, or with such apparent abruptness as to elicit the comment—deest conclusio,—it may be sufficient to refer to the following, 1 E. I, VI, VII, XVII; 2 E. II; and that to the Pisos.

The Odes and Epistles, it has been truly said, when once placed in the just order of time, may be fairly left to themselves for illustration, as constituting the poetical at once and personal history of Horace. But then the localities of the bard are presumed to be already ascertained and fixed: without that essential proviso, even the chronological arrangement of his books would fail to exhibit many proprieties and delicacies, entwined in the local circumstances of the party addressing or the party addressed. Is it then too much to arrogate, that the labour now for the first time bestowed on distinguishing the three several residences of Horace, has laid the ground-work at least for a clearer understanding of many of his writings, than ever engaged the speculation of any commentator before?

In this restitution of Horace, at first sight, the greatest revulsion is likely to arise on seeing the third and fourth books of Odes here separated by the first book of Epistles. But then the lapse of several years between the third book of Odes and the fourth has been demonstrated as necessary to reconcile the moral and political phenomena, in the mean while produced, to anything like the probable course of human events.

Fortunately, too, the publication of the fourth book of Odes, from many striking points in it, seems to have excited a very early attention. The tradition of Suctonius, for instance, that Augustus felt a strong desire for that high tribute of fame which a Poet of such talent might confer, carries with it every reasonable evidence of truth, as to the origin of the Poems alluded to.

Scripta quidem ejus usque adeo probavit, mansuraque perpetuo opinatus est, ut non modo Sæculare carmen componendum injunxerit, sed et Vindelicam victoriam Tiberii Drusique privignorum suorum; eumque coëgerit propter hoe, tribus Carminum Libris ex longo intervallo quartum addere.

Other considerations too may here deserve our regard. The very mixture of articles, in matter certainly baser, if not in execution, compared with so much magnificence in the principal Odes of the 1vth book, is enough to indicate something extraordinary. In the few words of Gesner indeed prefixed to that book of Odes, the whole secret is thus briefly told.

Mihi sic videbatur: eum semel placuisset novum librum edere, in eum conjectum esse quidquid ad manus erat.

But it may be asked: on what ground is the Carmen Seculare in this arrangement entitled to precede the fourth book of Odes? Since Bentley (u. s. ¶ 5) himself mentions them in a different order, and what is more, ad Car. Sæc. v. 16, distinctly calls the sixth Ode of that book, Dive, quem proles..., "quasi præfatio (and very truly) et commendatio" to the Secular Ode itself. I answer thus. From the very nature and object of that great occasional poem, it must have been separately published in the year (B. c. 17) assigned to the celebration of the Ludi Sæculares; whereas of the fourth book of Odes, from the peculiarity of its constituent parts, there could be no collective publication till some two or three years after that date.

Need I here bestow a moment's notice on the pomp and conceit with which, out of various lyric pieces of the Poet, Sanadon, and after him Anchersen, have arbitrarily constructed a drama quoddam saculare of their own. Justly, yet mildly enough, is their audacious absurdity, in thus raking together materials in character as in date heterogeneous, rebuked by Gesner in his introduction to the C. S. "Mirum sane, si carmina unius argumenti, eodem tempore scripta, ita spargi per libros plures potuere!"

Arising from the fourth book, a stronger line of remark, it appears to me, yet remains to be traced. No Prologos or Epilogos attends this collection of Odes, such as we have read in the former books, or like the formal conclusion (Vertumnum Janumque..) attached to the first book of Epistles. Gesner, one of the most judicious of critics on Horace, in the few lines of comment prefixed to the Ode:

3 C. xxx. Exegi monumentum ære perennius, &c.

very calmly but very acutely observes, on a declaration so proud and so final;

Videtur Horatius hâc Ode finire omnino voluisse libros carminum. Hinc vetus Scriptor vitæ ait coactum ab Augusto tribus carminum libris ex longo intervallo quartum addere.

But how comes it to pass, it may be asked, that in the fourth book of Odes the name of Mæcenas is no where by direct address recorded?

Diminution of kindness in the generous patron, or abatement of gratitude in the honest-hearted client, cannot for a moment be imagined. My solution of the difficulty, for such it may seem, shall be stated very briefly.

After the manner in which Horace had celebrated the noble qualities of Mæcenas in his Satires, Epodes and Odes to the 3d book inclusive, could any addition of compliment be expected from the most grateful of men and the most felicitous of writers?

And yet, if the first book of Epistles be justly placed after the third book of Odes, as in our chronology it follows next a great accession of honourable testimony was yet to come, in the 1st, 7th and 19th Epistles of that most curious and valuable book. As establishing the character of Horace on the basis of sincerity and independence even under the deepest sense of obligation, that one Epistle (vII.) Quinque dies tibi pollicitus, &c., which apologizes for his protracted absence in the country during the hot season, remains a lasting and beautiful monument. Nor in the evidence which it bears to the sterling good sense and high-minded gencrosity of Mæcenas, is it to be regarded as reflecting less honour, but if possible more, on that (with all his foibles) most excellent man. We are morally sure, that the viith Epistle was published by Horace himself in the life time of both. What then, in any age, should be the estimation of the Poet who could address, and of the Patron who could receive-publicly too, let it be added-the frank and affectionate boldness of language like this?

vv. 33. 39. Macra cavum repetes arctum, quem macra subisti-Hac ego si compellor imagine, cuncta resigno: Nec somnum plebis laudo satur altilium, nec Otia divitiis Arabum liberrima muto. Sæpe verecundum laudasti: Rexque Paterque Audisti coram, nec verbo parcius absens: Inspice, si possum donata reponere lætus.

But to return to the question: how comes it, that in the fourth book of Odes, the name of Mæcenas occurs once only (xi. 19) and then by oblique introduction?

Whoever has perused with any care the various addresses to Mæcenas in every style of writing down to that splendid Ode:

3 C. xxix. Tyrrhena regum progenies, &c.

will hardly fail, in the grand and impressive exordium :

1 E. 1. Primà dicte mihi, summà dicende Camœnà, &c.

to recognise at once the settled purpose of Horace: it was the intended farewell (and meant for the long futurity of fame elsewhere predicted) of the Poet to his Patron. We know, that Qui fit, Mæcenas, &c. (1 S. 1.) stood the first of Horace's edited works; we are here told, that Mæcenas was worthy of all celebration in the last. This last then of the collected Epistles, last not in collocation, but in time, carries with it many strong indications, especially in v. 10,

Nunc itaque et versus et cætera ludicra pono:

of its having been devoted by Horace as the ultimate offering of his muse. And in that respect, so far as regarded the Patron, the Poet never altered his purpose. Whatever he afterwards wrote, is left to stand separately on its own inscription and title, insulated as it were, and posthumous to the great body of his works: which he certainly had meditated to complete in the two books of Satires, the one of Epodes, the three of Odes, and the one of Epistles.

Mæcenas was Horace's only patron: and the Poet has succeeded in leaving that recorded indelibly.

Even in regard of Augustus, it may sound somewhat extraordinary, and yet it is perfectly true, that in the common meaning of that term he never was the patron of Horace. Except in those words imputed to Suctonius, unaque et alterâ liberalitate locupletavit, there exists no evidence of Horace having owed anything to the patronage of the Emperor. Virgil and Varius, beyond a doubt, were deeply indebted to that Prince's generosity. And Horace, who felt a service done to a friend as a kindness conferred on himself, has in that beautiful address to Augustus in favorem sui temporis Poëtarum, made the acknowledgement, to the honour of all parties concerned.

2 E. 1. 245—7. At neque dedecorant tua de se judicia, atque Munera, quæ multa dantis cum laude tulerunt, Dilecti tibi Virgilius Variusque poëtæ: &c.

Can it be believed, that if Horace had himself owed any substantial obligation to so munificent a Prince, he would have left no vestige of thankful expression behind him? No such vestige exists in his writings.

Horace's temper, in truth, was that of the most happy contentedness and gratitude. In the Satire, 1 S. vi. Hocerat in rotis....when the man of letters, (being one, as he calls himself, 2 C. xvii. 29, Mercurialium virorum,) puts up his prayer to Mercury, v. 5, Maiá nate....as to his patron God,

v. 15. - utque soles, custos mihi maximus adsis ;

he invokes the patronage on this one condition,

v. 13. Si quod adest, gratum juvat,...

that for his present blessings he is truly grateful. And in a passage also of a much later date, otherwise remarkable for its moral beauty, that point is distinctly put forward.

2 E. II. 210, 11. Natales grate numeras ? ignoscis amicis ? Lenior et melior fis accedente senectâ ?

At an early period the bounty of Mæcenas had made him abundantly rich, with an understood readiness at any time to give more, if more should be needed.

> Ep. r. 31, 2. Satis superque me benignitas tua Ditavit: &c.

2 C. xvIII. 11—14. —— nihil supra

Deos lacesson nee potentem amicum

Largiora flagito,

Satis beatus unicis Sabinis.

3 C. xvi. 37, 8. Importuna tamen pauperies abest:

Nec, si plura velim, tu dare deneges.

And even the concluding words of the Ode last quoted-

—— Bene est, cui Deus obtulit Parcà quod satis est manu. express a sentiment quite characteristic of his happy though humble competence. But his father had with singular success fixed that principle in his son's mind, which regulated his own; to make what he had suffice him:

1 S. IV. 107, 8. Cum me hortaretur, parce, frugaliter, atque

Viverem uti contentus eo quod mi ipse parasset, &c.

Agreeably to this, Horace no where betrays the least indication of difficulty and complaint, or any apprehension of want from his means failing (vitio culpûve, 2 S. vi. 7): and, exempt himself from that inordinate love of riches under which some of his friends laboured, he gently lashes that passion in them, quite secure from any retaliation or retort. Thus, for instance, in his Epistle from the Sabine Villa, Urbis amatores...he addresses Aristius Fuscus, pointedly enough, on the wisdom of contentment;

1 E. x. 44—46. Lætus sorte tuâ vives sapienter, Aristi :

Nec me dimittes incastigatum, ubi plura

Cogere quam satis est ac non cessare videbor.

Beautiful, however, as these expressions of personal sentiment are, and familiar to the readers of Horace, his golden maxim, NIL ADMIRARI (1 E. VI. 1) has more strongly arrested general attention, as conveying in two words the whole secret of moral wisdom; not to set the heart on objects of fanciful worth, but to form the just estimate rerum mediocriter utilium, (1 E. XVIII. 99,) that is, of the non-essentials to happiness.

By attribùting overmuch to things Less excellent. (Par. Lost, VIII. 569.)

And may we not now, on yiewing this part of Horace's character, particularly as connected with what we have seen (p. 31.) of his cheerfully participating in all rural acts of sacrifice, go a step farther still? May we not pronounce that even in that dark state of all true theology, Horace had the grateful feeling of religion, however obscurely as to the objects of it, and that he was right in the subjective gratitude, though he was wrong in the objective devotion?

The connection, from causes curious and rare, of Mæcenas's name with the town of Tivoli, has been auspicious to the developement of Horace's principal locality in that romantic spot. For not only has that admirable Ode, 3 C. xxix. Tyrrhena regum...afforded subject almost for demonstration, that Horace invited Mæcenas to dine at Tivoli: but that beautiful and from its allusion, pathetic Ode, 1 C. xx. Vile potabis, &c. according to an old tradition recorded by the commentator in Cruquius, and credited by Torrentius, was occasioned by a journey of Mæcenas into Apulia.

Mæcenas iturus in Apuliam, significavit Horatio, ei se ante profectionem convivam esse velle: cui respondet Horatius, se quidem non habere vinum generosum, sed benigno tamen animo ei exhibiturum vinum quod habebat Sabinum. De profectione in Apuliam mentio fit in Divæi codice.

On the supposition of such a journey, is it at all credible, that the prime minister would ask Horace to give him a dinner at Rome before he set out? Is it not far more natural to conceive, that Mæcenas had told his friend to expect him at Tivoli to dinner, as he would pass by the Via Valeria, (Cramer. 1. 142. 11. 260,) and that Horace on such a hint, really having a cask of Sabine wine there with so delightful a remembrance attached to it, wrote in reply the delicate and well turned invitation in that Sapphic Ode?

- datus in theatro | cum tibi plausus, &c.

One more association shall serve to connect the mention of Mæcenas as Horace's friend with that of Tivoli: for the very disputable name of Mæcenas's Villa in that place may well be discarded. The want of direct evidence for it and still more its incompatibility with the total silence of Horace, justify to my mind the rejection of such an idea without scruple and without the formality of an argument.

But for Augustus an unquestionable title may be set up, not only as an admirer of the spot, but as an occasional resident there, most probably, however, in the later years of his life. Tivoli, it is well known, was sacred to Hercules. Now amongst the favourite retirements of that Emperor, Suetonius, C. 72. reckons the proxima urbi oppida, Lanuvium, Præneste, Tibur: in the last mentioned of these towns, in porticibus Herculis templi persæpe jus dixit. Behold then the very scene, to which Mæcenas's attention was called, when Horace thought of appealing to the case of a retired veteran most like his own.

1 E. 1. 2—6. Spectatum satis, et donatum jam rude quæris, Mæcenas, iterum antiquo me includere ludo. Non eadem est ætas, non mens. Vejanius armis Herculis ad postem fixis, latet abditus agro, Ne populum extremå toties exoret arenå.

When Horace himself at Tivoli wrote thus, he had Vejanius then actually in retirement there before his eye.

And now it is high time to bring these extended remarks to the promised conclusion, or at least to show good cause for protraction if necessary.

A chronological table, then, of the principal incidents in the earlier part of Horace's life, with the years assigned by

^a Forsyth. Excursion in Italy, p. 272, ed. 1813.

Bentley for the composition of his several books, shall here be given; and that not only as a clue to guide the reader through the details of the Dissertation, but also as a help in referring to the columns of Mr. Clinton's invaluable Fasti.

It will be necessary, however, to premise, that Bentley's years of the life of Horace, here printed in Roman figures, were by him calculated in a peculiar way. Thus the year of Horace's nativity, B. c. 65. though he was born in the last month of it, in Bentley's reckoning stands as the year of his age, the year after it as 11, and so on to the end of Horace's life.

Instead of taking the natal year, Mr. Clinton makes B. c. 64. the first of his calculation, that is the current year till completed in December.

In the following happy sketch given by Horace of his character and personal history, (and it has not been adduced before,) how ingeniously does he contrive to afford the calculation of his age, by giving the year B. c. 21. though now past, from its commodiousness for expressing in verse as well the period of his own life (44) as the consular names belonging to it.

1 E. xx. 20—28. Me libertino natum patre, et in tenui re,
Majores pennas nido extendisse loqueris;
Ut quantum generi demas, virtutibus addas;
Me primis urbis belli placuisse domique;
Corporis exigui, pracanum, solibus aptum;
Irasci celerem, tamen ut placabilis essem.
Forte meum si quis te percontabitur avum,
Me quater undenos sciat implevisse Decembres,
Collegam Lepidum quo duxit Lollius anno.

No attempt is here pretended to exhibit an exact chronology of Horace's life with a regular parallel to it in the events of Roman history, and in the incidents which mark the biography of contemporary poets. A desideratum like that would demand a volume for itself. But in the chronological table subjoined to these pages, it is hoped that any historical knowledge directly required for the illustration of Horace, whenever clear intelligence can be had, will seldom be found wanting.

In the meanwhile, however, with a more critical view to the Tempora Horatiana of Bentley, it will be exceedingly necessary to keep in mind, that the years which he has determined for the composition of the several books of Horace, in his own naked statement are liable to many cavils, against which he has left neither caution nor defence. He should have told us, for instance, that in drawing up that calculation he kept his eye principally or entirely on internal marks of public history, while to dates connected, with the life or death of individuals, however distinguished. he (apparently) paid little regard, and in short that all which he engaged to do, was to fix the earliest and latest allusion of an historical kind which could be discovered in the book of Horace then before him. All this (but no more than this) he executed well and faithfully. Let us understand, therefore, what his intention exactly was: it was a negative rather than a positive determination in the dates which he ascertained.

Thus when he leaves an interval of three years betwixt XXVIII for the first book of Satires and XXXI for the second; he never could intend to say, that during those three years Horace's pen lay entirely idle: he meant (and he could mean nothing else) that the very latest historical intimation which he had been able to discover in the first book, did not fall lower down than XXVIII of Horace's age, and that the very eurliest intimation of any public event contained in the second book did not rise higher than XXXI of that calculation.

With this important qualification constantly attached to all the intervals apparent in Bentley's Tempora Horatiana, several objections immediately disappear; as others again may be overcome by considerations of a different kind.

1. And first of all, to take a strong instance.

When the death of Virgil is by Mr. Clinton assigned to B. c. 19 an acute objector may ask; how, then, could an Ode of invitation to Virgil (4 C. XII.) Jam veris comites, &c., possibly be written in any of the years B. c. 17, 15. the very cancelli within which Bentley has fixed the composition of the fourth book of Odes? My answer is this, (and Mr. Clinton thinks it just and satisfactory,) that Horace, after publishing the third book of Odes in B. C. 23 or 22, had evidently imagined his lyric labours then concluded: nor had he any design, apparently, till called upon by Augustus several years after, to resume the task of the lyre. But in the interval which ensued, what should hinder him when writing a playful and in some peculiar touches (vv. 15, 25.) rather a keen address to Virgil, from using once more the lyric stanza? Its insertion afterwards in the fourth book of Odes was all natural enough: it would else never have been known to exist. For the old Scholiast tells us on the Ode (1v) Qualem ministrum, &c. Hæc est ecloga propter quam totus hic liber compositus est. And Gesner's sensible remark who had no hypothesis to serve, has been already quoted: cum semel placuisset novum librum edere, in eum conjectum esse quidquid ad manus esset.

2. The death of Quintilius Varus Cremonensis, that incomparable critic and friend, that censor honestus, to whose integrity of advice and severity of taste the two great poets were so much indebted, is lamented by Horace in a tone of the deepest feeling and regret, 1 C. XXIV. Ad Virgilium, Quis desiderio sit pudor, &c. The year assigned to that event by Hieronymus (F. H. p. 237.) is B. c. 24.

(A. P. 438. Quintilio si quid recitares, &c.)

Now as Bentley's allowance of time for the first and second books of Odes runs down as low as B c. 25, the disagreement in this solitary example might not be valid (or might not be pleaded) against his chronology.

But it is far more candid and ingenuous at once to confess, that where any difficulties, created by the details of biography, depend on the authority of Hieronymus alone, I am rather reluctant to submit; partly, because the author of the Fasti Hellenici has himself in cases of that kind detected several inaccuracies; and partly on a more general ground of reasonable doubt. Mistakes in the dates of birth or death, &c. in a distant age, where private persons are concerned, may well be expected and excused; because without some public event or other to rest upon, such dates must often float loose as it were for want of anchorage.

3. A remarkable instance of error in the biographical dates of Hieronymus, occurs in his account of Lucilius the Poet as born B. c. 148, and as dying in 103. With this date of his birth two well attested facts are grossly at variance: the one on the authority of Velleius Paterculus, 11. 9, 4. "Celebre et Lucilii nomenfuit qui sub P. Africano Numantino bello eques militaverat," B. c. 134. in which year Lucilius, so dated, must have been a boy under age; and the other, told by Horace of his personal friendship, when already known as a bold Satirist, with the younger Scipio, who died in B. c. 129.

2 S. I. 62—74. Quid? cum est Lucilius ausus
Primus in hunc operis componere carmina morem,
Detrahere et pellem, nitidus quâ quisque per ora
Cederet, introrsum turpis; num Lælius, et qui Duxit ab oppressă meritum Carthagine nomen,
Ingenio offensi? aut læso doluere Metello,
Famosisque Lupo cooperto versibus? Atqui
Primores populi arripuit populumque tributim;
Scilicet uni æquus virtuti atque ejus amicis.
Quin ubi se a vulgo et scenă in secreta remôrant
Virtus Scipiada et mitis sapientia Læli;

Nugari enm illo, et discincti ludere, donec Decoqueretur olus, soliti.

Now all this could never be true of Lucilius, if he had been then, as the calculation would make him, barely in his nineteenth year.

Mr. H. F. Clinton is led by these and other considerations to "assume that the birth of Lucilius was a few years earlier, and his death a few years later, than the date of Hieronymus." Additions and Corrections to Vol. 111. given in Vol. 1. pp. 426, 7.

4. Still, however, supposing these points in biography to be cleared up, as we trust they are, yet on the other hand if Bentley's Chronology can be any where shown to be incompatible with well ascertained facts of history, there can be nothing left for us but to surrender at discretion.

First of all, however, a very important caveat may well claim to be admitted here.

Historical language is precise, direct and plain, free from all question or ambiguity. The allusive language of Poetry, especially where the Poet's eye is at all frenzied with pride and patriotism, beholds the future in the present and transmutes symptoms into successes.

On this hint let me have the indulgence to speak. In the year B. c. 20, and not before, F. H.p. 240. (1 E. xv111. 55. Sub duce, qui templis Parthorum signa refigit | Nunc, &c.) the standards of Crassus were actually restored by the Parthians; that is the declaration of history: but as early as B. c. 34, and long before any thing was effected about the standards, the language of Horace might lead one to suppose that satisfaction was even then on the point of being obtained. 2 S. v. 62. Tempore quo juvenis Parthis horrendus....and in the Ode (2 c. ix.) Non semper imbres.... more distinctly still.

vv. 18-22. ——et potius nova Cantemus Augusti tropæa Cæsaris ; et rigidum Niphaten, Medumque flumen gentibus additum Victis, minores volvere vortices; &c.

Horace in B. c. 25. at the latest, seems to refer to the great and memorable submission from the East as already acquired: and if it be so taken, that date of the Ode cannot be true.

But then we know the gall of bitterness in which the Roman people for so many years reflected on the disaster of Crassus;

1 C. 11. 21, 2. Audiet cives acuisse ferrum,

Quo graves Persæ melius perirent, &c.

2 C. 1. 29—32. Quis non Latino sanguine pinguior
Campus sepulchris impia prælia
Testatur, auditumque Medis
Hesperiæ sonitum ruinæ?

We may imagine the zeal therefore with which the rumours, even of any chance to retrieve that disaster, would be quickly caught up and cherished. Generally speaking, the Roman marched only to conquer; and an expedition meditated or threatened was a conquest achieved.

It is in this light accordingly we understand the prayer of Horace,

1 C. xxxv. 29—32. Serves iturum Cæsarem in ultimos Orbis Britannos, et juvenum recens Examen Eois timendum Partibus Occanoque rubro.

and the boast at a later day, but long enough before its accomplishment,

3 C. v. 1-4. Cælo tonantem credidimus Jovem Regnare: præsens Divus habebitur Augustus, adjectis Britannis Imperio gravibusque Persis.

History with correct simplicity assures us (F. H. p. 238.) that in B. c. 23. Tiridates being then at Rome, on an embassy arriving from Phraates, Augustus seized the occasion, among other peremptory points, to demand the restitution of the standards: and to the natural expectation of prompt compliance which such a demand would create, Mr. Clinton thinks may be referred the splendid stanza last quoted where hope is at once converted into certainty.

Only then allow it probable, that in an earlier year than B. c. 23. some loud and sudden report might arise from similar causes at work in that oriental scene (Geo. 11. 496. Infidos agitans discordia fratres) between the two rival princes,

1 C. xxvi. 5. Quid Tiridaten terreat . . .

2 C. 11. 17. Redditum Cyri solio Phraaten . .

Allow this probability: and after all, the nova Augusti tropæa (never literally gained, for no war ensued) may rather have been anticipated by the Poct, than require to be earlier dated by the Chronologist.

5. The localities of Horace are closely entwined with the dates of his writings; and without much scruple therefore, the following and final question here may be allowed admission, at the close of others more immediately falling under the head of Chronology.

3 C. XIII. O Fons Bandusiæ, &c.

M. de Chaupy in his Decouverte de la Maison de Campagne d'Horace, à Rome. 1769. T. III. p. 364. first announced the discovery of the words. . in Bandusino fonte apud Venusiam, &c. in a grant from Pope Pascal II. A.D. 1103; and he was not a little proud, after his manner, to demonstrate, that this fountain must have been (and that no other could be) the Fons Bandusiæ of Horace's Ode. And Mr. Hobhouse in his Illustrations of Lord Byron's Childe Harold, 1818, pp. 42, 3, rather delights in adopting so brilliant a detection.

"The Bandusian fountain is not to be looked for in the Sabine valley, but on the Lucano-Apulian border where Horace was born.

"The vicissitude which placed a Priest on the throne of the Cæsars, has ordained that a Bull of Pope Pascal the Second should be the decisive document in ascertaining the site of a fountain which inspired an Ode of Horace."

About so minute a concern long disquisitions here would be tedious and unnecessary. For in the first place, Mr. Dunlop's solution (History of Roman Literature. 1828. Vol. III. p. 213.) seems calculated to set the matter at rest very easily.

"The probability is, that Horace had named the clearest and loveliest stream of his Sabine retreat, after that fountain which lay in Apulia, and on the brink of which he had no doubt often sported in infancy."

And secondly, in confirmation of Mr. Dunlop's conjecture, I may be forgiven for inserting part of a Letter of my own on this very point of difficulty, familiarly written in the year 1824.

" Let the Fons Bandusia (now the Fonte Bello) of the Sabine valley, flow on with all its honours!

"For as to the Ode of Horace (3 C. XIII.), it tallies admirably with the idea of his christening what had no name before, after the romantic spring, which had a name, not far from Venusia, and which he had loved when a child."

" From 1 E. xvi. 12.

Fons etiam rivo dare nomen idoneus, you may perhaps gather that this fountain had no name whatever, till Horace gave it one. The rivus lower down was certainly called Digentia, now Licenza.

1 E. xvIII. 104. Me quoties reficit gelidus Digentia rivus, &c.

The classical verisimilitude of my conjecture that Horace called his Sabine fountain, from natural love and liking, after the old spring near Venusia, you can hardly deny; if you will but turn to a beautiful part of the third Æneid."

302. — falsi Simocntis ad undam.

349. 351. Procedo, et parvam Trojam, simulataque magnis
Pergama, et arentem Xanthi cognomine rivum
Agnosco, Seæaque amplector limina Portæ.

BRIEF CHRONOLOGY

OF

THE LIFE AND WRITINGS

OF

HORACE.

		Year		Authoritles
	Before Christ.	of		and allusions.
		Horace.
				2 S. 1. 34, 5.
	65		Horace born, 8 Dec. near Venusia, in the	Ер. хии. 6
			Consulship of Manlius Torquatus	3 C. xxi. 1.
			(4 C. ix. 2.
	60	5	His adventure when a child	3 C. IV. 9-20
	53	12)	Is carried by his father to Rome for education.	1 S vi 71 6
	52	135		1 15. 11. /1-0.
Ì	49	16	His father dies about this time.
ĺ	48	17	Battle of Pharsalia.
ļ			He takes the Toga Virilis.
ŀ	47	18	He goes, as to an University, to Athens	2 E. 11. 43.
	46	19	Cato, at Utica, kills himself	1 C. xII. 35, 6
	44	21	Julius Cæsar assassinated.
	43	22	Horace leaves Athens, to join the standard of	1 S. vi. 48.
			Brutus, as military tribune	2 E. 11. 46.
	42	23	calidus juventâ Consule Planco	3 C. xiv. 27, 8
			shares in the defeat at Philippi, and in the con-	2 C. vii. 7-9.
	ĺ		fiscation that followed	2 E. II. 49-51
			His friend Pompeius Varus betakes himself to
			Sextus Pompeius, then master of Sicily	2 C. vii. 15.
	41	24	In the winter 42 41 he returns to Rome, having been nearly shipwrecked off Cape Palinurus	3 C. IV. 28.
			becomes acquainted with Virgil and Varius;
			is by them introduced to Mæcenas	1 S. vi. 54, 5.
			obtains his patronage, and is admitted to his	2 ~ 111 04, 01
	- 1		friendship	Ibid. 61-2

Before	Year	The first Class of his Writings.	Authorities
Christ	of Horace.	The first book of Satires.	allu-ions.
		Years of Horace xxvi, xxvii, xxviii, R. B.
		= 25, 26, 27, Fast. Hell.
	1	в. с. 40, 39, 38, [37, 36].
		The second book of Satires.
		Years of Horacexxxi, xxxii, xxxiii. R. B.
		= 30, 31, 32, F. H.
		в. с. [37, 36,] 35, 34, 33.
38	27	In the spring, Horace enjoys the journey to
		Brundusium	1 S. v.
36	29		2 S. vi.
		War renewed with Sextus Pompeius, (dux Neptunius,) his defeat and flight afterwards
		alluded to	Ер. 1х. 7—10.
		Division of lands, towards the close of the	20  0
	20		2 S. vi. 55, 6.
33	32	The Ædileship of Agrippa	2 8. 111. 185, 6.
		The book of Epodes.
		Years of Horacexxxiv, xxxv. R. B.
		= 33, 34. F. H.
		в. с. 32, 31.
32	33	The war impending betwixt Cæsar and
		Antony	Ер. ун.
31	34	Horace desires to accompany Mæcenas to the war: the battle of Actium, Sept. 2	Ер. 1.
		On the first news of the victory he addresses
		Mæcenas	Ер. 1х.
		In this year probably Horace rents or buys
		the Cottage and Garden at Tivoli.

Befor		The second Class of his Writings.	Authorities
Chris	d. of Horace:	The first book of Odes.	and allusions.
		Years of Horacexxxvi, xxxvii, xxxviii. R. B.
		= 35, 36, 37, F. H.
		в. с. 30, 29, 28, [27.]
		The second book of Odes.
		Years of Horacexl, xli. R. B.
		= 39. 40, F. H.
		в. с. [27,] 26, 25.
		The third book of Odes.
		Years of Horacexlii, xliii. R. B.
		= 41, 42. F. H.
	1	B. c. 24, 23, [22, 21.]
30	35	Death of Antony and Cleopatra	1 C. XXXVII.
29	36	End of the civil wars: the Temple of Janus shut.
		The deliberation about restoring the republic,
			1 C. xiv.
27	38	On the Ides of January (13th) the appellation of Augustus conferred on Cæsar: in the
1		following night a storm and inundation. (vid.
		Append. iv.)	1 С. п.
		Augustus goes into Spain: he appears also to have meditated an expedition to Britain	1 C. xxxv. 30.
25	40	After the Cantabrian war, the Temple of	1 C 0 0
		Janus shut a second time by Augustus	4 C. xv. 8, 9. 3 C. xiv. & viii.
24	41	Augustus returns from the war in Spain	21, 2.
~ T	71	Tragastas returns from the war in Spain	1 E. xviii. 55, 6.
23	42	An Embassy from Parthia: allusion supposed to it	3 C. v. i. 4.
21	44	M. Lollius, the Elder, Consul: Horace com-	4 C. 1x. 1 E.
		pletes his 44th year	xx. 27, 8. 39.
1	1

Before	Year	The third Class of Horace's Writings.	Authorities
Christ.	of Horace.	The first book of Epistles.	and allusions,
		Years of HoracexLvi, xLvii. R. B.
		= 45, 46. F.H.
		в.с. [22, 21,] 20, 19, [18.]
		The Carmen Sæculare, and the fourth book of Odes.
		Years of Horacexlix, L, Li. R. B.
		= 48, 49, 50. F. H.
		в.с. [18] 17, 16, 15.
20	45	The Roman Eagles actually restored from Parthia	1 E. XVIII. 56, 7. and 2 E. 1. 256. 4 C. XV. 6 – 8.
		The Armenians subdued,
19	46	and the Cantabri finally so.
10	10	Cantaber Agrippæ, Claudi virtute Neronis
		Armenius cecidit	1 E. XII. 26.
		The Epistles III, VIII, IX. written while Tiberius is in the East, and not later than this year.
		The death of Virgil.
17	48	Ludi Sæculares, for the fifth time, celebrated.
		In this year, the Carmen Sæculare, and that prelude to it 4 C. vi. Dive, quem proles written.
15	50	Horace marks his 50th year (as 2 C. 1v. 23, 4.
		his 40th)	4 C. 1. 6.
		Augustus remains in Gaul; and reduces the Sicambri.
		His triumphal return, anticipated by Horace, did not take place till B. c. 13.	4 С. п. 33—44.
		Tiberius (Major Neronum) and Drusus sub-	4 C IV and viv
		due the Rhæti and the Vindelici	814.
	1	the the times and the thindelles manner.	0 1 T.

Before Christ-	Year	The fourth Class of Horace's Writings.
Christ.	Horace.	The second book of Epistles, containing the
1		two to Augustus Cæsar, and to Julius Florus; with the Epistle to the Pisos, called de Arte Poetica.
		ANNIS INCERTIS.
8	57	v ^{to} Kalendas Decembres,
		On the 27th of November, within a few days of completing his 57th year, Horace dies.

N.B. By the numbers here inserted in brackets as [37, 36] &c., it is intended to show, agreeably to what is already stated in p. 82, that the years left void by Bentley in his Chronology of the works might belong indifferently to the composition of the preceding or the subsequent Book.

APPENDIX I.

HORACE'S FAMILIAR DAY,

AND ROMAN CUSTOMS CONNECTED WITH IT.

In the xxvith year of his age, B.C. 39, let us date the 6th Satire of the first book, keeping in mind also, that a summer's day is the object of description, and that as he begins his story after luncheon, the cibus meridianus (Sucton-August. 78.) or prandium, so he brings us round to the same point again.

1 S. vr. 111-129.

 quâcunque libido est, Incedo solus, percontor quanti olus ac far : Fallacem circum, vespertinumque pererro Sæpe forum; assisto divinis; inde domum me Ad porri et ciceris refero laganique catinum: Coena ministratur pueris tribus; et lapis albus Pocula cum cyatho duo sustinet: astat echino Vilis cum paterâ guttus, Campana supellex. Deinde eo dormitum, non solicitus, mihi quad cras Surgendum sit mane, obeundus Marsya, qui se Vultum ferre negat Noviorum posse minoris. Ad quartam jaceo; post hanc vagor; aut ego, lecto Aut scripto quod me tacitum juvet: ungor olivo, Non quo fraudatis immundus Nacca lucernis. Ast ubi me fessum sol acrior ire lavatum Admonuit, fugio Campum lusumque trigonem. Pransus non avide, quantum interpellet inani Ventre diem durare, domesticus otior. Hæc est Vita solutorum miserà ambitione gravique.

1. Here then vv. 111-114, Horace, after a simple luncheon, instead of sauntering about at home, as at other times he might do, (v. 128. domesticus otior,) indulges in a walk into the city, careless and unattended; asks the price of gardenherbs and bread-corn; rambles about the Circus and the Forum, looking at the amusements and tricks which those places afforded, and especially stopping to observe the fortune-tellers (probably the de "circo astrologi" of Tully, de Divin. i. 58.) in the pursuit of their craft: for it must not be supposed that by the words, assisto divinis, Horace could possibly mean

"I go to church and pray,"

as Creech has most absurdly translated it; raising ideas in the mind of the reader, to which there was nothing correspondent in the religious services of Rome.

- 2. By this time, the evening hour approaches, (already v. 114. vespertinum,) and sends him home to dinner. That meal, cœna, consists of vegetable dishes and a kind of pancake: the boys who wait at table are three, evidently considered a very small number, (even ten slaves formed but a moderate familia, 1 S. 111. 12). The marble slab holds two goblets for wine and water, with a measuring-cup: by the rinsing-bowl is set an oil-cruet and a patera for libation, plain ware all of them.
- 3. After the meal thus described, in his earliest and simplest style of living at Rome, he retires to bed, free from all uneasiness as to rising betimes, because under no necessity to visit the statue of Apollo and Marsyas, that is, to attend the Courts of Justice, in the morning.
- 4. From his couch, after some hours spent as usual in study, (lecto aut scripto quod tacitum juvet,) he does not rise till towards ten: he then strolls into the Campus Martius, and prepares himself (ungor olivo) for exercise, specifically that of the pila velox or the lusus called trigon. As the day becomes too sultry, he withdraws from the Campus to bathe, doubtless in the Tiber hard by. The next and final stage of the story carries him home to his lunchcon; soon after which it was that this sketch of his familiar day first took him up.

Under these four heads there arise not a few subjects of enrious remark.

And first of the luncheon; for breakfast (jentaculum) usually they had none. With Horace, after such a morning's work as we have seen, agreeably to his own precept, 2 S. II. 14, 15.

Quum labor extuderit fastidia, siccus, inanis, Sperne cibum vilem—if you can, that meal was quite plain and merely enough for its necessary purpose, to pacify the stomach till the late dinner time.

> Pransus non avide quantum interpellet inani Ventre diem durare...vv. 127, 3.

Elsewhere he thus describes such a frugal meal,

2 S. II. 17. --- cum sale panis
Latrantem stomachum bene leniet....

which just agrees with Seneca's account, (L. XII. Epist. 84. Ed. 1573.) Panis deinde siccus et sine mensâ prandium; post quod non sunt lavandæ manus.

For the luxurious palate very different provision was made. Even fish (as from that beautiful Satire, 2 S. 11. Quæ virtus et quanta, boni.. we gather incidentally) was a requisite of the table.

yv. 16, 17. —— Foris est promus, et atrum Defendens pisces hiemat mare and the choicest wine sweetened with the finest honey formed its accompaniment.

vv. 15, 16. —— nisi Hymettia mella Falerno Ne biberis diluta.

The learned Professor of Gastronomy (2 S. 1v. Unde et quo Catius?) gravely advises to finish with mulberries gathered in the morning.

vv. 21—23. ——— Ille salubres

Æstates peraget, qui nigris prandia moris

Finiet, ante gravem quæ legerit arbore solem.

But instead of so strong a wine mixed with honey, which he very rationally condemns, we have a weaker mixture (mulsum) recommended.

vv. 24—27. Aufidius forti miscebat mella Falerno,

Mendose: quoniam vacuis committere venis

Nil nisi lene decet: leni præcordia mulso

Prolueris melius.

In passing next to the dinner, the time of it deserves our first attention. Horace, who professed (2 S. v11. 23.) to admire the mores antiquæ plebis, agreeably to that profession and to the still general custom, dined at a late hour. So did the lawyers, whether the Consultus juris or the Actor cansarum, A. P. 369, 70; whose business either in the courts or at their own houses, kept them engaged till the evening. What says Horace to a supposed aspirant?

1 E. vi. 20. Gnavus mane forum, et respertinus pete tectum.
and thus in his invitation to Manlius Torquatus:

1 E. v. 3. Supremo te sole domi, Torquate, manebo.

id. 30, 1. Tu quotus esse velis, rescribe: et rebus omissis Atria servantem postico falle clientem.

Such was the case with all persons, who either would not or could not sacrifice business to pleasure. In conformity with that principle, Mæcenas also adhered to the old custom.

2 S. vii. 32-34. ———— Jusserit ad se

Mæcenas scrum sub lumina prima venire Convivan....

are the words of Davus to his master.

And hence it comes, that whenever an early hour in that age is mentioned, some imputation is conveyed also of indulgence and excess: for luxury in the higher ranks had, for prolongation of convivial enjoyment, gradually carried back the hour of dining towards the middle of the day. Without pretending to trace the origin and progress of fashion in this respect, we may appeal to Tully's authority about 45 B. c. as apparently decisive that three was then a fashionable hour for the voluptuous.

Epist. ad Divers. 1x. 26. Accubueram horâ nonâ, cum ad te harum exemplum in codicillis exaravi. Dices, ubi? apud Volumnium Eutrapelum; et quidem supra me Atticus, infra Verrius, familiares tui. Miraris tam exhilaratam esse servitutem nostram Infra Eutrapelum Cytheris accubuit, &c. &c.

At the time that Horace wrote the second book of Satires (B. c. 34.) it should appear from his account of that famous entertainment, 2 S. viii. Ut Nasidieni, &c., that the luxurious hour for dining must have been at least as early as one or two: what he says to Fundanius, who was in the number of the guests on that day, even with some allowance for hyperbole, can hardly be otherwise interpreted.

Nam mihi quærenti convivam dictus here illic De medio potare die.....

Long after, in the age of Martial, three had become the regular hour. Epigram. iv. 8.

Imperat extructos frangere nona toros.....

and Juvenal mentions, evidently with severity of remark, the practice of Marius to begin at tico.

Sat. 1. 49, 50. Exul ab octavá Marius bibit, et fruitur Diis Iratis....

Thus much for the hour at which Horace usually took his dinner. On the constituents of his humble meal enough has been said elsewhere, Prel. Diss. pp. 56—58. It is not to be denied, however, that from this habitual average both of diet and of time he frequently deviated; but the confession of gaieties and follies in the following characteristic passage, from the mention of his favourite but short-lived Cinara, (4 C. XIII. 21, 2. Cinaræ breves | Annos fata dederunt.) may be received as belonging to a brief period only in the heyday of his life.

1 E. xiv. 32—36. Quem tenues decuere togæ nitidique capilli, Quem scis immunem Cinare placuisse rapaci, Quem bibulum liquidi medià de luce Falerni, Cœna brevis juvat, et prope rivum somnus in herbâ; Nec lusisse pudet, sed non incidere ludum. [sc. puderet.]

For a specimen of his company and the preparations for their entertainment, that delightful Epistle to Torquatus (1 E. v. Si potes Archiacis...) happily supplies so much of particular and interesting description; that it may be as well to present the following extracts to the reader's eye.

vv. 4-6. Vina bibes iterum Tauro diffusa palustres Inter Minturnas Sinuessanumque Petrinum. Sin melius quid habes, arcesse, vel imperium fer.

v. 7. Jamdudum splendet focus, et tibi munda supellex

vv. 9—11. —— cras nato Cæsare festus

Dat veniam somnumque dies; impune licebit
Æstivam sermone benigno tendere noctem.

vv. 21—26. Hæc ego procurare et idoneus imperor, et non Invitus; ne turpe toral, ne sordida mappa Corruget nares; ne non et cantharus et lanx Ostendat tibi te; ne fidos inter amicos Sit qui dicta foras eliminet; ut coëat par Jungaturque pari.

Here first of all we have an example of good-natured arrangement proposed betwixt the host and his principal guest: "you hear what kind of wine I profess to give: if you have any better, order it to my house: [arccssc—ad me. Vet. Schol.] or be content with what I offer you."

With Virgil again we shall find him playfully bargaining to produce a finer and costlier wine on condition of his friend's bringing to the dinner a richer perfume. (The costliness of unguents in that age may be estimated by their being one of the common causes of ruin to the vain and the gay. 1 E. XVIII. 22. Gloria quem supra vires et vestit et unguit.)

4 C. XII. 17, 18. Nardi parvus onyx eliciet cadum, Qui nunc Sulpiciis accubat horreis.

Catullus on the contrary (XIII. Canabis bene, mi Fabulle, apud me) offers the very choicest perfume to Fabullus, if he will bring the materials of a good dinner along with him

Another variety of good fellowship is presented to us in that Ode 3 C. xix. Quantum distet ab Inacho... where the Poet incidentally gives the principal requisites of a dinner, for which the richest wine was to be purchased at the common expense, Quo Chium pretio cadum | Mercemur: what friend's house was to have the preference, Quo præbente domum; and as it was a day in winter, the provision of a warm room against an assigned hour, Qutoâ | Pelignis carcam frigoribus; form other points of consideration. The words, Quis aquam temperet ignibus, in such a context can bear but one meaning, that on a wintry day they would naturally mingle hot water with their wine. The "calidæ gelidæque minister" of Juvenal (S. v. 63.) would have had but half his province on a day like that in the very depth of winter.

The 7th line of the Epistle Jandudum... forcibly reminds one of the Ode to Mæcenas, (3 C. xxix.) by that expressive word, but still more by contrast in the preparation there made by the Poet to receive his patron.

vv. 2-5. Non ante verso lene merum cado Cum flore, Mæcenas, rosarum, et where for once his invitation includes choice wine, garlands of roses, and unguents of exquisite odour, such articles as never occur in like manner mentioned elsewhere.

Pressa tuis balanus capillis Jamdudum apud me est. . . .

The lines next quoted from the Epistle serve incidentally to show, that Horace for that year at least staid in the city over the birth-day of the Great Julius; then observed as a dies festus by cessation from business and affording opportunity in its eve for a longer night of cheerfulness than his friend the lawver could otherwise have enjoyed. The day itself (F. H. B. c. 100) fell on the 12th of July, quarto Idus Quintiles: and on the preceding evening the sun would set at Rome nearly at seven o'clock of our reckoning. This particular may here deserve notice, if it be only to introduce one remark; that as the natural or solar day with them was divided into twelve hours (from the 1st to the x11th) of different length at different seasons, I may be excused in trusting to the intelligence of the reader for more exact calculation, whenever in these pages the Roman hour is assumed generally as answering to our own, on the well known scale, at the time of the Equinox.

> Libra die somnique pares ubi fecerit horas. Geo. i. 208.

The remaining lines of the Epistle sufficiently exemplify that charm of the mundæ pauperum cænæ, superadded to the more essential taste in selecting a party of congenial spirits; which to the humble triclinium of Horace, neat but narrow, (such the lecti of Archias's making seem to have been,) must have imparted a peculiar attraction, beyond the purchase of luxury and opulence.

In the usual arrangements of his time, Horacc never appears to have been what we call a late sitter-up for literary purposes: nor was such the general custom of the Romans. Of Augustus, however, the contrary practice is recorded (Sucton. in August. 78.) partly for the completion of his regular journal, and partly from his dislike, as a bad sleeper perhaps, to early rising. A coenâ lucubratoriam se in lecticulam recipiebat... Matutinâ vigiliâ offendebatur.

To his morning studies Horace must have paid assiduous application, as we see him on his couch ad quartam engaged in the lucubratio matutina; and again when appealing to his own habits in the cultivation of self-knowledge, towards the conclusion of that admirable Satire,

1 S. IV. 133, 4. ——— neque enim, cum lectulus aut me Porticus excepit, desum mili.

Elsewhere too, at a much later period of life, he playfully tells of himself.

2 E. i. 111—113. Ipse ego qui nullos me affirmo scribere versus, Invenior Parthis mendacior; et prius orto Sole vigil, calamum ct charlas et serinia posco.

And in the hortatory address to his young friend Lollius, when he solemnly recommends the task of moral reflection; the morning hour, as a matter of course, is mentioned for that purpose.

• 1 E. 11. 32—37. Ut jugulent hominem, surgunt de nocte latrones;
Ut teipsum serves, non expergisceris? Atqui
Si noles sanus, curres hydropicus: et ni
Posces ante diem librum cum lumine, si non
Intendes animum studiis et rebus honestis;
Invidià vel amore vigil torquebere.

Before we dismiss this description of Horace's familiar day, which has unavoidably run to a great length of detail, two or three additional remarks may suffice to conclude the subject.

A course of daily life like that here delineated could hardly be supposed to glide along without considerable varieties. One such, and of frequent occurrence probably, is presented to us in the Satire, 1 S. IX. Ibam forte Viâ sucrâ... Horace must have taken that walk into the city some two hours before the usual time that he quitted his morning couch: for when he and his tormentor had gone as far as the Temple of Vesta, the fourth part of the day then having clapsed (v. 35. quartâ jam parte diei | Præteritâ) it would be nine o'clock of our reckoning; which seems to involve a different disposition of the forenoon altogether.

Nor are we to imagine that Horace did not occasionally take his share abroad in the morning duties of common life. The officiosa sedulitas in attending levees (1 E. vn. 8.) and the opella forensis in giving bail for a friend, &c. (ibid.) were certainly not unknown to him. For the salutandi plures (1 S. vi. 101.) is what he deprecates as one of the troubles consequent on the supposition of a higher parentage; and the words, 2 S. vi. 27. quod mi obsit, clare certumque locuto, after answering in the court, to my own detriment, perhaps, may fairly attest that his good nature now and then intangled him in the losses which proverbially belong to suretyship in all ages of the world. A kindhearted man like Horace, therefore, would understand very well what it meant,

A. P. v. 423. Spondere levi pro paupere . . .

nor could he to the supposed son of opulence have put the touching question, had he not felt his own heart experimentally alive on that very key.

2 S 11, 103. Cur eget indignus quisquam, te divite ?

His bathing as here stated, in the river Tiber, was what followed the forenoon exercise, in the Campus, of a young man, and at that season of the year;

2 S. 1. 7, 8. —— Ter uncti

Transnanto Tiberim, somno quibus est opus alto.

3 C. XII. 9. Simul unctos Tiberinis humeros lavit in undis.

And it must therefore be carefully distinguished from the common use of the warm bath (balneum), at all seasons, which took place in the afternoon, immediately before dinner.

Though in his familiar day at Rome, before he got the Sabine estate, he represents himself as usually dining alone; yet after that accession to his means, we find him for the sake of society frequently entertaining certain persons who were glad to earn a dinner by their wit. Thus, as Maccenas at the entertainment given by Nasidienus took with him his umbree the two scurree, Servilius and Vibidius, (2 S. VIII. 21, 2,) so Horace at home had similar dependents on his hospitality. Such was the fashion of the day: and the description is ludicrous enough, of the parasites going off without their errand, whenever the Patron on the sudden sent for the Poet to dine with him at a late hour on the Esquiline Hill.

2 Ş. vii. 36. Milvius et scurræ, tibi non referenda precati, Discedunt.

If it be asked whether the habits of the rural population in respect of their meals corresponded to the mores antiquee plebis of the city, it may be briefly answered, with some probability, in the affirmative. Martial, for instance, allusively represents the wife of the great Curius in that early age,

vi. 64. ——dum prandia portat aranti :

and to this traditional story of the luncheon we may fairly subjoin Horace's contemporary account of the principal meal or cœna at the close of the day's work.

In Horace's age, it is here asserted, that the Romans usually took no breakfast. Of such a point minuter examination for different periods may well be excused. From the epigrams of Martial, however, while it appears, that for general use he recommends the caseus Vestinus, (x111. 31,) we also learn that boys rising at a very early hour had that allowance in a cake or biscuit made for the purpose.

xiv. 223. Surgite, jam vendit pueris jentacula pistor, Cristatæque sonant undique lucis aves.

At the other end of the day, the genuine debauch of the luxurious was not completed without a final carouse, which also had its proper appellation; and in Suetonius's Life of Vitellius (§ 13.) we are informed, that the imperial gourmand sometimes contrived to dispatch the whole four, "facile omnibus sufficiens vomitandi consuetudine," though with him every meal was a feast. That quaternion and the order of it, in a fictitious line to aid the memory, may thus be expressed:

Jentuculum, dein prandium, post canam comissatio.

APPENDIX II.

ON THE SABINE VALLEY AND THE SECOND EPODE.

"Strictness of morals and cheerful contentedness were the peculiar glory of the Sabellian mountaineers, but especially of the Sabines and the four northern cantons: this they preserved long after the ancient virtue had disappeared at Rome from the hearts and the demeanour of men."—Niebuhr's Rome, Vol. I. ch. vi. v. 85.

OF the second Epode

Beatus ille, qui procul negotiis. . .

I have already spoken, P. D. 29, as in its general character drawn from Horace's personal acquaintance with the Vale of Licenza: and this is true of the local as well as of the moral features. The rural picture however, though generally sketched from his own valley, is not so much the veritable portrait of one scene as a composition landscape from many. Thus, the vine and the olive, vv. 9—12; 55, 6 though not then grown there, P. D. 33, are introduced by the painter to enrich his tablet; while the same old ilea of which it is said elsewhere, l E. xv1. 10. — multâ dominum juvat umbrâ, evidently belonged to the spot, and gave its occasional shade to the reclining Poet.

vv. 23, 4. Libet jacere modo sub antiquâ ilice, Modo in tenaci gramine.

For the materials of full and exact description, indeed, we must look to that Epistle, 1 E. xvi. Ne percenteris... and to part of xiv, Villice, sylvarum... as well as to 2 S. vi. Hoverat in votis...; sources of information, without which many circumstances brought forward in the former part of these pages must have remained unknown to us. Whenever Horace touches the subject, he marks it with some trait of peculiarity; and in that view the following passage also may be here adduced.

1 E. x. 6. —— ego laudo ruris amoni Rivos et musco circumlita saxa nemusque, as being certainly descriptive of the Sabine valley; and not of Tivoli, to which place even Fuscus, the urbis amator, would hardly deny the merit of its commanding beauties.

The delineation of rural life demands a larger share of our notice. It has been already remarked, P. D. 29, that in the Sabine country Horace never describes any immoralities nor alludes to any as existing there. In the person of his Alfius, and in reference to such intrigues and profligacy, as then too much belonged to the city character,

vv. 37, 8. Quis non malarum quas amor curas habet, Hec inter obliviscitur?

he converts the exemption from those evils into a theme of positive gratulation.

In a similar tone, indeed, but on a larger scale, we find Horace in the Ode 3 C. XXIV. Intactis opulentior . . contrasting the moral superiority, so supposed, of the rude Scythian over the cultivated citizen of Rome, vv. 9, 11. Campestres melius Seytha.

* * *

Vivunt, et rigidi Getæ. . .

while the great Tacitus more fully and with greater spirit, as that period warranted, pursues the same topic, in his comparison of civil with savage life. But both the Poet and the Philosopher are evidently led by their strong dislike of Roman vices to overcharge their eulogy of Barbarian virtues. The latter in many parts of his Germany has,

in fact, left us rather an oblique and grave satire on his Countrymen than a well authenticated panegyric on the Germans.

It is not, therefore, from high-flown praises like these bestowed on the uncivilized character in spite, as it were, to the degeneracy of the civilized, that one would think of deriving any trustworthy evidence to exalt the rural population of Italy. To the testimony of Virgil and of Horace also, on the other hand, when directly and sincerely lauding that moral excellence which they had themselves witnessed in the country people around them, no exception can be taken. Beyond recording the plain truth, as in itself delightful to contemplate, they could have no intelligible motive for overcolouring the picture, except in the pure and patriotic love of those natural virtues which after all formed the true basis of the greatness and the glory of Rome.

It is unnecessary to call the reader's mind to the whole of that splendid passage which forms the conclusion of the second Georgic, v. 459, O fortunates nimium . . . but for illustration of our present purpose these detached pieces may suffice.

- 513 -515. Agricola incurvo terram dimovit aratro:

 Hinc anni labor: hinc patriam parvosque nepotes

 Sustinet: hinc armenta boum, meritosque juvencos.
 - 523, 4. Interea dulces pendent circum oscula nati: Casta pudicitiam servat domus.

And then, how masterly, how complete, in detail as in principle, is the interior which he has here painted!

En. viii. 407-413 Inde ubi prima quies medio jam noctis abactaCurriculo expulerat somnum, cum femina primnm,
Cui tolerare colo vitam tenuique Minervâ
Impositum, cinerem et sopitos suscitat ignes,
Noctem addens operi; famulasque ad lumina longo
Exercet penso; castam at servare cubile
Conjugis, et possit parros educere natos.

To this animated picture from Virgil, here is a pendant from Horace, distinctly and spiritedly done with a few vivid touches.

Ep. 11, 39—44. Quod si pudica mulier in partem juvet
Domum atque dulces liberos,
(Sabina qualis, aut perusta solibus
Pernicis uxor Appuli,)
Sacrum et vetustis exstruat lignis focum
Lassi sub adventum viri.

Then too, in that Ode, 3 C. vt. Delicta majorum . . . after lamenting the profligate manners of high life in his own day, what a noble turn does the solemn reflection take, when he thus reverts to the greatest of Roman victories, and to that discipline of the rustic home and parentage, which formed the future soldier to achieve them!

vv. 33—46. Non his juventus orta parentibus
Infecit æquor sanguine Punico,
Pyrrhumque et ingentem cecidit
Antiochum Annibalemque dirum:
Sed rusticorum mascula militum
Proles, Sabellis docta ligonibus
Versare glebas, et severæ
Matris ad arbitrium recisos
Portare fustes; sol ubi montium
Mutaret umbras, et juga demeret
Bobus fatigatis, amicum
Tempus agens abeunte curru.

APPENDIX III.

ON MÆCENAS AND THE FIRST ODE OF THE FIRST BOOK.

"Mæcenas was the wisest counsellor, the truest friend, both of his prince and his country, the best governor of Rome, the happiest and ablest negotiator, the best judge of learning and virtue, the choicest in his friends, and thereby the happiest in his conversation, that has been known in story: and, I think, to his conduct in civil and Agrippa's in military affairs may be truly ascribed all the fortunes and greatness of Augustus, so much celebrated in the world."—Sir W. Temple, Upon the Gardens of Epicurus, &c.

MECENAS as personally connected with Horace, will form the limited subject of this article. The connection of that great minister with the affairs of Rome belongs to Roman history, or to a very ample biography of the Statesman at once and the Patron of literature. In the latter view, the Mæcenas of J. H. Meibomius, sive de C. Cilnii Mæcenatis vita, moribus, et rebus gestis, liber singularis. 1653. presents a vast collection of interesting materials, which might however have been more happily disposed.

Of Horace's first introduction to the acquaintance and favour of Mæcenas, P. D. p. 58; of his being enriched by him with a Rus and Villula in the Sabine Valley, p. 21; of his earnestly begging to share the dangers of the war along with him, p. 34; of his invitation to his noble friend in that grand Ode, Tyrrhena regum ... p. 41; of Mæcenas as the Patron and only Patron of Horace, p. 58; and of the association of his name with Horace and Tivoli, p. 79; enough has been said on the several occasions here referred to. But the personal connection of these illustrious men, even within the bounds so prescribed, will admit of many topics variously calculated to illustrate the merits of the one and the gratitude of the other.

Singularly enough, the first mention in point of time perhaps, which the pen of Horacc has left of Maccenas, and certainly the very last introduction of his name, (to say nothing of 2 C. XVII. Cur me querelis... and of all the intermediate demonstrations,) bear striking testimony to the early and late affection, which united the Patron to the Poet on terms of the most familiar attachment.

Thus, in 1 S. 111. Omnibus hoc vitium est... Horace has to display the perverseness with which an uncandid construction of character is too often indulged; and he exemplifies in his own case the offence which persons, less generous and less judicious than Mæcenas, would have taken at such freedom as the Statesman when interrupted bore with perfect good humour.

vv. 63-66. Simplicior quis, et est, qualem me sæpe libenter
Obtulerim tibi, Mæcenas, ut forte legentem
Aut tacitum impellat quovis sermone molestus?
Communi sensu plane caret, inquimus.

After the continuance for five and twenty years of a friendship begun in such a spirit, and at a period of his writings (P.D.) when new topics for direct address could hardly be expected, Horace thus beautifully and not the less so for the oblique way of introducing it, in the Ode to Phyllis, marks the celebration of Mæcenas's birth-day.

4 C. xi, 13-20. Ut tamen nòris quibus advoceris
Gaudiis; Idus tibi sunt agenda,
Qui dies mensem Veneris marinæ
Findit Aprilem;
Jure solennis mihi, sanctiorque
Pæne natali proprio; quod ex hâc
Luce Maccenas meus affluentes
Ordinat annos.

Of that genuine frankness, the touchstone by which sincerity betwixt two friends may be tested, we have already witnessed (P. D. 75.) an admirable proof; where Horace remonstrates with Mæcenas on his protracted absence in the country having been made the subject of complaint. In the following lines,

1 E. 1. 94-105.

Si curatus inæquali tonsore capillos
Occurri, rides : si forte subucula pexæ
Trita subest tunicæ, vel si toga dissidet impar,
Rides. Quid, mea cum pugnat sententia secum?
Quod petiit, spernit; repetit quod nuper omisit?
Æstnat et vitæ disconvenit ordine toto?
Diruit, ædificat, mutat quadrata rotundis?
Insanire putas solennia me, neque rides,
Nec medici credis nec curatoris egere
A prætore dati; rerum tutela mearum
Cum sis, et prave sectum stomacheris ob unguem
De te pendentis, te respicientis amici.

we discover a yet bolder tone of expostulation, but involving at the close an acknowledgment of deep and cordial devotedness which only such a benefactor by a long series of kindness could have created; while protestation like this from Horace against Mæcenas for inconsistency (somewhat overcharged, perhaps) in showing such extreme nicety as to the proprieties of his dress and so little solicitude as to the prudence and sanity of his conduct, may well be recorded as the result of a freedom accumulated during the intimacy of many years.

With the advantage of such dispositions on the one side and the other, no wonder that the relationship of the major and the minor amicus proceeded so happily. And Horace, who with excellent sense could instruct Scæva and Lollius (1 E. XVII. XVIII.) how to live with the great, avoiding offence and maintaining respectability, would himself in the Palace of Mæcenas easily steer without a pilot.

But not only was the personal character of Mæcenas in this relation of the man of rank to the man of genius all that friendship could desire: the whole plan of his select establishment (Præsertim cautum dignos assumere, pravâ Ambitione procul, 1 S. vi. 51.) was marked with liberality and wisdom, and admitted of no cabal, of no rivalry whatsoever.

1 S. 1x. 49-52. — Domus hâc nec purior ulla est,

Nec magis his aliena malis : nil mî officit unquam,

Ditior hic, aut est quia doctior; est locus uniCuique suus.

In other great families, the bane of such intrigues, we know, demanded all the caution of an experienced adviser to warn the young Comes against it.

1 E. XVIII. 78—83. Fallimur, et quondam non dignum tradimus: ergo
Quem sua culpa premet, deceptus omitte tneri;
Ut penitus notum, si tentent crimina, serves,
Tuterisque tuo fidentem præsidio: qui
Dente Theonino cum circumroditur, ecquid
Ad te post paulo ventura pericula sentis?

Of Mæcenas's general vigilance and high talents as a statesman, (in that office, pluribus laboribus jactatus, Tacit. Annal. xiv. 53,) history may be left to speak: but to the same point Horace from personal knowledge incidentally testifies in so strong a manner, that in justice to both parties his evidence should be brought forward.

Mæccnas's common hour of dining, we have already seen, on Horace's authority, (App. 1. p. 98,) was late in the day, and evidently so for the sake of public business: when that was over, if he wanted the society of a cheerful friend, a hasty invitation from the Esquiline was sent down to Horace. His being one of the party at Rufus's very early dinner, (App. 1. p. 99,) we must consider as a deviation from usual practice, which at times could not well be avoided.

Both from that Epistle (1 E. vii. Quinque dies...) and that Ode (3 C. xxix. Tyrrhena regum...) it appears that Maccenas remained at his post in the city during the worst month, that of August, and over it.

In the former, Horace descants on the dangers to others which he had not the strength or the courage to encounter himself.

vv. 3-6. Si me vivere vis sanum recteque valentem;

Quam mihi das ægro, dabis ægrotare timenti,

Mæcenas, veniam; dum ficus prima calorque
Designatorem decorat lictoribus atris.

In the latter, Horace when inviting Mæcenas to Tivoli, as we have seen, (P. D. 79.) thus marks the sultriness of the season, and the political anxieties which engaged him at Rome.

vv. 17—20. Jam clarus occultum Andromedæ pater Ostendit ignem ; jam Procyon furit, Et stella vesani Leonis, Sole dies referente siccos.

vv. 25-28. Tu, civitatem quis deceat status,
Curas; et urbi solicitus times,
Quid Seres et regnata Cyro
Bactra parent Tanaisque discors.

On a different occasion, (3 C. vIII. Martiis cwlebs..) when Horace invites his noble friend to join him on the calends of March in commemorating his deliverance from that peril of the tree, after showing in the Stanzas, vv. 17—24.

Mitte civiles super urbe curas....

that he had no cause then for alarm in the aspect of foreign affairs, the Poet concludes with exhorting him in his unofficial capacity, privatus, to enjoy a brief respite (must not the passage be so interpreted?) from attention otherwise due to the interests of clients and friends.

vv. 25-28. Negligens, ne quâ populus laboret,
Parce privatus nimium cavere:
Dona præsentis cape lætus horæ, et
Linque severa.

From the view taken of Mæcenas on this broad scale, let us turn to that Odc of dedication, by which more than by any other tribute to his name he has hitherto been so well known to the admirers of Horace.

The Ode (1 C. I. Maccenas atavis..) has very much laboured under one misinterpretation and one false lection which may deserve the regard of the critical reader.

I. In the text of this edition, the lines which follow.. evehit ad Deos, with a full stop after those words, stand thus punctuated.

vv. 7—14. Hune si mobilium turba Quiritium
Certat tergeminis tollere honoribus;
Illum, si proprio condidit horreo
Quidquid de Libycis verritur areis;
Gaudentem patrio findere sarculo
Agros, Attalicis conditionibus
Nunquam dimoveas, ut trabe Cypriâ
Myrtoum pavidus nauta secet mare.

If the true sense, as received by many editors, be determined by that punctuation, it may be asked: how came the passage ever to be interpreted otherwise? I feel no scruple then in imputing to two distinct causes all the error into which any of the commentators have been misled: partly, to their not being aware that Gaudentem...is justly employed to designate a separate character, Him who delights (like Desiderantem quod satis est. . 3 C. 1. 25, Him who bounds his desire by a competency; Fulgentem imperio... 3 C. xvi. 31. Him who has the splendid government, &c., &c.), and yet more, to the disregard of a great peculiarity frequent enough in the best Greck and Latin authors; namely, that after two or more specific subjects of thought are expressed, they do not seek, as modern nicety requires, some such mode of concluding the sentence, as may belong in common to all the notions that precede, but boldly and almost carclessly conclude it with what is strictly proper to that subject only which comes immediately last.

This observation will of course be made more intelligible by two or three clear examples, and those from Horace, than by all the definition in the world.

In the following passage for instance,

2 S. 11. 10—13.

——Vel, si Romana fatigat
Militia assuetum Græcari, seu (A) pila velox,
Molliter austerum studio fallente laborem,
Seu te (B) discus agit, (b) pete cedentem aëra disco:

it is evident, that whereas the preamble supposes two kinds of game, the pila and the discus, the exercise of the latter is expressly inculcated, that of the former is virtually understood.

Let us proceed to a second case.

3 C. 11. 6—11.

——illum ex mænibus hosticis

Matrona (A) bellantis tyranni

Prospiciens, et adulta virgo (B),

Suspiret, Eheu! ne rudis agminum

Sponsus (b) lacessat regius asperum

Tactu leonem......

In this scene, one of highly poetic conception, the royal mother has no correlative object of apprehension separately assigned: the virgo has, her betrothed prince.

That Ode to Fortune (1 C. xxxv. O Diva, gratum....) will furnish another instance.

vv. 9-16. Te Dacus asper, te profugi Scythæ,
Urbesque, gentesque, et Latium ferox,
Regumque matres barbarorum, et
Purpurei metuunt tyranni,
Injurioso ne pede prorusa
Stantem columnam, neu populus frequens
Ad arma cessantes, ad arma
Coucitet, imperiumque frangat.

Here, all the parties recounted have their causes of alarm in the vicissitudes of fate: but that cause which belongs to the two last, and that alone, the dread of popular insurrection, is specifically developed.

In the passage which it is our object here to elucidate, there are three different characters proposed who are not to be tempted from their respective attachments, the proud candidate for public honours, the already rich importer at home of corn from Libya, and the contented yeoman

Paterna rura bobus exercens suis.

The splendid prize of temptation offered to each is wealth "beyond the dreams of avarice," but only to be won by his becoming a nauta, i.e. the adventurous mercator on the dangerous main. And here evidently enough, abhorrence at that offer, clogged with such a condition, would most naturally strike the third character described; being hardly attributable in the same degree to either of the preceding parties, since, to gain ulterior ends of ambition or opulence, even they might possibly be allured by so magnificent a prospect.

When the passage is once placed in this clear and satisfactory light, it seems quite wonderful how the true interpretation, which turns on Gaudentem, (as old at least as the time of Glarcanus,) could ever have been so strangely missed, and modes to evade it, by otherwise interpreting the earlier part of the Ode, with such perverse ingenuity devised.

- II. The true reading at v. 29. of TE doctarum... on necessity arising from internal evidence, against ME and the MSS., after the assent of scholars generally given, may now take its place as it were by acclamation. The following brief hints in favour of it, being partly novel also, may not be unacceptable.
- 1. To the interrogation of J. Jones, who edited Horace in 1736. "Si jam Dits mistus esset superis Horatius, cur se Mæcenatis suffragio cohonestari cuperet?" nothing like a sufficient answer ever has been or can be given.

- 2. The antithetic use of Te and Me in the passage before us obviously breathes the favourite manner of Horace, particularly in concluding his pieces. Take as three instances, 1 C. XII. 53. 57. Ille... Te. 2 C. XVI. 33. 37. Te... mihi. 4 C. II. 53. 54. Te... Me. Other examples may be easily found.
- 3. Elsewhere, Horace appropriates, for lyrie poetry, not the ivy, but the bay, both to himself and to Pindar.

2 C. vii. 19. Depone sub lauru meâ.

3 C. xxx. 15, 16. et mihi Delphicâ $Lauro\ {\it cinge}\ {\it volens}\ {\it Melpomene}\ {\it comam}.$

4 C. 11. 9. Laureâ donandus Apollinari.

4. To the term doctarum and the propriety of its application no objection can be raised: for Mæcenas again and again is addressed by Horace with the high compliment of elegant learning. That qualification, united with rank and generosity like his, rendered him what his very name now indicates, the excellent Patron of excellent Poets.

But is Diis miscent superis, so applied, objectionable? What language then do we find in Virgil? To Pollio, at once his critic and his patron, tamquam Deo, he meditates sacrifice.

Bucol, 111, 84, 5.

Pollio amat nostram, quamvis est rustica, musam : Pierides, vitulam lectori pascite vestro.

5. Again, should any impropriety be alleged in giving the hedera to Mæcenas as the Patron of literature and the Man of taste; two authorities for such application from a Poet and a Scholar of our own, Mr. Pope and Dr. Bentley, the more striking for being quite unintentional, shall here be adduced.

Essay on Criticism, vv. 705, 6.

[&]quot;Immortal Vida! on whose honour'd brow The Port's bays and Critic's ivy grow."

Dedication of Horace to Lord Oxford, towards the end.

Si quæris subscribi statuis Pater Academiarum; si dicto Principis fidem imples, quo Literatorum Fautor publice audivisti; hæe Te cura quandoque tangat: hæe edera inter olivas tuas circum tempora Tibi serpat.

Whoever wishes for more of literary disquisition on the merits of this question, and on the much disputed point who it was that originally suggested the reading TE, is referred to Quæstiones Venusinæ, No. VI. Gent. Mag. Sept. and Dec. 1835, and Jan. 1836; to Dr. James Douglas's very learned Dissertation on the first Ode, in the British Museum, (King's Library, 4 Y. 3); and above all to F. A. Wolf, Analecta Literaria, Vol. I. pp. 261—276. and Vol. 11. pp. 282, 3. 566—571.

To Wolf, also, (Vol. I. p. 266, Note,) before dismissing the subject, let my obligation be acknowledged for pointing out from Murctus the true sense of v. 20, in the first Ode, certainly not in general correctly understood.

"Demere partem de solido die, sine ulla dubitatione est meridiari, i.e. ipso meridie horam unam aut alteram dormire; quod qui faciunt, diem quodammodo frangunt et dividunt, neque eum solidum et ὁλόκληρον esse patiuntur. Varro alicubi (de R. R. 1, 2, 5.) vocat diem diffindere insiticio somno." Muret. Opp. T. 1. p. 530. [Ed. Ruhnken.]

An oft quoted passage from Tully presents us with several curious particulars in a very small compass, the lucubratio relinquished and the meridiatio adopted, B. c. 44. during his stay in the country.

Nunc quidem propter intermissionem forensis operæ, et lucubrationes detraxi, et meridiationes addidi, quibus uti antea non solebam.—2 De Divinat, 142.

APPENDIX IV.

ON AUGUSTUS CÆSAR AND THE SECOND ODE, JAM SATIS TERRIS.

The notion of this well-known poem having been written on account of the prodigies which followed the assassination of Julius Cæsar, it is hardly necessary to refute; if it be but for a moment recollected, that Horacc himself was at Athens in that year (B. c. 44.) and in the following years was serving under Brutus, as tribunus militum. The argument of Sanadon, (following up a suggestion of Dacier,) who grounds it on facts recorded by Dio, seems to afford as complete a satisfaction perhaps, as such a question in this age can well admit.

That historian informs us, (L. LIII. 16, 20.) that in the night of that day, the Ides of January, B. c. 27, on which the high appellation of Augustus was conferred on Octavianus Cæsar, the Tiber swollen (after a thunderstorm probably enough) overflowed the lower parts of Rome with a tremendous inundation. Whatever prognostic of Augustus's future greatness might, if Dio reports it aright, be formed by soothsayers, Horace appears to have been led into a very different train of sombre reflection. He construes that awful visitation into a divine call for new measures to expiate the accumulated guilt of so continued a civil war. Scelus expiare (it is most justly remarked by Gesner) hic non est punire interfectores Cæsaris; hoc olim factum erat, satisque parentatum illi sanguine tot hominum: sed purgare a scelere, ab impietate bellorum civilium, rempublicam, et pace firmare atque concordia. Hæc res cum humanis viribus major videatur, Deorum alicui negotium uti det Jupiter, rogant Romani, ut Apollini, &c.

Thus interpreted, the only passage which might subject Horace to any charge of seeming to prompt vindictive severity against his own comrades at Philippi, falls to the ground; and the sentiments which he expresses on other occasions at that period of his life, will be found in perfect harmony with the explication here given.

In the Ode before us, his lamentation embraces all parties. v. 21. Audiet cives acuisse ferrum, &c. and similarly in that Ode, 2 C. I. beginning

Motum ex Metello consule civicum,

the language is quite impartial;

vv. 4, 5. Arma | Nondum expiatis uncta cruoribus.

and

vv. 29-31. Quis non Latino sanguine pinguior Campus sepulchris impia prœlia Testatur. &c. . . .

while the concluding stanzas of 1 C. xxxv. 33-40.

Eheu! cicatricum . . . ferrum.

appeal to a religious kind of feeling, deeply characteristic, which at that time prevailed; that in atoning for any domestic national crime the great healing course was to do their country service by hazarding life against its unconquered foes.

The most dreadful example of such a principle operating is supplied by Tacitus, Annal. 1. 49. who in that well-known narrative tells us, how, after the ringleaders of the mutiny had been massacred by their fellow soldiers as a test of their return to duty, the surviving perpetrators of the deed instantly conceived this wild turn of enthusiasm.

Truces etiam tum animos cupido involat eundi in hostem, piaculum furoris: nec aliter posse placari commilitonum manes, quam si pectoribus impiis honesta vulnera accepissent.

We may now return to Augustus so entitled; first however premising, that a title like that, of sacred majesty, was not likely at the first to be given as his designation in common. Accordingly, even in the second book of Odes it occurs once only, (2 C. 1x. 19, 20.) and that in conjunction with the name Cæsar: in the third book, only once alone (3 C. v. 3.) and that in a very peculiar context. But in progress of years, as might be expected, the Epistles and the fourth book of Odes show it to have then become familiar enough to stand alone as a personal appellation in the language of verse. Let this rather minute detail serve for the correction of a slight error and oversight in Bentley, (De Temporibus, § 6,) while it is impossible not to acknowledge some confirmation thus afforded to his general theory.

It can hardly be necessary here to remark, that several of the Poet's allusive meanings, clear enough at the time, especially those on matters of state, have from the studious delicacy of his language since vanished into thin air. The famous Ode, 1 C. xiv. O navis, referent ... adduced by Quintilian as a good example of allegory, has found an ingenious solution (the only one at all consistent with our chronology or with probability otherwise) in this happy conjecture of Sanadon; that it owed its birth to that critical season (B. c. 29.) when Cæsar held deliberation with Agrippa and Mæcenas, whether to retain or resign the sovereignty, whether to hazard or not the safety of the commonwealth by restoring the republic.

Horace, we may well believe, was determined by his honest feelings on the side of tranquillity after such a series of storms. And his own words, vv. 17, 18. Nuper solicitum quæ mihi tædium, Nunc desiderium curaque non levis, sufficiently indicate, that during the years of civil discord he had known only distress and anxiety, while in the calm repose which he now might enjoy, the deepest affections of his heart found their natural anchorage. Nor can I deny the tribute of assent and admiration to Sanadon's mode of interpreting, > vv. 11, 12. Quamvis Pontica pinus, Sylvæ filia nobilis, in reference to the Trojan origin of Roman glory; while by the line,

v. 10. Non Dii quos iterum pressa voces malo,

Horace beautifully intimates, that after such repeated mercies nothing more could now be expected, if they would venture out to sea again.

Thus far then we deny any thing whatsoever like adulation to Augustus Cæsar, or political apostacy, in the writings of Horace. On the other hand, while no proof exists of deep and remarkable attachment ever cherished to the party of Brutus, it is gratifying to observe, that, so long as the remembrance of Philippi retained any freshness about it, Horace not only abstains from any hint of reprobation thrown upon the cause itself, (in fact he never did so reflect upon it,) but speaks in the most guarded and delicate manner, where the mention of that name might have suggested a compliment to Augustus as the leader of a party.

In that interesting Ode to Pompeius Varus, 2 C. vII. 9-12.

Tecum Philippos et celerem fugam Sensi, relictà non bene parmulà; Cum fracta virtus, et minaces Turpe solum tetigere mento. what else do we read, but that those followers of Brutus, young, ardent, and brave, did not realise on the field of battle that high confidence of success with which they approached it. At all events, the attribute of military prowess, elsewhere accorded to the victorious side, as in Horace's own words, might surely be conceded by the vanquished party.

2 E. 11. 47, 8. Civilisque rudem belli tulit æstus in arma Cæsaris Augusti non responsura lacertis.

But, in truth, for the natural result of that as of the other great engagements in the civil war, (Pharsalia, Philippi, Actium,) Tacitus, when he has occasion to allow the commencement in the East to be so far inauspicious to Vespasian's enterprise, furnishes at once the brief solution: the conquerors in each conflict had the old soldiers of the West on their side.

Hist. 11. 6. Namque olim validissima inter se civium arma, in Italià Galliàve, viribus Occidentis cœpta. Et Pompeio, Cassio, Bruto, Antonio, quos omnes trans mare secutum est civile bellum, haud prosperi exitus fuerant.

After the battle of Philippi, so fatal to the republican cause, when in the terse and pointed language of Tacitus, Annal. 1. 2. "Bruto et Cassio cæsis, nulla jam publica arma," and more especially when after some happy years, in which, under Mæcenas's wing, Horace had enjoyed at Rome the literary leisure which he loved; his attachment then to the cause of Cæsar rather than to that of Antony, on the quarrel between those competitors for empire bursting out into war, cannot surely be wondered at, much less does it require any excuse. Yet even then, though he has devoted an Ode to Cleopatra, a total silence regarding the name of Antony in whatever he wrote, marks the delicacy which he has observed on all subjects of political dissension. "Nor on any occasion," to use the words of Mr. Dunlop, (Hist. of Rom. Lit. Vol. 111. p. 232,) "is the great Pompey or his son Sextus, long the chief enemy and rival of Augustus, ever mentioned with contumely or disrespect." The only exception, perhaps, appears in the 1xth Epode, where Horace refers to the convivial joy which a few years before (B.C. 36.) he had shared with Mæcenas on the defeat and flight of Sextus Pompeius, vv. 7—10.

Ut nuper, actus cum freto Neptunius Dux fugit ustis navibus, Minatus urbi vincla, quæ detraxerat Servis amicus perfidis.

Agreeably to the above remark, even that Epode IV. Lupis et agnis. . (very doubtfully inscribed in Mænam) with all its bitterness, if Mæna can be the person attacked, aims the invective against him, not as the adherent and partisan of the younger Pompey, but as the insolent traitor and the double renegado. On the contrary, to the stern republican Cato and his Roman virtues, Horace in more than one splendid passage has borne the testimony of avowed admiration.

1 C. x11. 33-36. Romulum post hos prius, an quietum
Pompilî regnum memorem, an superbos
Tarquinî fasces, dubito, an Catonis
Nobile letum.

2 C. 1. 23, 4. Et cuncta terrarum subacta, Præter atrocem animum Catonis.

From that decisive day, Sept. 2, B. c. 31, postquam bellatum apud Actium atque omnem potestatem ad unum conferri pacis interfuit, Tacit. Hist. 1. 1, it may well be excused, if the consideration of public affairs, as bearing on Horace's character, be not here pursued any farther. We have already seen, P. D. 18—20, with what honest ardour he celebrates the glories of Augustus at home and abroad: and not a breath of suspicion may be cast on gratulation or panegyric in his later years, at a period when the strong impulse of popular attachment and delight must have directed instead of following the language and emotions of the Poet.

And here, connected intimately with the name of Augustus, on account of a project, soon discarded perhaps if ever seriously entertained by him let a page be devoted to the remonstrance of Horace in that magnificent Ode, 3 C. 111. Justum et tenacem propositi virum... of which the poetry and right feeling cannot be questioned, whether the patriotic advice was wanted or not.

The merit of discovering its only assignable reference and of developing its otherwise hidden beauties must be cheerfully conceded to Tanaquil Faber. According to his ingenious conjecture, then, Augustus, it was fancied or feared, meditated to transfer the seat of empire from Rome to Ilium, (Alexandria now would not be thought of,) following in that, as was naturally supposed, the intention, so rumoured at one time, of the great Julius.

" Quin etiam varia fama percrebruit migraturum Alexandriam vel Ilium, translatis simul opibus imperii, exhaustâque Italiâ delectibus, et procuratione urbis amicis permissâ." Sueton. § 79.

Had a design like this been compatible with a high sense of justice, which, in respect of Rome, it clearly was not, Augustus might have been encouraged by the example of other heroes to persevere and to accomplish it. But, although conceived in a pious spirit—avitæ Trojæ. (vv. 59, 60.) such a scheme must be utterly abhorrent to the will of those deities, whose displeasure more than once had laid Troy in ruins. And the Poet, therefore, working on that ground, with admirable skill represents Juno assenting to the deification of Romulus, (vv. 32-36,) only to introduce in a solemn declaration from her mouth the strict condition, again and again repeated, on which alone his Roman descendants might enjoy the empire of the world.

It is no slight confirmation surely of T. Faber's hypothesis, that Virgil, towards the end of the x11th Æneid,

v. 828. Occidit, occideritque sinas, cum nomine Troja, has concentered in that one verse, as the close of Juno's final speech to Jove, the whole drift and purpose of the long oration which Horace in her person has delivered.

A coincidence of thought so remarkable as this could not escape the notice of an editor like Heyne; who, however, in claiming the priority of its expression for Virgil, has assumed what here and elsewhere, in regard to anything parallel in their writings, it would be a hard task critically to demonstrate.

APPENDIX V.

DE PERSONIS HORATIANIS.

WERE the works of those commentators now extant who in the later Scholia are often mentioned as having written de Personis or de nominibus Horatianis, we should enjoy considerable advantage, no doubt, towards catching the point of many slight and allusive notices now imperfectly understood. But as the very fineness of touch, which gives the zest to such things, especially in satire, is the more quickly evanescent, the lapse of a very short time is often sufficient to render them irretrievably obscure. Of this truth, as Gesner in his Præfatio remarks, we have a curious example in Brossett's Commentary on the Satires of Boileau; which, though drawn up in the lifetime of that writer, required the aid of the Satirist himself for the completion of the task.

Whatever now exists for illustration of Horace from sources of that traditional kind, may be found in the Indices Nominum like that of Zeunius, or in the Onomasticon of the younger Ernesti. An article from the German of Buttmann, on the Historical References and Allusions in Horace, is given in the Philological Museum, No. 111. pp. 439—484; to which the reader may be referred for a great deal of curious and acute disquisition. The Greek names Lalage, Glycera, &c., occurring in Horace's Odes, he regards as on the whole fictitious, p. 446; and cuts off all necessity to trace the story of each person, beyond what each Ode separately contains for elucidating itself.

For such interpretation as the knowledge of persons addressed or of political events alluded to must supply, Buttmann's ingenious pages, though interesting whenever consulted, yet to my mind, on many points, are far from carrying conviction: for instance, where, as at page 483, in regard to Sextus Pompeius and his party, he builds so much on hypothetical history, purely so; and particularly where he represents Horace "in his 27th or 28th year," as having "not yet formed any tie with the new rulers of the State."

As bearing on the main purpose of a work like the present, it is clear, that after the attention paid to Mæcenas and Augustus, the principal persons in our drama, few of the many other Personæ Horatianæ can require any long or particular notice. Of those names, indeed, several belong to the history of Rome, and can have little illustration here but what is derived from that source; such as Agrippa, and Pollio, and Sallustius Crispus, the elder Lollius, and the young Neros: others again are of the class of Roman gentlemen and men of letters, such as Ælius Lamia, Aristius Fuscus, Julius Florus, Pompeius Varus, Quintilius, Numicius, &c. Several of the last description, especially if they occur as repeatedly addressed or more than once mentioned, may now commodiously, in the writings of Horace chronologically arranged, be viewed according to the natural order in which the circumstances personally concerning them are presented to the eye of the reader. Under this head something has been already done in the Preface, for the names of Grosphus, Iccius, Quintius Hirpinus, and Septimius: nor could the literary friends of Horace (P. D. 59, 60) as such be overlooked. Very much, after all, must still be left to the taste of each individual reader, and to the inclination which he feels for matters of such peculiar research. One question of this kind relating to Septimius may not unaptly be discussed here. If on the authority of the Commentator Vetus, as exhibited by Cruquius, we are to consider Titius (1 E. 111. 9.) and Septimius, (1x. 1.) as names of the same person; then it seems to follow, that the Epistles III, VIII, and IX, do not now stand in the same order of time in which they were originally written, that is, the 1xth, which recommends Septimius to the favour of Tiberius Claudius Nero, must have preceded the 111d, in which Titius is spoken of as already in the suite of that young Prince: and not improbably it was by the hands of Septimius when he carried that introduction, that the viiith Epistle also was conveyed to Celsus Albinovanus, then one of the party. Taken in this succession, these three Epistles may perhaps be better understood and more agreeably perused.

On Agrippa, however, and Sallustius the younger, and Nasidienus Rufus and the Pisos, some short remarks may clearly be permitted, from the relation which they bear to Horace in one aspect or another.

1. Flattery of AGRIPPA has never been imputed to Horace; in whose praises of the warrior (1 C. vi. Scriberis Vario . . .) every compliment must be allowed to be perfectly fair. His high fame too and popularity, even before the battle of Actium, and the splendid works of his Ædileship, (B. c. 33.) are elsewhere (2 S. 111. 185, and 1 E. vi. 26.) briefly touched upon.

The former of those passages may justify an observation rising out of the anachronism committed in it. The story of Servius Oppidius (vv. 163—186) is told by Horace (lecturing in the mask of Stertinius) as having occurred at Canusium when he was a boy. At that time, to say nothing of other persons, no Agrippa was known: but the playful aberration of Horace's pen, both as to place and to date, only makes the introduction of Agrippa's name the pleasanter on that account: with the son, already betraying symptoms of young ambition, the father expostulates beforehand on the folly and madness of it.

vv. 185, 6. Scilicet ut plausus, quos fert Agrippa, feras tu, Astuta ingenuum vulpes imitata leonem?

That Satire, on the other hand, 2 S. v. Hoc quoque, Tiresia.. has of course all its anachronism instantly seen, as is facetiously intended: and the anger of Ulysses, vv. 18, 19. Utne tegam spurco Damæ latus? Haud ita Trojæ Me gessi, certans semper melioribus.....

has the more exquisite effect for the contrast of such an ancient hero with such a modern upstart!

2. The younger Sallust, great nephew of the historian, is known to the readers of Horace from that beautiful Ode, 2 C. II. Nullus argento... and I agree with Ernesti in his Onomasticon, that he must not be confounded with the Sallustius.. in libertinas insaniens.. of 1 S. II. 48, 9, apparently a much older man. What leads to the mention of him in this place, is the similitude which Tacitus tells us he bore to Mæcenas, that is, in general character; for any thing like his participation in the murder of Postumus Agrippa, (Annal. 1. 6,) was never imputed to the Prime Minister of Augustus.

Here is the masterly sketch of the Annalist, 111. 30.

Atque ille, quamquam prompto ad capessendos honores aditu, Mæcenatem æmulatus, sine dignitate Senatoriâ, multos triumphalium consulariumque potentiâ anteiit: diversus a veterum instituto, per cultum et munditias; copiâque et adfluentiâ luxu propior: subcrat tamen vigor animi, ingentibus negotiis par, eo acrior, quo somnum et inertiam magis ostentabat.

And in those significant words, we read the elementary formation of a character, which, with various shades of better and worse, came naturally to be cultivated under the altered circumstances of imperial government.

The younger Sallust affords a clear specimen of its first deterioration, in the court of Tiberius. Manius Lepidus, on the other hand, even at that period, Tacitus records to have been (Annal. Iv. 20,)...illis temporibus gravem et sapientem virum; and after noticing the influence for good possessed by him and exerted with that Prince, starts the disquisition, "an sit aliquid in nostris consiliis, liceatque, inter abruptam contumaciam, et deforme obsequium, pergere iter, ambitione et periculis vacuum."

The picture of Crispus, in Domitian's day, as a successful good natured old courtier, but without any ability or wish to exemplify the virtues of Lepidus, we may peruse finely delineated in these verses of the contemporary Satirist.

Juv. S. Iv. 81-91.

— Venit et Crispi jucunda senectus,
Cujus erant mores, qualis facundia, mite
Ingenium. Maria ac terras populosque regenti
Quis comes utilior, si clade et peste sub illà
Sævitiam damnare, et honestum adferre liceret
Consilium? Sed quid violentius aure tyranni,
Cum quo de pluviis aut æstibus, aut nimboso
Vere, locuturi fatum pendebat amici?

Ille igitur nunquam direxit brachia contra Torrentem; nec civis erat, qui libera posset Verba animi proferre, et vitam impendere vero-

The portrait of Agricola, known to every scholar, as drawn at full length by the affectionate pencil of his son-in-law, may conclude the catalogue. The partial admiration, however, of Tacitus for that great and good man, has tempted the biographer into an apparent severity of reflection on persons not endowed with felicity of temperament like his.

S. 42. Sciant quibus moris illicita mirari, posse etiam sub malis principibus magnos viros esse: obsequiumque ac modestiam, si industria et vigor adsint, eo laudis excedere, quo plerique per abrupta, sed in nullum reipublicæ usum, ambitiosâ morte inclaruerunt.

And yet Agricola, we read, even if he died by a natural death, was hardly permitted to end his days in peace. Nor could Tacitus, when afterwards on the high road of historical duty, deny the stamp of his deepest praise to Pætus Thrasea and Barea Soranus, and to other noble spirits, whose examples of fortitude and honesty, in the worst of times, demonstrate that Cassius himself (Annal. Iv. 34,) was not truly called the ultimus Romanorum.

3. The entertainment of Nasidienus Rufus, "a man of fashion in other respects, but pettily ostentatious of his wealth," has been already noticed (App. 111. p. 114) in proof of Mæcenas's sometimes going out to an early, that is, to a fashionable dinner. The name of the entertainer has afforded scope for the acuteness and erudition of Buttmann (u. s. p. 472.) in pursuing the conjecture of Lambinus, that, to preserve some semblance of delicacy, Horace under that grotesque name really intended to denote Salvidienus Rufus, a person historically known from many writers who have mentioned him.

I cannot here refuse myself the opportunity to state, that, though somewhat refined perhaps and fanciful, Buttmann's Dissertation (u. s. p. 480.) on Horace's Licymnia, as a name (codem numero syllabarum et literarum) under which poetically to shadow the real Terentia of Mæcenas, may be quoted as another instance of his happily settling a point which had been well started before.

2 C. x11. 13. Me dulces dominæ Musa Licymniæ...

But that Mæcenas himself was in any similar way adumbrated under the name of Malthinus, in the famous passage, 1 S. 11. 24, 5.

Dum vitant stulti vitia, in contraria currunt:
Malthinus tunicis demissis ambulat....

after all the ingenious pleadings and delicate qualifyings of Buttmann, (u. s. p. 473.) is what I am quite content to reject and disbelieve, in such company as that of Lambinus, Torrentius, Gesner, and Wieland.

Independently, however, of all other considerations obvious enough regarding the Poet and the Patron, it will appear, that Chronology has much more to do in deciding this question, than any one hitherto has observed or suspected.

About the date B. c. 39, when Horace is supposed to have touched with such sharp ridicule effeminacy like this in Mæccnas, that person was in the prime of a young and active life; and afterwards at the battle of Actium (B. c. 31.), as commander of the ships called Liburnian, he certainly bore a strenuous part in obtaining the victory of that memorable day. When, therefore, we read in Seneca the compliment paid to him for a noble sentiment, at the close of the Epistle, xiv. 93.

Diserte Mæcenas ait:

" Nec tumulum curo, sepelit natura relictos."

Alte cinctum putes dixisse: habuit enim ingenium et grande et virile, nisi illud ipse discinxisset—how, let me ask, are we at all to understand the compliment, if that grande et virile ingenium did not actually belong to him in his earlier years? Only allow this plain piece of justice to Mæcenas, perfectly consistent as it is with every thing otherwise known of him; and it becomes palpable at once, that the effeminacy imputed to him elsewhere by Seneca, even with the words solutis tunicis, Ep. xx. 115. and re-echoed by Juvenal, must have been realized, (postquam illum enervasset felicitas), in the acquired foibles of his later years only.

In this view of the whole matter, we instantly discover what the plausible error was that misled the commentator Acron, catching up the general hint from Seneca and Juvenal, &c., and utterly disregarding the chronological series of things; without attending to which even the cleverest scholars, it has been shown, have fallen into very strange hallucinations.

The elder Scaliger, in his Poetice, 1607, p. 344, shall here be quoted, in farther proof of the gross mistakes committed by the most eminent critics, from ignorance or neglect of chronology.

Ingratus Horatius, atque animo barbaro atque servili, qui ne a Mæcenate quidem abstinere potuit: siquidem, quod aiunt, verum est, Malchinum ab eo appellatum, cujus demissas notaret tunicas. Ager enim Sabinus, quo Canicula illa a divino viro donata fuerat, tantus tantique erat, ut objectu suo posset malefici oculi visum intercipere, quo minus tunicarum demissione offenderetur.

At the time when the first book of Satires was published, that ager Sabinus, as we have already seen, had yet to be bestowed by Mæcenas upon Horace!

4. So much has been done and with such entire satisfaction by Wieland abroad, and by our own elder Colman at home, to set the Epistola ad Pisones de Arte Poetica in its true light, that hardly any room is left to desiderate or expect farther elucidation of it now.

If, however, any farther proof were wanted that the family of the Pisos did cultivate poetical talent, and with some distinction too, the following extract from Pliny's Letter to Spurinna (v. 17.) may serve to place that fact beyond a doubt... nuncio tibi fuisse me hodie in auditorio Calpurnii Pisonis: recitabat καταστερισμῶν [relationum in stellus]

sc. rerum hominumque in sidera relatorum historiarum] eruditam sane luculentamque materiam.... Ne plura (quamquam libet plura, quo sunt pulchriora de juvene, rariora de nobili) recitatione finitâ, multum ac diu exosculatus adolescentem, qui est acerrimus stimulus monendi, laudibus incitavi, 'pergeret quâ cœpisset, lumenque quod sibi majores sui prælulissent, posteris ipse præferret.'

Perhaps a more striking example of the success with which a writer in one of his works may be brought to illustrate himself in another, cannot be adduced, than the contrast betwixt Horace's fine address in recommending the good poets of his own age to imperial favour (2 E. 1. ad August. especially vv. 118—138.), and his bold way in exposing the bad or doubtful poet to interminable ridicule, at the close of his personal Epistle to the Pisos. This consideration, as showing the totally different objects which Horace had in view, might alone have sufficed to demonstrate what the poem so long miscalled Ars Poetica should really be esteemed.

The services of Wicland, as an expositor of Horace, if at all calculated from his merit in regard to that Epistle, must excite a strong desire to have them made more generally beneficial to the many classical students who cannot read German. Horace's literary and critical writings, some of the Satires in particular, require all the advantage that can be given, of full and luminous dissertation: and I cannot lose the opportunity, here presented or sought, to suggest, that a judicious selection from Wieland, well translated by an Horatian Scholar, would confer an inestimable benefit wherever the study of Horace is liberally prosecuted in the Schools and Colleges of this country.

It has been said in a former page (P. D. 70) that Horace was "too shy or too proud for public recitation and the common modes of courting popularity."

The matters there alluded to, on Horace's account, may deserve more particular development; and if any apology be needed for giving a brief notice of them in this place, let my excuse be pleaded in the passage recently quoted from Pliny or in that picture of the recitator acerbus with which the Epistle to the Pisos is concluded.

First of all then, private recitation of the Poet to a few friends, as we gather from 1 S. rv. 73. or to Augustus, as some other Poets did, 2 E. r. 223, and 1 E. xix. 43, or to a friendly critic like Quintilius, A. P. 438, was practised by Horace himself. And thus, young Piso (vv. 387, 8) is advised to submit his compositions in the first instance to the criticism of Maccius and his father and Horace.

Secondly, other Poets did not scruple to recite their writings at the common bath or even in the Forum, (1 S. 1v. 74, 5), or to bribe a low audience for a public recitation 1 E. x1x. 37, 8).

Thirdly, some authors made interest with the masters of schools to get their poetry into daily use by dictation; a practice which Horace mentions with great disdain. (1 S. x. 74, 5. 1 E. xix. 39, 40.)

And lastly, then, as Horace at an early period evidently disliked to make his pieces known by the usual way of recitation (1 S. IV. 23.), so on reaching the advanced maturity of authorship, his pride lay in being read (1 E. XIX. 34) by the respectable few; and of course he took the higher mode only of publishing by means of the bookseller. That Epistle (XX.) Ad Librum suum, accordingly, will reward the perusal: it is full of amusing and curious particulars.

Whatever honour has been attached to the name of Lollius (the Consul of B. c. 21.) by that splendid Ode, 4, ix. Ne forte credas... may well be received as the tribute of sincerity and truth from his admiring and devoted friend; especially when the date of its composition is considered, some 15 years before the time when Augustus entrusted him with the personal care and military education of his grandson Caius, B. c. 1.; and of course long before any imputation whatever could have been cast on his public or his private integrity.

The vindication of Lollius from certain calumnies, for which no pretence can be found before the period when as the tutor of the young Prince he incurred the hatred of Tiberius, I have with great care and perhaps not without success undertaken in the Gentleman's Magazine, May, 1834, under the title of Vindiciae Lollianae.

The two passages of Velleius Paterculus and one of the Elder Pliny, on which alone those calumnies are founded, are in that article produced and subjected to severe examination. Of any fact or even hint in disparagement of Lollius's character, neither in Tacitus nor in Suetonius, does one historical vestige appear; while of Velleius's baseness in flattering the bad passions of Tiberius, proofs and testimonies are brought forward enough to satisfy any reasonable demand.

And I am strangely mistaken if Horace himself, notwithstanding the honours paid to the "Major Neronum" (4 C. xiv. 14.) in his best days (egregius vitâ famâque quoad privatus vel in imperiis sub Augusto fuit. Ann. vi. 51.) did not owe a very marked suppression of his name to that very Ode in praise of Lollius which we are now considering. To what cause, indeed, so probable as Tiberian malignity deeply operating, may the following fact be attributed?

In Velleius's catalogue of Roman Poets, L. II. c. 36, § § 2, 3, the names of Lucretius, Catullus, Virgil, Tibullus, and Naso, are all prominently paraded:—that of Horace is not visible!

Could this striking omission then be the result of mere oversight, with such immense chances in calculation against it? or is it not naturally accounted for at once, by supposing it a sacrifice to the dark disgust of Tiberius's eye?

APPENDIX VI.

ON HORACE'S OBLIGATIONS TO THE GREEK POETS.

It has been already stated (P. D. 70) that Horace acknowledged and justified his borrowing the metres of Archilochus and of Alcaeus, with such adaptation as the genius of the Latin language required.

The point of his more substantial obligations to the Greek Poets in subject, imagery, and sentiment, may be studied with advantage in a work of curious literature quoted below*. I am inclined to think, however, that the amount of what he owes on that score (and avowedly incurred, for such imitation was an honorable task) has been greatly overrated. And if an estimate in other cases may be taken on the average from that fragment of Alcæus (even allowing the ingenious emendation of $\chi\theta\delta\nu\alpha\ldots\pi\alpha\prime(\epsilon\nu)$ for $\tau\iota\nu\alpha\ldots\tau\prime(\nu\epsilon\nu)\ldots$ the sum total then of the debt will prove no great deduction from the solidity of his fame.

Νῦν χρη μεθύσμειν καὶ χθόνα πρὸς βίαν Παίειν, ἐπειδή κάτθανε Μύρσιλος.

At the most, Alcaus supplies only the catchword of the Ode, 1 C. xxxvii.

Nunc est bibendum, nunc pede libero Pulsanda tellus:

^{*} Q. Horatii Flacci Carmina Collatione Scriptorum Græcorum illustrata ab Henrico Wagnero, Præfatus est Christ. Adolphus Klotzius. Halæ. 1770.

for besides the characteristic touch, pede libero, the foot now of freedom and security; at the very next moment,

ornare pulvinar Deorum
Tempus erat dapibus, sodales. . . .

there comes a change over the spirit of the song; the subject is "essentially Roman;" and as it has been well remarked, (Encyclopædia Metropolitana, Horace—Latin Poetry, p. 400,) "the magnificent description of Cleopatra gives the stamp of original genius to the whole."

Thus too the Ode 1 C. xviii.

Nullum, Vare, sacrâ vite prius severis arborem.

opens with a strict translation from the well known verse of Alceus.

Μηδεν ἄλλο φυτεύσης πρότερον δένδρεον ἀμπέλω,

"But the solum Tiburis and the mænia Catilí in the very next line domesticate the production with peculiar felicity." (Encycl. Metr.)

APPENDIX VII.

QUÆSTIONES HORATIANÆ.

Scripsit C. Kirchner, S. Theol. et Phil. Dr. Scholæ Prov. Portensis Rector.—Lipsiæ. 1834.

THE first of these Questions, occupying 41 pages out of the 60, is entitled De Bentleiana Temporum, quibus Horatius

Poematum suorum Libros scripsit, constitutione: and to the system laid down by Dr. Bentley, he is on four different heads decidedly opposed.

Bentley is wrong, he alleges, in asserting (1.) that Horacc at one and the same time devoted his pen only to one species of composition, and (2.) that Horace did not give publication to separate pieces, but only to whole books at a time.

Bentley is wrong also in asserting (3.), that Horace published the books separately one by one, and not more than one together.

Bentley is farther wrong in determining (4.) the years within which the several volumes were composed.

Under the first of these heads, let me be allowed to show a specimen of Kirchner's proposed arrangement.

In the year B. c. 28. and of Horace 37. Kirchner fixes his date for the following pieces, for instance, amongst others, 2 S. 1. Sunt quibus in Satirâ... 1 C. XXXI. Quid dedicatum... 2 C. XX. Jam pauca aratro... and 3 C. VI. Delicta majorum....

It is on the suggestions of a fanciful and capricious ingenuity, that Kirchner, like a new Sanadon, has perpetrated this strange divulsion of wholes from wholes, and a conjunction as strange of pieces with pieces tied obtorto collo together. The very sight of his Tabula Chronologica Horatiana is quite enough to astonish and offend by the presumption with which every single piece has its separate year precisely affixed to it, and by the boldness with which all the pieces are dissevered from that connection within the same book, which had remained undisturbed for seventeen centuries.

Luckily, on the one hand, internal evidence, derived from comparing the Alcaic metre in different books, affords an argument which cannot well be cluded: and as if to stumble at that block, Kirchner does not hesitate to declare, that all the Odes of the first, second, and third books were promiscuously written and then published collectively at once in B. C.

18. Of course, therefore, when he places 2 C. XIII. Ille et nefasto...in the same year as 3 C. II. III. XXIX.; and 2 C. XIX. Bacchum in remotis...in the same year as 3 C. IV. with certain inferior modes of structure visible in Odes of the second book from which all those in the third are entirely exempt; he blunders on in the same unsuspecting ignorance about the progressive change in Horace's versification, which has been already produced as an argument against Sanadon. P. D. p. 10.

On the other hand, with regard to the historical facts themselves and the years of their occurrence, Kirchner may be generally right: it is not on that ground perhaps that any serious objection can be brought against him. His hastiness in every where assuming the identity of such an allusion to a foreign name in Horace with such an event or such a war at such a precise time, this may be regarded as the ignis fatuus, by which he is perpetually led astray in venturing to fix the date of each separate piece.

Let one instance suffice to exemplify the nature of that assertion here made: a detailed examination of the whole would require a volume. Horace, in 3 C. xxiv. addresses the Roman reader thus.

Intactis opulentior

Thesauris Arabum et divitis Indiæ...

Therefore, says Kirchner, that Ode must have been written before the year B. C. 24. in which Ælius Gallus is recorded to have led an expedition into Arabia Felix. That invasion, however, terminated, we are told, without success; so that the treasures of Arabia remained as entire and unrifled after that event as they were before it. Yet on such a slight and shadowy link of association as this, Kirchner does not scruple to hang his hypothesis of the new date B. C. 28. and his dislocation of it from Bentley's position at B. C. 24, 23: whereas the very mention of rich India along with Arabia's treasures (as elsewhere, 1 E. vi. 6.) sufficiently shows that it is only a proverbial kind of expression for stores of unbounded opulence. That personal address, 1 C. xx1x. on the contrary... Icei, beatis nunc Arabum invides,—carries on the face of it evidence of an expedition then talked of or projected against Arabia; and in these terms—non ante devictis Sabææ | Regibus ... might possibly suggest the application of a political meaning to Intactis which does not belong to that word in such a context.

Then too, (just to give a second instance,) because there is a great general amnesty recorded in B. C. 39, the Pompeius of 2 C. VII. could not have been restored from exile, according to Kirchner, by any other act of grace, public or private: and that Ode therefore must be referred to B. C. 39, in the 26th year of Horace's age.

Mark the consequence.

This fine poetical composition, Osæpe mecum... is by Kirchner set down as the very first Ode ever written by Horace; and that too, seven years before the date B. c. 32, assigned by Kirchner himself to the Satire, 1 S. IV. Eupolis atque Cratinus... in which Horace says, as plainly as a man can say it, that he had not then written any thing which could entitle him to the name of Poet.

vv. 41, 2. — neque, si quis scribat, uti nes, Sermoni propiora, putes hunc esse Poetam.

But from want of correct knowledge also as to the localities of Horace and the chronology connected with them, Kirchner has gone grossly wrong in interpreting an Ode of the very plainest meaning, 2 C. vi. Septimi Gades... He argues from vv. 5, 6.

Tibur Argeo positum colono Sit meæ sedes utinam senectæ, &c.

that Horace was then praying for the Sabine Estate which he had not yet obtained: he accordingly gives to that Ode the early date of B. c. 36, and then places the Satire, 2 S. vi. Hoc erat in votis... along with the fact of Horace getting that property, in the subsequent year B. c. 31. Whereas in the year B. c. 36. as we calculate, Horace was enriched with the Sabine villa by his patron Mæcenas; about B. c. 31. he purchased or rented the cottage at Tivoli; and in B. c. 26 or 25. he was putting up the prayer to end his days in that delightful spot, to which his attachment grew the more ardent, the longer he knew it.

Such is our account of the matter: such is that of Dr. Kirchner.

Kirchner's second objection charges Bentley with asserting, that Horace did not give publication to separate pieces, but only to whole books at a time. Here distinction is necessary.

No one denies, nor did Bentley mean to deny, that Horace must have allowed several of his writings to be known amongst his friends at the time, either by private recitation, or by giving copies of some pieces, just as they were written. From hence a partial publicity would be acquired; as unquestionably was the case with two of his Satires, from the mention of Rufillus, 1 S. 11. 27. compared with 1 v. 92. and of Lucilius 1 S. 1v. 8, 9. compared with 1 S. x. 1. The collective publication of the pieces afterwards in separate books is all that we contend for.

And as to the third head of objection, that Bentley is wrong in asserting Horace to have published the books separately one by one, and not more than one book at a time: a sufficient answer on that head has been virtually given, in considering the principal point of it, whether the first, second, and third books of Odes could be, as Kirchner alleges, promiscuously written and then published together all at once.

Nor is an immediate answer wanting to meet that one allegation (at least) under the fourth head, that Bentley is wrong in allowing to Horace (as he appears to do) intervals of idleness betwixt one set of books and another. As to that subject of mere oversight or omission on the part of Bentley, satisfactory explanation has been already afforded in P. D. p. 82.

The most ingenious and plausible perhaps of all Kirchner's conjectures is that which he has started under his QUESTIO (IVta) p. 54. De Itinere Brundusino. Horace, he suggests, at p. 60, might have taken that opportunity to go on from Brundusium to Tarentum: when there, he might have written that Satire itself, 1 S. v. Egressum magna . . . from thence he might have returned to Rome by the direct way through Venusia: when at his native spot, he might have addressed that Ode to the Fons Bandusinus, 3 C. XIII.; and having at the same time renewed his friendship with the worthy old man Ofellus, he might on his return home have composed the beautiful Satire, 2 S. 11. Quæ virtus. And besides all this, for some reason or other, he might in that year have written the Epode x1. Petti, nihil me : and the dialogue with Archytas too, 1 C. XXVIII. Te maris et terræ - " why so?" if you ask: Tarentum (v. 29) is certainly mentioned in it.

In this complex scheme, built on a series of assumptions, even that part which regards the visit to Ofellus, though it carries an air of probability with it, is by no means wanted to account for Horace's actual acquaintance with those facts:

vv. 114-116.

----- Videas metato in agello
Cum pecore et gnatis fortem mercede colonnui,
Non ego, narrantem, &c.

From

1 S. vi. 104, 5. — Nunc mihi curto

Ire licet mulo, vel, si libet, usque Tarentum:

we clearly gather that an occasional excursion to Venusia in his younger days would cost him very little trouble, when even some twenty years afterwards he records his intention (1 E. xv.) to ride as far as Velia or Salernum: and the very phrase videas, if that necessarily implies personal observation on the spot, rather than knowledge from report which might reach him at Rome, by no means involves in it any assertion equivalent to that which the words nuper vidi would express.

Then for the Fountain of Bandusia.-If that Ode had been written on occasion of such a visit so paid, in the very spot where his playful childhood was passed, would the man have quite forgotten the boy, and totally forborne the least allusion to his early reminiscences? An idea like this borders on the impossible; more especially with Horace, who has so minutely recorded whatever else belonged to the history of his boyhood. Such and so unaccountable then is the Poet's silence about himself and his childish days, if the Fountain which he has thus canonised, had its local habitation and its name in the neighbourhood of Venusia only; while, in aid of that negative argument, every local circumstance otherwise known in the picture of Horace's Sabine Villa and the fine spring of water unquestionably adjoining it, vividly corresponds with the scenery exhibited in this very Ode.

Then too, if an apotheosis conceived in the high spirit of poetry like that could, consistently with Horace's own account of his beginning the lyrical style only when an inmate of Tivoli, be allowed to have been written many years before he ever dwelt there; another objection in a different quarter arises little perhaps suspected by Kirchner, and for which he will hardly, I fear, have any answer provided. It is this: with the exception of that Epistle, written one summer (1 E. 11. 2.) from cool Præneste, and suggested by what he had been recently reading there, Horace does not appear from any intimation extant, (I speak advisedly,) to have employed himself in writing any where, unless at his usual places of residence, Tivoli and the Sabine Villa in his later days, Rome chiefly perhaps at an earlier period. At all events, we are specifically told, that in his winter plan for going down to the sea, (to Baiæ, generally,) he expected to read, it is true, but not a word, be it remarked, of any thing in the shape of poetical composition is there mentioned. And if at any season he had given way to the temptation of occasional writing, admonitu locorum, is it probable, let me ask, that not one trace should now remain of his Muse having been on any spot occupied in any task of that nature?

1 E. vii. 11, 12. Ad mare descendet vates tuus, et sibi parcet, ${\bf Contractusque}\ \textit{leget:}$

"Nec vola nec vestigium extat.".....

Finally, and to have done, it may afford something more than amusement to observe, how the two principal antagonists of our system, united only in rejecting it, differ toto cælo from each other in the detail of what they would substitute: in fact, they have no common principle upon which to proceed together, nor, as far as I can discover, has either of them any distinct plan to guide his separate researches.

In noticing Dr. Kirchner therefore as the new Sanadon, I had no design to insinuate that he follows the steps of that lively and oracular critic. Quite the contrary indeed: his course is far more eccentric than that of his predecessor; as the brief but faithful statement here given may serve to exemplify.

M. Sanadon, in the Nouvelle Distribution, comprises his first book of Odes (made up of 18 Odes and 2 Epodes) within the 25th and 31st years of Horace, a space of seven years: Dr. Kirchner in his arrangement scatters those 20 pieces over twenty-four years, that is, between the years 26 and 49 of Horace's life, placing two, and two only, of the whole number, within the limits assigned to them by M. Sanadon.

Here then are two scholars by profession, evidently men of crudition and talent, labouring with all diligence to illustrate de novo the life and writings of Horace. And what is the result? At first setting out they so far agree as to throw down and forsake the old landmarks of that division into books, which from the earliest age is known to have existed: and when, on returning from their respective discoveries, the report of the German is contrasted with that of the French adventurer, from the first specimen of comparison, what else are we naturally led to conclude, but that one of them cannot have gone right, most likely from the chances of error that they both have gone wrong?

If, however, after all, any person should feel inclined to form on fuller examination his own judgment of their respective merits, the volumes of Sanadon are to be found in the British Museum; and a copy of the QUESTIONES HOBATIANE of Kirchner is now placed there on purpose, that the whole treatise, and particularly his Tabula Chronologica Horatiana, or balance sheet, may be at any time inspected.

APPENDIX VIII.

SOME ACCOUNT OF THE TEXT OF THIS EDITION, AND OF THE READINGS DIFFERENT FROM THAT OF GESNER, ADOPTED FOR ITS IMPROVEMENT.

"On printing for the first time the books of Horace in their Chronological order, as established by Dr. Bentley, no mark of respect seemed more natural than to preserve the text of his own edition." Horat. Restit. 1832, p. (v.) And yet either for private reading or for use in schools especially, I must now candidly confess, that the many peculiarities in Bentley's Horace render it much less acceptable than other editions of very inferior merit. Under this impression, and with that deference justly due to the name of Gesner, having determined to reprint the text, generally, from his first edition in 1752, (for the second in 1772 came out after his death,) after much inquiry, I at length procured, from Rome, a copy of that work. From his Addenda at the close of the volume it appears that the task of correcting the press during his own illness (gravi morbo decumbentis) was undertaken by his friend Joh. FRID. FISCHER; and I beg leave to plead that fact as my excuse, for having committed myself too far to recede, before the numerous, gross, and unaccountable errata in the book were on a closer acquaintance with its contents detected. Let this acknowledgment suffice for the present.

I proceed briefly to state the principal changes, here introduced, with a view to render the text of this edition something nearer to that genuine character, which it bore from the Poet's own hand.

I. What has been done in punctuation or in the aids to it, shall be first noticed. The use of a mark to distinguish the new person speaking, or for the moment imagined as it were to speak, those duo puncta in Baxter Porphyrionis admonitu, as altered by Gesner to the form ¶, I have here with little deviation retained; though perfectly conscious of peculiar difficulties in so delicate a matter, and impelled in some instances to correct what appeared to me erroneous, as at 1 S. vi. 39, 40, where the transition from one party speaking, to the other, demands to be so distinguished.

At Novius collega gradu post me sedet uno; &c.

Of Gesner's text corrected where faulty in the interrogative mark, 1 C. vIII. 1—4, may serve as one instance. He edits thus.

Perdere? _____ atque solis?

Other cases have been similarly attended to.

To show where the protasis (or preamble) terminates, or where the several branches of it end, the mark—has been, and perhaps advantageously, used, as for instance in 1 E. xv. 13, 21, 24.

A caution of this kind is the more necessary in Horace, from the manner so habitual to him of making one conjunction serve for several clauses without the hint of et or the like to connect them.

Thus, in 1 E. xi. vv. 25, 6, 7, the true meaning would be more distinctly seen at once, if exhibited in this manner to the eye.

Nam si ratio et prudentia curas, Non locus, effusi late maris arbiter, aufert ; Cœlum, non animum mutant, qui trans mare currunt ;— Strenua nos exercet inertia:.....

Singularly enough, we are told by Suetonius, that Augustus Cæsar (c. 86,) was both aware of the obscurity which arose from this neglect, and in his own writing took great care to avoid it.

Præcipuam curam duxit sensum animi quam apertissime exprimere: quod quo facilius efficeret, aut necubi lectorem vel auditorem obturbaret ac moraretur, neque præpositiones verbis addere neque conjunctiones sæpius iterare dubitavit, quæ detractæ afferunt aliquid obscuritatis, etsi gratiam augent.

The parenthetic mark also, when critically interposed, may serve well to prevent confusion and mistake. The following passage, awkward at the best, affords good illustration of such a use;

1 S. Iv. 69—74. Ut sis tu similis Celì Birrique, latronum, Non ego sim Capri neque Sulci; (cur metuas me?) Nulla taberna meos habeat neque pila libellos, Queis manus insudet vulgi Hermogenisque Tigelli, Nec recitem quidquam, nisi amicis, idque coactus Non ubivis, coramve quibuslibet.

Where unless the words...cur metuas me?...be kept separate by a parenthesis, the continuity of the sense is entirely lost. A rough translation will show it sufficiently.

Though you may resemble those highwaymen, Cœlius and Birrius, it does not follow that I am to be like Caprius or Sulcius, the informers, (why need you then be afraid of me?) nor that any shop should have my writings for sale, nor yet that I should make a common practice of rehearsing, &c., &c.

Here, be it remarked, the old commentator in Cruquius seems to have rightly apprehended the difficulty of the passage, as it usually stands; which he would rectify by supplying cum before v. 71. [Cum] nulla taberna, &c. With cum, sure enough, every thing would run on perspicuously and well: but then cum is not there, and it cannot on any pretence be understood.

Nor is the mark here occasionally set on the α final without its advantage, to show the true reading; especially where a change in the text has taken place, as 1 Sat. 1x. 29, 30.

Sabella | Quod puero cecinit motá divina anus urná.

or more clearly to denounce the false reading by thus exhibiting the true one:

3 C. XXIII. 18. Non sumtuosâ blandior hostiâ; [manus sc. futura] that is, not more likely to win its prayer for a costly victim: where also the prosodial power of bl to lengthen the 5th syllable with a short in thesi cannot be defended even by Bentley's authority.

II. A scrupulous attention indeed has been here paid to metrical accuracy; but with no change of the text on that account, unless recommended by the name of some eminent scholar who has suggested it, or by internal evidence also supporting the change.

Ep. v. 100. Et Esquilinæ alites.

"Animadverte," says Julius Cæsar Scaliger, "vocem hanc, alites, multis in locis ab Horatio repetitam, quam adeo amavit, ut maluerit hic, quam quod potuit, Vultures; et fugisset licentiam neglectæ collisionis." Poetice. 1607, p. 821.

I have adopted, more from necessity than from choice, the reading,

Et Esquiliniæ alites.

where a final in thesi is elided, without offence, just as it is,

Ep. 111. 16. Siticulosæ Appuliæ.

Again,

2 C. xx. 13. Jam Dædaleo ocyor Icaro.....

presents an offensive hiatus, for which, in the practice of Horace, no parallel can be found.—For,

Ep. x111. 3. Threiciö Aquilone sonant.....

has the long vowel in arsi and that of daetylic verse, quite differently posited.

Tutior for ocyor is ingenious, and unquestionably improves the text by the idea of safety. But the extent of the Poet's fame demands the reading notior, which I have preferred. The whole tenor of that and the following stanza beautifully corresponds with it.

17, 18, 19. Me Colchus...... et ultimi
Noscent Geloni.

So too,

A. P. 345, 6. Hie meret æra liber Sosiis: hie et mare transit, Et longum noto scriptori prorogat ævum.

Again, the common reading,

3 C. xIV. 11. --- male ominatis | Parcite verbis.

has been with some plausibility defended. I have here followed Bentley, but doubtingly, I confess, in his emendation.

.... male inominatis | Parcite verbis.

Once more,

3 C. v. 17, 18. Si non periret immiserabilis Captiva pubes....

Glareanus (now 300 years ago) saw with just intuition the fault of this text, that it wants the 5th syllable long; and his emendation of perirent, as farther improved by Bentley's immiserabiles, I have cheerfully adopted.

All the instances adduced to support periret in that position are foreign to the purpose, either like one of several, the first here quoted,

3 C. xvi. 26. Quicquid arat impiger Appulus, having the short syllable final prolonged in arsi of daetylic verse; or, like the one rare example,

2 C. vi. 13, 14. Ille terrarum mihi præter omnes
Angulus ridet, ubi non Hymetto....

having the same prolongation in arsi where that part of the verse is dactylic.

III. Nor again, may the nice collocation of words be neglected.

The elder Scaliger, with that pride and dogmatism and partiality so strong in his character, laying down a principle which no doubt has often been verified,

Epitheta quæ in fine versuum existunt, sæpe esse argumento coactæ locutionis, quasi sint carminis supplementa... upon that ground applies his hypercritical censure to this faultless line,

3 C. xxix, 20. Sole dies referente siccos,

When Sol brings round the days-what days?-those of thirst.

In number II. of Quæstiones Venusinæ (J. T.) which Sylvanus Urban has admitted in his pages, (Gent. Mag. April, 1834,) there appears the Plea of Horace the Poet against Scaliger the Critic; and the task of vindication there performed I certainly may consider as complete and satisfactory.

Where the vis or essence lies in the attribute, the Latin poets frequently subjoin it to the noun, and for greater emphasis terminate the verse with it. He who runs, may read this in the practice of Virgil; twice for instance, in the course of eleven lines, Æn. viii. 662, 672, and elsewhere as often as from other causes it could be expected to occur.

Consistently with this remark, let me add, the text of Horace, A. P. 36, 7, ought here to have been correctly exhibited, on Bentley's emendation....

Quam naso vivere pravo, Spectandum nigris oculis nigroque capillo.

The relative position of the adjective forms one only out of many points, which give exercise to the Poet's taste; and in the varieties of lyric verse, when emphasis or harmony along with metrical movement comes in play, the curiosa felicitas of Horace in managing those concurrent circumstances may be readily seen.

In happily restoring the lection of all the MSS.,

3 C. 111. 6. Nec fulminantis magna manus Jovis:

Bentley, with some haughtiness perhaps, but not without justice, has subjoined, Paucis a naturâ datum est habere aurem.

Now as the latter hemistich of the first and second lines of the Alcaic stanza coincides with that of the line called Asclepiadean, the number of those hemistichs, amounting to little short of a thousand, affords opportunity enough to indicate the combinations most in favour with Horace's car. And in lines of peculiar construction like that above quoted,

Nec fulminantis | magna manus | Jovis:

Non ante verso | lene merum | cado.

the collocation of the words also is found to be similar:

1 C. xxxvi. 10. Cressâ ne careat | pulchra dies | notâ.

3 C. xvi. 30. ——— et segetis | certa fides | meæ.

--- xxix. 2.

IV. On the subject of various lections, and on passages of disputed or difficult meaning, where questions of style and sense are concerned, a curious and instructive compilation might be made; on the basis of Dr. Bentley's notes, so rich in critical knowledge and vigorous intellect, taken along with a selection from those of Lambinus, Cruquius, and Tor-rentius, the tria lumina of the commentaries of that learned age upon Horace.

My humbler office embraces only a few of the most prominent deviations here admitted from the common text, sufficient by way of specimen to show in what light I have viewed the task or duty of an Editor at the present day.

Those remarkable passages, as here without scruple edited.

1 C. 1. 29. TE doctarum hederæ præmia frontium, &c., and have received an ample discussion, but not too much for their importance, the latter in P. D. p. 24, and the former in App. 111. p. 119.

3 C. XXIX. 6. UT semper-udum Tibur, &c.

With the same frankness let me avow that the time is come when similar decision may elsewhere be justified; especially in regard of such texts, as, after the strong doubt or perplexity excited by the criticism of able scholars, cannot be satisfactorily construed unless with some slight change, itself of a probable nature.

Four cases of that sort are the following:

(1) 1 C. XXIII. 5. Nam, seu mobilibus vepris inhorruit

Ad ventum foliis :

otherwise edited reris and vitis.

Bentley's note on the passage amounts to demonstration.

(2) 1 C. xxxvIII. 5. Simplici myrto nihil adlabores, Sedulus euræ.

with the syntax like that of

1 C. XXII. 1. Integer vitæ, &c.

The common readings, try them as you will, of eura or euro, absolutely defy all attempts at rational interpretation.

(3) 2 C. xiv. 26, 7, 8. ——— et mero | Tinget pavimentum superbis Pontificum potiore cαnis. Here, too, the various readings or conjectures, superbus, superbum, superbo, leave the field fairly open for the admission of superbis, recommended by Horace's favourite use of the adjective in the third line, often so preluding to its noun in the fourth; and what is more remarkable, by that very adjective being three times employed by Horace in the very same relative position.

1 C. xxxv. 3, 4. superbo....triumphos.

— xxxvii. 31, 2. superbo....triumpho.
4 C. xv. 7, 8. superbis | Postibus.

(4) 2 C. xx. 5, 6, 7. —— Non ego, Pauperum
Sanguis parentum, non ego, quem vocant,
Dilecte Mæcenas, obibo; &c.

Here, if any clear and consistent interpretation could be devised for the old reading, quem vocas, the potior conditio possidentis might exclude any pretender from usurping its place. But the brilliant suggestion of Dr. Bentley, quem vocant, scilicet homines invidi, (for even so late as 4 C. III. 16. Et jam dente minus mordeor invido, envy was not quite extinct,) may now be allowed to come in by acclamation.

One more remark, and I have done: and that principally to introduce a topic hitherto perhaps but slightly touched, the natural similitude between Horace and Cicero, as belonging to the same age, in the language of literature and of morals and of civil life, common to both, along with the illustration, which from that source may be occasionally derived, to the writings of Horace.

In a well known passage of the Epistle to the Pisos, that old reading, 26, 7. —— Sectantem levia nervi Deficiunt animique. had kept possession, perhaps undisturbed, till the days of Bentley. He does justice abundantly to the claims of levia; and then by one happy quotation from Tully.. lenitas sine nervis..turns the scale in favor of lenia.

In another passage, where the attribute demissus, in its better sense and in its connection with probus, had been quite overlooked and even misinterpreted,

Nobiscum vivit, multum demissus homo? illi Tardo ac cognomen pingui damus.

Lambinus was the first to eatch the true scent, though in curis secundis he returned to the old interpretation: Bentley's strong discernment apprehended the truth so suggested, and adopted for the demonstration of it the two sentences from Tully which Lambinus, but without ultimate conviction, originally adduced.

Cic. de Orat. 11. 43...eaque omnia, quæ proborum, demissorum, non acrium, non pertinacium, non litigiosorum, non acerborum sunt, valde benevolentiam conciliant.

Pro Murenâ, 40. Sit apud vos modestiæ locus, sit demissis hominibus perfugium, sit auxilium pudori.

THE METRES

OF

HORACE.

In presenting to Scholars a new Treatise on the Metres of Horace, I cannot but anticipate a candid reception for what is so proposed. Whatever has been hitherto done under that title, has seldom exceeded a meagre account (and that not in all points accurate) of the scansion merely, with little or no regard to the verse in its structure. The very latest tract, bearing date 1803,—that which Doering has given as a communication from his friend Sparr, deserves generally the compliment paid by him of being very skilfully and correctly executed. Yet even that, though seldom tainted with absolute error, is greatly deficient in some essential points, as to Horace's earlier and later modes of constructing the same verse. This remark will be strikingly apparent in our account of the Alcaic Stanza; occasionally it will be verified in others also.

If the question be asked on what grounds the present treatise may be entitled to higher consideration as more nearly embracing every desideratum which belongs to the subject; let it be said once for all, that from various sources of critical observation, in which my own professional study for many years had its due share, the work now published has been very diligently composed.

A precise enumeration of the different authors to whom my obligations are due, and partly so in very recent perusal, even with some particularity, will be excused as an act of justice, in this stage the more necessary; because, consistently with any brevity of design, it will not be convenient to acknowledge every item of such debt, where it separately occurs.

- 1. The late Dr. Charles Burney, the vir doctissimus et mihi longo anicitiæ usu conjunctissimus of Professor Porson, (ad. Med. 89,) in the Monthly Review, Jan. 1798, Vol. xxv., as the author of a critique original at once and elaborate on Samuel Butler's edition of Marcus Musurus, prefixed to the publication of Greek and Latin Odes, &c., by that distinguished scholar, who since then has borne such a splendid name as the master of Shrewsbury school.
- 2. The Hon. and Rev. Dr. William Herbert, partly as the Editor of Musæ Etonenses in 1795, with a short Preface of critical remarks; but far more extensively, as the author of that article in the Edinburgh Review, (No. XII. July, 1805, pp. 357—386,) on Mitford's Harmony of Language: in which not only is the claim of accent brought forward to share with quantity in the regulation and cadence of Latin verse, but after a full demonstration of that point a clue also is given to trace the gradual progress by which accent superseded quantity in European metre. Let me here acknowledge the more recent and personal obligation conferred in Dr. Herbert's correspondence with me, and in the opportunity granted to benefit by the nice powers of discrimination which he possesses in so extraordinary a degree.
- 3. The Editor of Musæ Cantabrigienses, 1810, as having contributed a neat conspectus of practical observations on the structure of the third verse of the Alcaic stanza.
- 4. The celebrated Professor Hermann, as the author of Elementa Doctrine Metrice, Leipsig, 1816; Glasgow, reprinted, 1817: a work justly styled by Dr. Parr, "the enlarged and improved edition of his admirable book, De Metris."

- 5. Sparr, as the author of Metra Horatii Lyrica, in Doering's Horace, 1803 and 1815, already mentioned; who refers his readers for deeper knowledge of the subject to Hermann's Manual of Metres, 1799.
- 6. Mr. Philip Homer, late one of the Masters at Rugby School, and his friend Dr. John Steath, now with every honour and affection attached to his name, (crescit laude recens,) the High Master of St. Paul's; as the Authors of Remarks on the Latin Alcaic and Sapphic Metres exhibited in the Odes of Horace, 1824.

Those ingenious Remarks, principally undertaken to show the reason why certain modes of structure are more productive of harmony than others, originated confessedly from that article of mine in the Classical Journal, No. XXII., July, 1815, pp. 351—6, which bears the following title.

7. Sketch of the Scansion and Structure of the Alcaic Stanza in Horace, dated in January, 1814, and communicated in May, 1815; on the basis of a schedule of all the verses in that metre (according to their classes of structure, especially those in the third line) drawn up early in the year 1805.

In the sketch here mentioned, except as far as the schedule alluded to is concerned, my sources of knowledge were directly and entirely derived from Dr. Charles Burney. The prevalent modes of structure in the Alcaics of Horace, as to the constituent words, with those either rejected by him after some trial, or evidently not his favourite modes, I stated in that paper many years ago with sufficient exactness perhaps as to the fact: of the reasons for all this, arising from the restrictions which accentual cadence demands, I have only learned to estimate the true value, in a careful perusal very lately bestowed on Dr. Herbert's article in the Edinburgh Review. And my present intention is, on that authority, to illustrate, in some of the most striking instances, the connection existing betwixt the places of accent in Horatian metre, and the legitimate structure of the verse. For a complete and satisfactory view of the subject in all its bearings, the reader must be referred to the pages of the original article.

Before proceeding to the task itself de Metris Horatianis, it may be prudent if not necessary to define the end proposed in that labour. In all the metres I shall hope to make the structure of the verse as well as the scansion understood; while in the most important of them, especially those much in use for exercises of imitative composition, I shall indulge greater latitude of practical detail. Agreeably to that view and purpose, the nineteen denominations in Horace will be treated of thus. Those in the Epodes, (numbered 1. to v11.,) which in the just order of publication now stand first, may in general be dispatched with less of ceremonious regard; and those in the Odes, (VIII. to XII..) hardly lyrical measures, either from difficult construction abandoned after one or two experiments, or from whatever cause not much favoured by Horace, will occupy a briefer notice, but still with sufficient correctness. Thus, a larger consideration may be fairly granted to verses of that species (XIII. to XVII.) which has its character from the Choriambus interposed: and a still more extensive space will thus be allowed to the two principal metres (xvIII, and XIX.) in the Sapphic and the Alcaic stanza.

METRES I. TO VII.

And first of the Epodes; of which the name has been, in P. D. p. 10, already explained.

METRE 1. EPODE 1. Iambic trimeter (1) and dimeter (2).

- (1) Ibis Liburnis inter alta navium,
- (2) Amice, propugnacula.

The scansion of the trimeter (1) runs thus, in all its admissible feet, some of them very rarely admitted.

To the exclusion of the anapest in 5^{to} from the table here given (a foot so frequent in the Senarii of Seneca) there are but three instances of apparent objection, which when examined disappear.

Ep. 11. 35. Pavidumque leporem et advenam lăqueo gruem,

(which is a very rare instance of a line otherwise irregular.) Read laqueō in two syllables, as alveō,

3 C. vII. 28. Tusco denatat alveo.

These two peculiarities,

Ep. v. 79. Priusque cœlum sidet infĕrĭūs mari.

— x1. 23. Nunc gloriantis quamlibet mălĭērculam.

turning similarly on the vowels, may safely be placed on the same footing with Virgil's Geo. 11. 482.

Fluviorum rex Eridanus....

and as that is pronounced Fluvyorum in three syllables, we need not scruple surely so to pronounce inferyus and mulyerculam likewise.

The structure of the trimeter requires a cæsura, or division of words, after the penthemimer usually.

Ep. 11. 1. Beatus ille | | qui procul negotiis...

or after the hepthemimer sometimes,

- - 0-0- 0 || - 0-05

Ibid. 19. Ut gaudet insitiva | decerpens pyra.

And here comes in the curious question of accentual cadence. The words of the Romans then were accented by an invariable rule (and do we not now follow a similar rule in reading Latin?) namely, that if the penult be long, it shall be accented, as amábam; if it be short, the antepenult shall be accented, whether long or short, as amáveram, potúeram.

All monosyllables were accented; and in these pages, if not so marked, may be always so reckoned. Only, enclitics like que, ve, ne, must be taken as forming part of the preceding word. Thus,

Ep. 11. 45. Claudénsque téxtis....

Now for the application. The Iambic trimeter in its legitimate construction, whatever other accent it has, takes a leading one on the sixth place: or if not so, then it usually requires to be accented on the fourth and the eighth. Thus,

Ep. 1. 3. Paratus omne Cæ'saris periculum...

--- 7. Utrumne jússi persequémur otium.

The leading accent on the sixth, though generally with penthemimeral cæsura, and at the beginning of a word as in Cæ'saris above, may yet be otherwise circumstanced, as,

Ep. 1. 15. Roges, tuum labóre quid juvem meo.

and

Ep. 11. 19. Ut gaudet insitíva decerpens pyra.

Nay, more:

Ep. 1. 19. Ut assidens implúmibus pullis avis, is an Iambic verse, because the sixth is accented: whereas Ut assidens púllis ávis deplumibus, though exactly the same as to quantities, would not be a verse, on account of the wrong position of the accents.

A similar remark may be made on

Ep. x1. 15. Quod si meis inæ'stuat præcordiis, as having neither cassura; and yet it is an Iambic verse from the correctness of its leading accent.

In long words constituted like inverecundus, if not in others, the Romans may seem to have admitted a secondary accent on the first syllable: a supposition which would restore propriety to the following verse,

Ep. x1. 13. Simul caléntis inverecúndus deus.

It remains to be noticed as a singular fact, that of verses constructed like

Ep. 1. 7. Utrumne jússi | persequémur | otium, many examples occur in Terence as his Prologues alone may testify, in the Epodes of Horace, and in the Fables of Phædrus; yet in the Tragedies which bear the name of Seneca, not a single instance can be found of a verse constituted like that above.

Iambie dimeter (2).

The scansion of this verse as to its predominant and admissible feet:

In the dimeter the --- initial, though from the trimeter not excluded, seems inadmissible. Casimir Sarbievius uses it,

Epod. 1. 18. Metuenda jaceret fulmina.

As to the structure, it is worthy of observation, that a verse from its composition accented like the following,

C. Sarb. Ep. v. 2. Non núdus énsium tímor, though a just dimeter as to quantity, is never found in Horace, nor in any author of the early ages.

Now as the iambus itself is used freely in the third place, this combination might have occurred very often, if it had not been purposely avoided. In what then does the faultiness of that line consist? Clearly in this, that it bears the accentual cadence peculiar to a very different kind of verse, the Glyconic: of which verse, 4 C. 111. 11. Et spissæ némorum cómæ.

is a very common form; and it may be better contrasted perhaps with Dr. Herbert's fictitious example,

Et spissa montium coma,

than with the real faulty dimeter given above from Sar-

METRE II. EPODE XI. Iambic dimeter (1) as in Metre I. (1), and with Elegiambus (2) so called.

- (1) Petti, nihil me sicut antea juvat
- (2) Scribere versiculos | amore perculsum gravi.
- (2) This verse consists of two parts; the first like the latter half of the Dactylic pentameter but unlimited in the mode of its construction; with the last syllable indifferently long or short, and even as in vv. 14, 24, with the hiatus of a long vowel before a vowel initial in the next portion of the verse.

Fervidiora mero | arcana promorat loco.

Vincere mollitià | amor Lycisci me tenet.

The second part is the Iambic dimeter (but without -vinitial) as in Metre 1. (2).

For the meaning of the term asynartete (ἀσυνάρτητος) applied to the metre (2) of this distich, Dr. Bentley's learned note affords full satisfaction: the following extract contains the essential part of it.—"Sub primis Poeticæ artis initiis simplici pede versus decurrebant, Heroicus dactylo, Trochaicus et Iambicus uterque suo; nisi ubi pes omnibus illis cognatus, Spondeus, interponebatur, quo versus, ut Noster ait, tardior paullo graviorque ad aures veniret. Postea, ut varietatis gratiam aucuparentur, cola quædam sive partes Heroici versus cum colis Trochaici generis vel Iambici, et viçissim, in unum versum miscebant; unde magnus novorum versuum numerus illico nascebatur: quos Græci magistri 'Ασυναρτήτους, hoc est, inconnexos vocabant; quia alterum colon altero diversi generis connecti et coagmentari non potest, utcumque uno versiculo utrumque sit conclusum."

METRE III. EPODE XII. Dactylic hexameter (1) with Dactylic tetrameter (2).

- (1) Quid tibi vis, mulier, nigris dignissima barris?
- (2) Munera quid mihi, quidve tabellas.

Of the common hexameter (1) there is little to remark; and that is quite obvious.

Of the tetrameter (2), which has its scansion thus (1 C. xxvIII. 2, alone excepted)....

the structure also is easily discerned-

METRE IV. EPODE XIII. Dactylic hexameter (1) as in Metre III. (1), with Iambelegus (2) so called.

- (1) Horrida tempestas cœlum contraxit, et imbres
- (2) Nivesque deducunt Jovem; | nunc mare, nunc silüæ.
- (2) This line, one of the class of verses, asynartetes, already mentioned in Metre 11. consists of two parts, the first Iambic dimeter, as in Metre 1. (2); and the second like the latter half of the Dactylic pentameter.

In fact, the Iambelegus is the inverse of the Elegiambus: its Iambic part has the last syllable indifferently long or short, but betwixt the two parts no hiatus occurs.

Metre 111. (1), with Iambic dimeter (2) as in Metre 1. (2).

- (1) Mollis inertia cur tantam diffuderit imis
- (2) Oblivionem sensibus.

METRE VI. EPODE XVI. Dactylic hexameter (1) as before, with Iambic trimeter (2) as in Metre 1. (1).

- (1) Altera jam teritur bellis civilibus ætas,
- (2) Suis et ipsa Roma viribus ruit.

The verse (2) is purely Iambic, and so far very peculiar.

METRE VII. EPODE XVII. Iambic trimeter as M. 1. (1), and that alone.

Jamjam efficaci do manus scientiæ.

METRES VIII. TO XII.

Now of the Metres hardly to be called lyrical.

METRE VIII. 1 C. IV. (1) Dactylic tetrameter + three Trochees, with (2) Iambic trimeter wanting a syllable at the close.

- (1) Solvitur acris hiems grata vice | veris et Favoni,
- (2) Trahuntque siccas | machinæ carinas.

The verse (1) has this scansion, differing in the 4th foot from Metre 111. (2).

and the divisio vocum is constantly observed betwixt the Dactylic part and the Trochaic.

The verse (2) in fact consists of two parts, which, having the divisio vocum constantly, may be scanned according to the structure; the one Iambic, and the other as in (1) Trochaic.

Cas. Sarbievius when writing in this metre, violates the law of casura in (1).

2 Lyr. xx. 53. Nec quæ dispositis toga luxuri | osior lapillis.

nor has he any authority from Horace for a line constructed (as with him it often is) with the Dactyl in 4^{to} formed by one word.

Ibid. v. 1. Qualis ubi Phrygia Jovis | armiger || educatus Ida.

METRE IN. 4 C. VII. (1) Dactylic hexameter, as before, with (2) the latter half of a Dactylic pentameter.

- (1) Diffugere nives: redeunt jam gramina campis.
- (2) Arboribusque comæ.

METRE x. 1 C. VIII. (1) one Choriambus (---) initial followed by Bacchius (---) or Amphibrach (---), with (2) Sapphicus major, or the long Sapphic.

- (1) Lydia, dic per omnes
- (2) Te deos óro | Sýbarin | cur properes amando.

The verse (1) has its scansion thus,

and for structure always has a Dactylic word or a Dactylic combination to begin with, so as to exclude the accent on the third syllable:

Sæpe | tímor | fugavit, accordingly, would be illegitimate.

The verse (2) has for its scansion the Epitritus secundus (---) with two choriambi and a trisyllabic ending like (1).

and for structure it has two regular cæsuras as in the quoted line.

The following construction, it is evident, would violate the accentual cadence of the verse,

Te deos orámus | I'tyn cur properes amando..

as well as the law of the eæsura.

METRE XI. 2 C. XVIII. (1) Trochaic of seven syllables. (2) Iambic trimeter wanting a syllable, as in M. VIII. (2).

- (1) Non ebur neque aureum
- (2) Mea renidet | in domo lacunar.

Verse (1) has its scansion thus, without any thing to remark in its structure.

-- -- -- -

Verse (2) in scansion differs from its model above referred to only once.

v. 34. Regumque pueris nec satelles Orci, where the tribrach (~~) in 2^{do}, if that deserves notice, might be avoided, and on some authority, by reading Regumque natis..instead.

METRE XII. 3 C. XII. Ionic a minore (~- -).

Miserarum est | nec amori | dare ludum | neque dulci, according to Dr. Bentley, (by whose critical erudition here also the reader may benefit,) consists of four Stanzas, each of ten feet, agreeably to the following scheme:

The casura betwixt the several feet (as in vv. 5, 7, 8, 12) is not strictly observed; though by the above distribution all awkwardness is avoided betwixt one line and another.

Cas. Sarbievius, adopting this metre in one of his compositions, 2 Lyric. xxvIII., has made the stanza consist of two trimeters and one tetrameter; and violates the synaphea or continuity of scansion betwixt line and line, (vv. 5, 6, 9, 10,) which in Horace from first to last is observed.

METRES, XIII, XIV, XV, XVI, XVII.

Five Metres are here classed together, from the interposed Choriambus, so called, common to them all; that is, from one or more Choriambi interposed between a Spondee initial and an Iambic foot (~) at the close.

METRE XIII. 1 C. XI. The Long Alcaic, consisting of three Choriambi interposed in that manner.

__ _____

Such is the seansion: its cæsural structure, as marked in that scheme, is once only neglected in the 32 such lines written by Horace, and that in a compounded word.

I C. XVIII. 16. Arcanique Fides | prodiga per | lucidior vitro.

The Polish Poet, apparently from affectation, has done this with great license both of casura and of accent.

3 Lyric. XVII. AD TIBERIM. VV. 4, 5.

Quid per plana, per abrupta, per impervia lubricum
Vectigal domino deproperas Nereidum patri?

METRE XIV. 1 C. 1. The Asclepiadean verse, or the Asclepiad.

Mæcenas, atavis edite regibus.

The scansion and structure are seen together in the following scheme:

This verse constantly preserves the cæsura as here marked, except in two instances.

4 C. viii. 17. Non incendia Car | thaginis impiæ..

2 C. x11. 25. Dum flagrantia de | torquet ad oscula...

The latter example perhaps may be defended or excused on the same ground with the Alcaic verse,

1 C. xxxvII. 5. Antehac nefas de | promere Cæcubum..

. Metre xv. 1 C. III. (1) Glyconic so called. (2) Asclepiad as in Metre xiv.

- (1) Sie te diva potens Cypri
- Sic fratres Helenæ, lucida sidera,

The verse (1) has its scansion thus, without any deviation: for the line 1 C. xv. 36. as sometimes edited, with -- initial,

Ignis Iliaeas domos...

should unquestionably stand thus corrected:

Ignis Pergameas domos.

On the authority of the worse reading, however, Casimir has occasionally erred.

4 Lyric. xvi. 47. Jussit ire Borysthenem.

In this verse also the nicety of accentuation, which is necessary, deserves to be remarked. And the fictitious line,

Velóces pér ágros cánes, though correct in scansion and quantity, is not, however, a Latin verse, because it has not the right accentual cadence observed in the Glyconic: it has that of a verse generically different, the Iambic dimeter,

Ep. vr. 16. Inúltus út flébo púer.

One real line, faulty in that very way from the pen of the clegant Grotius, which closes his Hymn of Zacharias paraphrased, may show, that Dr. Herbert's remark here recorded does not guard against an imaginary error.

Securum pér iter pédes.

METRE XVI. 1 C. vi. (1, 2, 3) Asclepiadean, as in M. xiv. (4) Glyconic, as in M. xv.

Scriberis Vario fortis, et hostium Victor, Mæonii carminis aliti, Quam rem cunque ferox navibus aut equis Miles, te duce, gesserit.

Metre xvII. 1 C. v. (1, 2) Asclepiadean, as before in M. xIV. (3) Pherecratian. (4) Glyconic, as before in M. xV.

Quis multà gracilis te puer in rosa
Perfusus liquidis urget odoribus.
Grato, Pyrrha, sub antro:
Cui flavam religas comam...

verse (3) has this scansion

(3)

The last syllable is always long; and twice only with hiatus, in a long vowel, 1 C. XXIII. 3. 8. a nicety not much observed by later writers of this Horatian stanza.

In the verse (3) also, the just collocation of the accents may not be neglected; which Casimir, however, has once or twice disregarded.

For instance,

4 Lyric. xxvIII. 7. Raptámus, puerórum...

is accented in a way quite unknown to Horace: it has the very same cadence with the Ionic a minore, Tenerórum puerórum, a different species of verse; and though with the same quantity, is as unlike as can be imagined to (1 C. v. 7.)

Nígris æ'quora véntis.

No ear could confound the verse of Horace with that of Casimir.

The Christian Poet, PRUDENTIUS, (circ. 400 A.D.) has constructed a system of his own out of the third, second, and first (in that order) of these interposed Choriambics; for which, in the nomenclature sometimes applied to Horace's Odes, the name would stand thus:

τρίκωλος τρίστροφος.

denoting that there are three kinds of verse, and then that three lines form the strophe or stanza.

The following specimen is taken from the Procenium to his Carmina, and only by one blemish at v. 6. discovers any incorrectness in the composition.

Per quinquennia jam decem,
Ni fallor, fuimus: septimus insuper
Annum cardo rotat, dum fruimur sole volubili.
Instat terminus, et diem
Vicinum senio jam Deus applicat:
Quid nos utile tan | ti spatio temporis egimus?
Ætas prima crepantibus
Flevit sub ferulis: mox docuit toga
Infectum vitiis falsa loqui, non sine crimine.

Let me take this opportunity, in the words of Dr. Herbert, to call the attention of scholars to the splendid passage at the end of Prudentius contra Symmachum, concerning the vestal virgins: it begins,

v. 1069. Captivus pudor ingratis addicitur aris, and is inferior to nothing of the same kind in Juvenal.

METRE XVIII. 1 C. II.

THE SAPPHIC STANZA.

- (1, 2, 3.) The Sapphic verse commonly so called:
- (4.) The Adonic verse, ---- ---
 - A. Jam satis terris | nivis atque diræ Grandinis misit pater, et rubente Dextera sacras jaculatus arces, Terrnit urbem.

The first three verses have their scansion thus, the Epitritus secundus and the Choriambus, followed by Bacchius (~- ~) or Amphibrach(~-~), as in the close of Metre x, the Sapphicus major.

_____,

On comparing this Metre with that, the difference will at once be seen to consist in one Choriambus more or less.

Thus,

1 C. vIII. 6. Inter æquales equitat, Gallica nec lupatis . . .

is altered into the common Sapphic by an omission to that amount.

Inter æquales equitat lupatis.

Its structure generally coincides with that of (A.) the first line above. Sometimes, however, it admits this variation,

B. 1 C. x. 1. Mercuri, facunde, | nepos | Atlantis...

and this, but less frequently,

C. 4 C. 11. 33. Concines majore | Poeta | plectro.

And the only clear deviation from one or other of these forms occurs in describing the dithyrambic boldness of Pindar, 4 C. 11. 9. Laureà | donandus | Apollinari.

The relative position of its accents remains to be considered: and the cadence of the Sapphic is regulated in the form A, by being accented on the 6th syllable, or on the 4th and 8th.

Grandinis misit Páter, et rubente Dexterâ sácras jaculátus arces...

In the occasional varieties of form under B and C, the accent is admitted on the 5th and 7th, or on the 5th and 8th:

- B. Mercuri, facúnde, népos Atlantis . . .
- C. Concines majóre Poéta plectro.

which modes of accentuation are compatible with a disyllabic beginning as well as with the trisyllabic just given.

- B. Fervet, immensúsque rúit profundo...
- C. Lenis Ilithyía, tuére matres.

With all this diversity of forms in the verse, under such limitations as structure and accent so combined will permit, modern writers of the Sapphic Ode have not been content; or rather they have not been acquainted with it. Amongst instances in abundance from the revival of letters to the present day, the following out of the Musac Etonenses may serve for sufficient illustration of scansion correct and structure violated.

Vol. 1. p. 28. v. I. Pertinax | et luxurians juventa...
p. 189. v. 25. Hortuli dat | primitias aprici.

Verses like these admit of no defence even from the authority of Catullus, who wrote the Sapphic stanza in all its Greek freedom, as yet unchecked by the severer genius of the Latin: for even the following lines,

x1. 6. 23. Seu Sacas | săgittiferosque | Parthos.
Ultimi flos | prætereunte | postquam . . .

evidently afford a different certainly, if not a more pleasing, structure.

If, however, in the versification of modern scholars we have to condemn unlicensed deviations from the models of Horace, we shall find in the formal practice of those early Poets who came after him, something more remarkable in the opposite direction.

In Statius, for example, and in Prudentius, we remark a decided predilection for the structure (A) so denoted here, with the cadence of accent on the 6th syllable, or of that required on the 4th and the 8th.

The Sapphics of Statius, 4 Silv. vII., from his affection for the one casura after the 5th syllable and its concomitant accentuation, have a very monotonous sound to the ear after the rich varieties of Horace; while Prudentius at so much later a period exhibits the same preference for unvaried harmony, giving indeed a much stronger proof of it in one Sapphic Poem of 200 lines without a single deviation from the structure alluded to. That Hymn, in honour of the eighteen Martyrs, presents, on the other hand, the two following examples:

v. 57. Sola in occursum | numerosióres . . .

v. 195. Spes ut absolvam | retinaculórum...

which cannot be said to have the requisite character, the 6th syllable accented; unless polysyllabic words of that dimension (which seems not improbable) had then got an accent on their 1st syllable as well as on their 5th.

An observation arises here, so important if connected with the chronology of Horace's books as originally published, that the reader will hardly fail to take some interest in the detail which follows.

In the first and second books of the Odes, that peculiar form of the Sapphic here marked (B) is very sparingly, some seven times in all, introduced. In the third book, though otherwise (it will be seen) distinguished as an era in Horace's alteration of the Alcaic, not a single departure from the form (A) of the Sapphic line is anywhere admitted; while the form (C) has never yet appeared at all. Pass to the Carmen Sæculare and the fourth book; and you find the form (C) for the first time introduced, with the form (B) more largely than before, contributing to the improvement and variety of the stanza.

Under these circumstances, let us look to the Nouvelle Distribution (already alluded to, P. D. p. 13) devised by M. Sanadon; and see whether he bestows any notice either on the progressive stages, so well defined, by which Horace carried that lyrical metre to its ultimate perfection, or on the temporary doubt, betrayed in his third book, whether he was right or not in admitting the first step of variety. In the face of these striking facts then, as now to us they must appear, demonstrating the separate entireness of the third book from those before, and from the fourth book with the Carmen Sæculare which followed, M. Sanadon, on a fancied plan of his own, tears the whole twenty-six Sapphic Odes (except a few omitted) from all their ancient neighbourhood, and scatters them ad libitum, far and wide, over his nouvelle distribution!

After tracing with this exactness the commencement, the halt or retrograding, and the satisfactory close, of Horace's career in Sapphic versification, it remains briefly here to show on what general ratio of the different modes of structure any composition in that metre should be formed, so as best to coincide with the practical model of the Poct's own mature judgment. The Carmen Sæculare then, one of his two longest Odes in that verse, may be fairly taken for the purpose; and with sufficient accuracy of proportion, it presents the following result, to combine more or less, in every twelve of the longer verses, nine of the common form A, with two and one of the varieties in B and C respectively. Let the last Stanza of the C. S. which happens to contain them all, represent the three forms, with their order inverted.

C. 1. Hæc Jovem sentire | deosque | cunctos

B. 2. Spem bonam sertamque | domum | reporto,

A. 9. Doctus et Phœbi chorus et Dianæ

Dicere laudes.

And now after expatiating so long on the principal matters, we shall dismiss the minuter points (though they too may not be disregarded) with a few remarks for caution and for reference.

The occasional synaphea, when a word overflows into the Adonic, is sufficiently known from the following amongst several instances,

1 C. 11. 19, 20. Labitur ripâ, Jove non probante, uxorius amnis.

That closeness of union betwixt the third line and the fourth (observed by Sappho) is sometimes neglected by Horace; who leaves the termination um not cut off or the vowel in hiatu before the Adonic; as

 C. 11. 47. Neve te nostris vitiis iniquum Ocyor aurâ, &c.

—— xII. 9. Unde vocalem temere insecutæ

Orphea silvæ.

Some instances here and there occur of the strict synaphea betwixt the second and third lines.

2 C. 11. 18, 19. Dissidens plebi numero beatorum

Eximit virtus.

4 C. 11. 22, 3. —— animumque moresque

Aureos educit in astra, . . .

The connection between the sense of two lines made by et or ac, under circumstances like the following, is freely allowed; and twice together, if necessary.

2 C. vi. 1. Septimi Gades aditure mecum, et Cantabrum indoctum juga ferre nostra, et Barbaras Syrtes.

Of all these niceties Professor Hermann (notwithstanding the adage, Aquila non captat muscas) has given a very accurate detail, lib. 111. cap. xvi. Glasgow Edition, pp. 444, 5, 6.

Finally, as in the other metres sometimes, so in this, after elision, the convenient copulate et is privileged to form the cæsural syllable,

1 C. xxxII. 13. O decus Phœbi, et | dapibus supremi, &c.

In this verse

3 C. xi. 50. Dum favet nox | et Venus: i secundo... the effect is awkward altogether.

One instance occurs also where an has the same privilege.

3 C. xxvII. 38, 9. —— Vigilansne ploro

Turpe commissum? an | vitio carentem, &c.

METRE XIX. 1 C. IX.

THE ALCAIC STANZA.

(1, 2) Two Iambic feet cum longā in five syllables with cæsura, followed by two Dactylic feet, generally by a Dactyl and a Cretic. (3) Iambic of nine syllables, but with peculiar limitation. (4) Two Dactyls followed by two Trochaic feet.

Vides, ut alta | stet nive candidum Soracte, nec jam | sustineant onus Silvæ laborantes, geluque Flumina constiterint acuto?

The first and second lines have their seansion thus.

5-V-- | -VV-VY

The third thus always,

5 - 0 - - - 0 - 5

The fourth thus,

1. In the first and second lines, through the first and second books, a marked preference of the Spondaic begining to the Iambic is quite obvious: this becomes more striking still through the third book: and the fourth book has not one instance, even with a polysyllabic word as in the third, much less with a dissyllabic word initial, of an Iambus thus placed:

1 C. XXXI. 17. Frui | paratis, et valido mihi . . .

3 C. I. 2. Favete | linguis: carmina non prius...

--- 26. Tumultuosum . . .

In addition to the fact already adduced, P. D. p. 13, of the more severe model of structure in the third line introduced by Horace into the latter books of his Odes, we have here shown that in other points also a fine sensibility of ear led him to yet nicer improvements as congenial to the Latin tongue; which in imitative composition must now be regarded, if any respect is due to the authority of Horace.

2. The following cases of elision may deserve a brief notice.

Of elisions after the cæsura like the following,

1 C. xxxiv. 13. Mutare, et insignem | attenuat Deus.

3 C. I. 5. Regum timendorum | in proprios greges. there are not quite twenty in all. The enclitic que, elided thus, seems very rare,

1 C. xxxv. 10. Urbesque gentesque | et Latium ferox.

A few instances occur, where the clided word ends with a short vowel:

3 C. IV. 6. - audire | et videor pios . . .

and a few also in words like invisi, sub dio, incesto, redonabo.

Of a word at the end of the first line clided before et in sense belonging to the second, the following with a few others are instances.

- 1 C. 1x. 13. Quid sit futurum cras, fuge quærere, et Quem sors dierum, &c.
- C. XXIX. 9. Fastidiosam desere copiam, et Molem propinquam, &c.
- ----- 49. Fortuna sævo læta negotio, et Ludum insolentem, &c.

In two instances, neque at the conclusion of the second verse commences a new sentence with the third,

3 C. 1. 38. Scandunt eodem quo dominus ; neque Decedit æratâ, &c.

3 C. xxix. 46. Quodcunque retro est, efficiet; neque Diffinget, &c.

The case of consilium and principium is peculiar.

3 C. IV. 41. Vos lene consilium et datis, et dato Gandetis alma.

- vi. 6. Hinc omne principium, huc refer exitum.

Here too, in the example from Virgil already adduced,

Geo. 11. 482. Fluviorum rex Eridanus . . .

which must have been pronounced fluvyorum, we find an immediate solution for the difficulty; if the two words are but allowed to have that pronunciation, consilyum and principyum, each in three syllables.

And here it may not be impertinent to remark, that in the hexameters of Virgil the genitives, servitii, auxilii, &c., though commodious to the verse, never appear; while Horace uses only the old forms, consili and imperi, 3 C. IV. 65. 4 C. XV. 14. On the transition from the single i to the double ii (as Ovid has it) in the later days of Augustus, vid. Bentley's note, Andria. Act II. Sc. I. V. 20.

3. Let us now proceed to the subject of structure, in some of its more important points.

The place of the cæsura is accurately observed, except in the following extraordinary cases,

1 C. xxxvII. 14. Mentémque lymphá | tam Mareótico ...

4 C. xIV. 17. Spectándus in cert | ámine Mártio . . .

the latter of which from the distribution of the accents is far less faulty than the former.

Of the three instances which follow, the casura may perhaps be saved by the emphatic preposition of the compound verb in the second, but hardly so in the other two, although relieved perhaps by the clision.

1 C. xvi. 21. Hostile aratrum exercitus insolens . . .

1 C. xxxvII. 5. Antehac nefas de | promere Cæcubum . . .

2 C. XVII. 21. Utrumque nostrum incredibili modo . . .

Not one of the three peculiarities is repeated in the latter books.

4. The consideration of accentual cadence here returns upon us. That cadence usually requires the leading accent to fall on the fourth syllable, as,

1 C. IX. 5, 6. Dissolve frígus. Large repónens...

or in entire words like the following, as,

3 C. I. 25, 6. Desiderántem . . . Tumultuósum . . .

- Several instances, however, occur of the accent falling on the second and fifth syllables, where the fifth is a monosyllabic word connected in sense with what follows: and as they are all except one in the latter books, Horace must have admitted that variety on purpose, absolute sameness being more offensive than occasional deviations even from the best general model.

2 C. III. 22. Nil interest, an | pauper et infimâ . . .

4 C. IV. 69. Carthágini jám | non ego nuntios...

4 C. xIV. 41. Te Cantaber, non | ante domabilis.

Add to these also the following, 3 C. v. 13, 33; xxi. 10, 4 C. iv. 37; xiv. 33, 45.

Under this peculiarity in the cæsural syllable, a few other instances may be classed.

3 C. 11. 6. In rebus: illum ex | mænibus hosticis.

-- v. 10. Anciliorum et | nominis et togæ.

— v1. 22. Matura virgo ; et fingitur artubus.

5. The detail of final syllables when any line, as the first or second, ends with a vowel before a vowel initial in the next line, will hardly deserve separate consideration here: and yet it may be worth the while to stop and remark upon the particular transition betwixt the third line and the fourth, inasmuch as the hiatus involved in that is rare in the two first books, while it occurs only once in the third book, and in the fourth not at all.

3 C. v. 11, 12. Oblitus, æternæque Vestæ
Incolumi Jove et urbe Roma.

Now in the practice of Casimir we have a very singular contrast to all this. In his stanzas, the open vowel, short or long, occurring commonly at a rate six times as often as in the first and second books of Horace, abundantly indicates the obvious facilities accepted by the one writer, declined and avoided by the other. And under these circumstances, we cannot well doubt but the Poet of Tivoli from the singular abstinence shown in the two latter books, must have taken especial counsel of his ear in the interval.

6. One remark of literary curiosity, and I have done with this part of the Alcaic Stanza.

James Micyllus, the friend of Melancthon, in his De Re Metrica Libri Tres. Francoforti, 1539.—an extraordinary work for that early day, gives specimens of the two first verses, in the following lines,

Carmen relaxat tædia pectoris,
Animumque reddit [sæva gementibus.—p. 108, 9.

Evidently in the second example that dolus qui latet in generalibus, had led him astray. "An Iambic verse may have an Anapest in primo: but this penthemimer, as far as it goes, is an Iambic verse: therefore," &c. &c. Unfortunately, that which might flow well as the integral part of a Senarius, Animumque reddit perditis amantibus . . .

when it forms a separate portion of verse, has the very movement with which the Stanza in its fourth line should close. With slight difference, indeed, the words are here actually so employed.

The third line has its Scansion thus,

During the greater part of that period from the revival of letters when composition in Latin verse was the favourite task of scholars, to the year 1798, when Dr. Charles Burney in the Monthly Review, wrote that critique on S. Butler's Marcus Musurus, &c.; little or no suspicion seems to have existed, that the third line of the Alcaic Stanza was any thing else but an Iambic dimeter with one syllable over, scanned thus, and in the structure liable to no restriction whatsoever.

Even those writers who abstained from the short in the fifth syllable, which any careful reader of Horace would naturally do, indulged every other license in constructing the verse.

Buchanan and Sarbievius admit the fifth syllable short, again and again; and besides some faults peculiar to themselves, violate freely, though in different degrees, every principal rule hereafter mentioned.

As late down as the publication of the Musæ Anglicanæ, of which all the Alcaic odes precede in date the year 1711, the general usage allowed that fifth syllable to be occasionally short. Nor was the point otherwise determined, apparently, till Dr. Bentley, in that year, pronounced and defended his judgment in editing the following line of Horace.

2 C. XIX. 15. Disjecta non leni ruinâ..

(and yet more fully, on this verse, for a similar reason,

3 C. 11. 1. Angustam, amici, pauperiem pati.)

The practical correction of an error so old and so commodious, was far from finding its way immediately into the scholastic exercises of this country.

7. Of the - in primo (so very decided is Horace's preference for the long syllable) not more than ten instances occur in all the books, and only two in the third and fourth, thus affording, by the bye, another link in that chain of internal evidence: and in none of those cases does the verse take a dissyllabic beginning. The following commencement, may pass for a quasi-trisyllable perhaps; and the other examples are quite unquestionable.

1 C. XXIX. 7. Puer quis | ex aulà capillis . .

3 C. III. 71. Referre sermones deorum.

8. At the end of this verse, the terminations orum and arum suffer elision, with et belonging to the next, five times.

1 C. xxxv. 11. 2 C. xiii. 23. 3 C. iii. 71; vi. 3; xxix. 3.

The termination in arvum once, also with triremi, and with Juno, followed by et, as in the preceding case, 3 C. XXIX. 7; 1.39; 1v. 59.

Once this happens with in belonging to the next verse after um final.

1 C. xxxv. 39. ——— O utinam novâ

Incude diffingas retus*um in*Massagetas Arabasque ferrum.

With these elisions may be classed the following:

2 C. 111. 27. Sors exitura, et nos in æternum Exilium impositura cymbæ.

3 C. XXIX. 35. Cum pace delabentis Etruscum

In mare.. &c.

 Now for the structure. The two first feet of this verse may not be comprised in a quadrisyllable or separated in two dissyllables.

These lines from Buchanan are faulty in more ways than one.

Ps. cxxv. 23. Tranquíllitas | secura pulchræ...

- vII. 35. Cándor, píos | servat, malisque...

The following from Horace,

1 C. xxvi. 11. Húnc Lésbio | sacrare plectro...

2 C. III. 27. Sórs exitúra et nos in æternum...

not only differ in the words and in the accentuation from those of Buchanan, but are two forms of the verse in the first and second books which in the third and fourth never appear again: Horace has branded them as illegitimate.

10. Nor may this verse, according to his maturer taste decisively shown, terminate with one quadrisyllabic or with two dissyllabic words,

The form

1 C. XXIX. Pronos relabi | posse | rivos...

which occurs eight times in the first and second books, and which occurs three times in those books, are both of them repudiated entirely from the third and fourth.

2 C. XIX. 19. Nodo coerces | viperino...

By parity of reason, a trisyllable word with an enclitic, as que or ve, or other monosyllable, must be excluded also. And on this peculiar string (it is remarked in the Preface to the Musæ Etonenses) Sarbievius has erred, but in one instance only.

4 Lyric. 1. 55. Pæana dicit, | supplicesque...

And here let us observe, that the entire rejection by Horace of any modes of structure in his later books which were rare even in his earlier, must have quite escaped the notice of grammarians. To their ignorance in teaching, therefore, may partly be imputed the gross errors committed by modern Latin writers: who would hardly have gone so far wrong in defiance of their great model, if they had been rightly instructed first of all, or if they had looked up to Horace as their only legitimate exemplar afterwards. More probably, indeed, as in a new school of Latin poetry, they admired what their predecessors had done or emulated what their contemporaries were doing.

11. Where the third verse has what may be called the quinquesyllabic beginning similar to that of the first and second verses, and so far most injurious to variety,

1 C. IX. 11; XVI. 7. Deprœliantes.... Non Liber æque.

if the modes of ending it just mentioned are proscribed, there remains for that purpose only one combination, in a monosyllabic preceding a trisyllabic word,

Deprœliantes | nec cupressi..

Non Liber æque, | non acuta...

But this form of the verse, though made up of ready materials, (as all later practice shows,) has been sparingly employed by Horace, only some forty times in all: and whether from dislike of the structure itself or from growing preference for others of a nobler kind, he has admitted verses so constructed, at the rate only of half as often in the two latter as in the two former books of Odes. Is there nothing supplied by this internal evidence also, in favour of our general argument?

And here a curious and delicate remark, and one which seems to have escaped observation, remains to be brought forward.

Horace then never once has engaged the monosyllabic word in that close union and so far completed sense with the word subjoined to it, which this verse from Buchanan exhibits.

Ps. xi. 7. ———— ut petat

Incogitantes | e latebris |

Innocuos animique rectos.

And unless in the case of that false reading (for in is unknown to the MSS.),

1 C. XXVII. 19. Quanta laboras in Charybdi, instead of laborabas Charybdi, not one instance have we of a preposition and noun, so insulated together.

In the two passages where in and pro are used, a slight indeed but still perceptible suspension of sound separates the monosyllable from the word immediately following; because that word itself requires to be thrown forward in sustained context with other words in the next verse.

2 C. XIII. 3. Produxit, arbos, in | nepotum Perniciem, &c.

4 C. 1x. 23. Excepit ictus pro | pudicis Conjugibus, &c.

All other examples of the monosyllable, with hardly one exception, are so circumstanced, as to require the same sort of perceptible pause: the context cannot otherwise in correct utterance be carried on.

2 C. III. 15. Dum res et ætas et | sororum Fila trium patiuntur atra.

3 C. 1. 43. Delenit usus, nec | Falerna Vitis Achæmeniumque costum.

4 C. 1x. 47. Nomen beati, qui | Deorum Muneribus sapienter uti, &c. &c.

Then, too, the monosyllabic words used by Horace are evidently of a peculiar class, et, nec, ac, non; in, pro; sic, vel, seu, cur; nune, mox, cras, jam; te, me, hac, quis, qui, quem, &c. This minute observation, while it allows a free use of all analogous words, may be considered as prohibiting words of a different character: whatever has been otherwise done in Alcaic verse since the revival of Letters, not a single monosyllabic verb or noun, occupying the sixth syllable, ever found admission into the 317 stanzas of Horacc.

12. The third verse may not end with a dissyllable word followed by a monosyllable, unless it be an enclitic, as

One form of exception only occurs, it was never repeated:

a line without a parallel, as having an accent on the seventh syllable, and not having it, like all others, on the eighth.

13. Of those favourite or allowed forms of the third verse which constitute that keystone as it were of the Alcaic stanza, the following brief enumeration may serve.

The forms most predominant, then, in all the books, with their structure and accentual cadence, are exemplified in this verse, of which the number amounts nearly to 150 out of the whole 317. But under that scheme, let it be understood, we class all the lines which are thus similarly constructed in their component words; except as far as the monosyllabic words having an accent, though not expressed, constitute the difference.

1 C. IX. 7. Depróme | quadrímum | Sabínâ...

The form which next in point of number demands our notice,

2 C. xv. 7. Spárgent | olivétis | odórem, is entitled to similar varieties according to the words which compose it.

1 C. xvII. 11. Valles [et Usticæ] cubantis

3 C. xxix. 15. Ce'næ | sine aulæ'is | et óstro ...

Somewhat inferior in number is the following form:

3 C. XXIX. 7. Declive | contempléris | árvum..

in which the middle part, from its very constitution, might be expected to consist much less frequently of single words than of combinations like those which follow.

1 C. xxxvII. 11. Speráre | fortunáque | dúlci

3 C. IV. 27. Devóta | non extínxit | árbor.

The form C. seems to have been studiously sought and preferred in the third and fourth books by Horace's more cultivated ear, being actually found in them ten times oftener than in the first and second. Verses of the form are very few in number, as the natural combinations are rare which produce it. Only one case appears of a word in itself sufficiently long.

1 C. xxvII. 3. Mórem | verecundúmque | Bácchum...

2 C. XIII. 19. Róbur | sed improvísa | léti...

3 C. v1. 11. Nóstros | et adjecísse | præ'dam..

4 C. xIV. 35. Pórtus | Alexandría | súpplex.

Of the forms

the still greater rarity may be referred to the same cause.

1 C. xxvII. 15. Nón | érubescéndis | adúrit..

3 C. II. 19. Dúlcem | élaborábunt | sapórem . .

4 C. IV. 11. Núnc | în reluctântes | dracônes...

and
2 C. I. 35. Nón | décoloravére | cæ'des.

N.B. In agreement with the suggestion of Dr. Herbert, already brought forward, a secondary accent is here given to the long compound words in the first, second, and fourth lines last quoted.

The verses of the form fully considered in § 11, may be the more briefly dismissed here.

These lines,

1 C. xv i. 7. Non Liber æ'que | nón | acúta...

-- xxvi. 3. Portáre véntis | quís | sub A'rcto...

--- xxxv. 19. Géstans ahéna | néc | sevérus..

— xxv11. 23. Víx illigátum | té | trifórmi..

show the common forms of structure and accentuation.

This case,

2 C. xx. 23. Compésce clamórem \mid ác \mid sepülchri . .

occurs only once again, 3 C. v. 43.

And these two, peculiar in their accentual beginning,

1 C. 1x. 11. Deprœliántes | néc | cupréssi..

3 C. xvII. 3. Denominátos | ét | nepótum..

(unless a secondary accent be allowed) must be classed with similar commencements of a quinquesyllabic kind (some twenty more or less) which are found in the first and second lines of the stanza. Under one or other of these six forms as stamped with Horace's mature approbation, every legitimate third verse of the Alcaic stanza may now be reduced; and whatever modes of structure and accentuation differ from these, are virtually excluded from all place in any classical exercise of imitative composition.

14. On the Fourth line, which has its scansion thus,

Singularly enough, no scheme of structure likely to be adopted seems quite objectionable and bad, except that which exactly coincides with the scansion; as it is unfortunately given in that medley of metres, known by the name of Pasiphae, which, of course, has no parallel in Horace.

The following forms are exhibited in order, according to their numerical predominance.

The form A. is decidedly the most numerous.

1 C. IX. 4. Flúmina | constíterint | acúto-

-- xvII. 24. Prœ'lia | néc métnes | protérvum.

3 C. Iv. 52. Pélion | imposuísse | Olýmpo.

--- xxix. 36. In mare | nunc lápides | adésos.

1 C. xxxiv. 12. Concútitur, | válet | íma | súmmis.

3 C. i. 16. Om'ne cápax | móvet | úrna | nómen.

——— 40. Póst équitem | sédet | átra | cúra.

We have here to remark a singular change in the practice of Horace.

The form (D) above described appears very seldom in the 1st and 2d books: in the 3d and 4th it became so much a favourite as to appear nearly 10 times as often.

differs from the precedent only by its ending in one quadrisyllabic instead of two dissyllabic words; and the few instances of it are evenly dispersed over the four books.

1 C. 1x. 24. Aát dígito | mále | pertináci.

3 C. xxix. 8. Telégoni | júga | parricídæ.

4 C. xv. 28. Ríte déos | prins | apprecáti.

1 C. xvII. 12. Lévia | personuére | sáxa.

2 C. x111. 4. Perníciem | opprobriúmque | pági.

3 C. xxIII. 20. Fárre pío | ét saliénte | mícâ.

Here also the change in Horace's practice is singular, but in the opposite direction to that of D. The instances, not many in all, occur three times as often in the first two books as in the two latter: the form had apparently gone out of favour with him.

F and 2 F are forms similar enough to be classed together.

1 C. xxvII. 16. Cæ'sar | áb Itálià | volántem. 3 C. I. 8. Cúncta | supercílio | movéntis. 2 C. xx. 16. A'les, | Hyperboreósque | cámpos.

More than two thirds of all these lines are found as in the classes A, B, D, to commence with $- \cdot \cdot - | &c.$

The class next in number C. consists of those which commence with - - - | - - - | &c.

The principal forms embracing nearly the whole number of 317 have thus been reviewed: of the few that remain, a short notice may suffice. The form $|- \cdot \cdot - \cdot| \cdot - | \cdot - -$ occurs very seldom.

In the early books also, a single case of the (here offensive) amphibrach (--) occurs, thus:

1 C. xvi. 12. Téque | tuásque | décet | soróres...

and three only of the following.

1 C. xxxi. 16. Mé cichoréa | levésque | málvæ.

and 2 C. 1. 36. XIII. 8.

Finally, three lines sui generis in singularity may speak for themselves. 3 C. 1. 48. Progéniem | vitiosiórem. —- v1. 48. Divítias | eperosióres.

and

-- v. 56 Aút Lacedæmónium | Taréntum.

London, January 21, 1836.

POSTSCRIPT TO THE METRES.

The boast of Horace,

3 C. xxx. 13, 14. Princeps Æolium carmen ad Italos Deduxisse modos....

that by happy change and adaptation he had transferred the metres of Sappho'and Alcæus into the uses of Latin poetry, might require for its full justification a more detailed comparison betwixt his Lyric verses and the remaining fragments of those poets, than need at present be attempted. But for satisfaction generally on this head, the reader is referred to Gaisford's Hephæstion, 1810, to Hermann's Elementa Doctrinæ Metricæ, 1816, and to Charles Burney's article in the Monthly Review, u. s., who was the first scholar to investigate the subject, in 1798.

In the Sapphic Stanza, the Greek preference so decided of a short syllable in the 4th place where Horace always has the long, as well as numerous varietics of structure, which the Romanæ fidicen lyræ could not or would not adopt, have been sufficiently described elsewhere*, and are too well known to require formality of demonstration. Catulius's Sapphic verse also, in these pages already referred to, may easily be consulted, (Odes XI, XLVIII.) to contrast his looser and ruder movement with the regulated cadences of Horace, in that its state of perfection as a Latin metre.

^{*} Greek Metres (J. T.) 4th Edition, pp. 47-51.

In the long Alcaic, that well known verse,

Μηδεν άλλο φυτεύσης πρότερον δενδρεον άμπελω...

both begins with the Trochee which Horace (M. XIII.) never admits, and proceeds without that divisio rocum which in his practice formed the regular cæsura.

Catullus, accordingly, has these lines amongst several (xxy.) with the casura neglected.

- 1. Alfene immemor, atque unanimis false sodalibus.
- 8. Inducens in amorem, quasi tuta omnia mi forent.

The Alcaic Stanza, in its first two verses, as we gather from Greek fragments in the pages of Burney, Gaisford, and Hermann, besides admitting the fifth syllable short, which in Horace is always long, almost indifferently used or disregarded the division by a word, which in Horace is hardly ever neglected, betwixt the constituent parts of the verse.

προκόψομεν γὰς οὐδὲν ἀσώμενοι. χειμὼν, πεπάγασιν δ' ὑδάτων ῥοαί.

The third line of that Stanza, besides much license of structure, has in Greek the fifth syllable freely if not always short, which in the Latin is never otherwise than long.

λαῖφος δὲ πᾶν ζάδηλον ήδη.

And the fourth line not only has such forms of structure as were admitted by Horace, but even in the few instances preserved, exhibits one at least, which his Roman car must certainly have rejected.

Ναΐ | φορήμεθα | σὺν μελαίνα.

In the similar adaptation of Glyconic and Pherecratian metre to his purpose, the spondee initial, so fixed by Horace, because congenial to the Latin tongue, may deserve to be briefly exemplified. The first two syllables of that verse, as instanced from the Tragic Chorus by Gaisford and Hermann, are indifferently -- on the one hand, or -- and -- on the other.

Philoct. 1124. πόντου θινός εφήμενος.

140. Διὸς σμῆπτρον ἀνάσσεται.

1126. τὰν ἐμὰν μελέου τροφάν.

The light tripping delicacy, however, of Catullus's Stanza with the favorite Trochee initial, in all respects so very beautiful, is a masterpiece of success, with all the difficulty (tudentis speciem dabit, et torquebitur) of its inimitable execution.

Torquatus volo parvulus
Matris e gremio suæ
Porrigens teneras manus
Dulce rideat ad patrem
Semihiante labello.—Monlius et Junia.

Nothing but the inconsiderate compliment paid by Dr. Bentley, "Epigramma veteris grammatici in Pasiphaen quo omnes versus Horatianos non ineleganter expressit," could be urged in apology for half a page bestowed upon that Poem. Let so much space be conceded to the exposure of its most flagrant deviations from the model proposed.

v. 7. Optat in formam bovis-has the long syllable in 4to, where Horace (Metre xI.) always has it short.

Non cour neque aureum.

v. 9. Et Prœtidas | dícit beatas....

may not be defended by that solitary instance in Horace, (Metre xix. 3.)

Hunc Lesbio | sacráre plectro.

There is some difference even there.

v. 15. Oraque jungere quærit ori...

has been already cited (Metre XIX. 4.) as the only very bad form, quite unknown to Horace; in which the structure is entirely governed by the scansion.

v. 17. Inlicitisque gaudent ; which, with a dactyl precedent, might close the fourth Alcaic line, can hardly be recognised as tallying with the separate verse,

Lydia, | dic per omnes.

(Metre x1. 1.) Not one line is there in the prototype similarly constituted.

To trace the followers of Horace in lyrical imitation, even within the limits of the Alcaic Stanza, is a task not to be attempted here.

The earliest imitator extant appears to have been Statius; whose Ode ad Sept. Severum (4 Sylv. v.) so regular and precise in that Metre, has been justly remarked upon as monotonous, when compared with the freedom and variety of Horace. Nor has it escaped the severe judgment of Louth, De Sacrâ Poesi Hebræorum (p. 331.) that in merit as a composition, that Ode is very inferior. How well does he describe in what the excellence of Horace's lyric poetry consists: in exordio obvio, nec nimis exquisito, et in ipsam plerumque rem protinus incurrente; in serie rerum per jucundam varietatem subtiliter et artificiose, sed quasi sponte, deductâ; in clausulâ, sine ullo acumine, leni quodam lapsu in loco forsan minime expectato, et nonnunquam veluti fortuito cadente.

Amongst the moderns, Casimir Sarbievius deservedly ranks perhaps as the highest, the patriot Lyrist of Poland in that her day of greatness and glory; whose minor faults, however, have been freely pointed out in these pages, on account of the very celebrity which has gathered round his name as a Latin Poet.

Muretus, Daniel Heinsius, Grotius, Cardinal Barberini (afterwards Urban VIII.), and our own Milton, might be more rigorously censured (supposing Horace at all the exemplar of their practice) for those neglects of metrical law and the accentual cadence involved in it; which in common with other moderns they largely committed, and which may partly be charged upon the total want in grammarians of any exact knowledge of the subject.

To come down at once to times nearer the present. Even Gray, the Etonian, though exquisite in his observance of the nicest beauty in the hexameters of Virgil, showed himself strangely unacquainted with the rules of Horace's lyric verse. For instance, in the "Mater rosarum," &c., the following stanza is of a nature to startle the classical ear with two or three palpable faults.

Mirare nec tu me citharæ rudem Claudis laborántem númeris: lóca Amæna jucundúmque vér, incompositum docuere carmen-

What a pity too it is, that the "noble imagery and pathetic sentiment" of his Ode on the Grand Chartreuse should be interrupted by a line so jarring and bad as the second of those below, in a stanza otherwise of such first rate excellence.

Præsentiorem et conspícimus Deum Per ínvias rúpes, féra per juga, Clivosque præruptos, sonantes Inter aquas nemorumque noctem.

INDEX

то

PRINCIPAL PASSAGES ADDUCED.

В	ook, &c.	Lines.	pp.	В	ook, &c.	Lines.	pp.
C	G .			Serm.	Sat.
Serm.	Sat.	24, 5	134	II.	II.	10-13	117
I.	II.			11.	11.	15, 16	97
	III.	56-58	157			112-136	42
1		63-66	112				51
	IV.	3955	15	1		116, 17
		69—74	151		III.	9	65
		101	45			10
		103-109	46			91, 2	51
		107, 8	78			168, 9	43
		116-121	46			168—186	131
}		133, 4	103			308	21
	V.	39_44	59		IV.	24-27	98
		81-88	60		VI.	20-23	12
	VI.	5—13	77			27	104
1		36, 7	56			33	11
1		48	53			63, 4	51
		54, 5	58			65-75	67
1		71-76	42		VII.	29, 30	57
		76-89	44			36	105
		86	37		VIII.		133
		101	104	Epod.	Epod.
1		111-129	95	1	I.		69
1		114-118	56			23-30	34
	VII.		61		II.	39-48	106. 110
	1	28, 9	26			41, 2	43
-	IX.	29, 30	43		IV.		126
		35	104		V.	100	152
		49-52	114		VII.		68
	X.	31-35	49		IX.	7-10	126
	1.	40-45	60			15-18	69
Serm					XVI.		69
11.	1.	7,8	105		XVII.	65	50
1	1	9-12	60	Carm.			- 0
		10-15	16	I.	I.	7-14	116
		62-74	84			20	120
		71-74	57			29	118
		74-78	61 -		1	30-32	25
		,	, ,,			34-32

В	look, &c.	Lines.	pp.	В	ooks, &c.	Lines	pp.
Carm.	Ode			Carm.	Ode
I.	II.	21, 2	86	III.	XIII.		87
		29	121		XIV.	1-4	18
	VI.		131			11	155
	VII.	10-14	26.51		XXI.	11, 12	67
	XIV. XVI.	• •	123 63		XXIII. XXIV.	1	142
	24 7 1.	22-25	46		AX 2X 1 V .	9-11	108
	XVII.		63			35, 6	18
	XVIII.	1	140			42, 3	51
	XX.		79		XXIX.		79
	XXIII.	5	156			2-5	101
	XXIX. XXXI.	16, &c.	143 57			5—8 17—20	24 115
	XXXV.	9-16	117			20	154
	212121	29-32	86			25-28	115
	XXXVII.	1, 2	139			62-64	58
	XXXVIII.	5, 6	156		XXX.		74
-	_				T3 1	10-14	39
Carm.	I. II.	29-32	86	Epist.	Epist. I.	26	80
II.	VI.	1_4	131 27	1.	1.	94-105	113
	V 1.	5-8	26			100	21
	VII.	1, 2	53		II.	1, 2	44
		912	124			32-37	103
		15, 16	50		V.	1, 2	57
	IX.	18-22	85		37.1	4—26 40	100 150
	XI.	13, 14 18—20	33		VI. VII.	3-6	115
		21, 2	32		v 11.	8	104
	XII.	13	133			10, 11	28
	XIII.		40			10-13	65
	XIV.	26—28	156	1 1		12	147
	XVI.	1 22 20	50			14, 15	43
	XVII. XVIII.	22—30 14	41 23			33 3 39 44, 5	75 26
	XX	5-7	157		VIII.	3—7	34
		13	152			12	26
					X.	6	108
Carm.	I.	37-40	50		37.7	4446	78
III.	II.	6-11	117		XI.	25—27	51 150
	III.	6	127 155		XIV.	2, 3	67
	IV.	9-20	40		281 1.	17	11.56
		21-24	26. 28			19, 20	33
		25—28	54			2126	29
	V.	1-4	86			32-36	100
	VI	17, 18	153		XVI.	37—39	68 33, 35
	VI.	33—46 37—44	110 43		A V 1.	49_51	43
	VIII.	07-44	41		XVII.		62
		17-28	115		XVIII.		62
	XII.	9	105	1		78—83	114

В	ook, &c.	Lines.	pp.	В	ook, &c.	Lines.	pp.
Ερist. I.	Epist. XIX.	21—25 26—34	68 70	Carm. IV.	Ode XV.	4—12 13—16	18 43
Carm.	XX.	20-28	81	Epist.	Epist.
Sæc.	• •		73	II.	I.	70, I 111—113	39, 44 103
Carm. IV.	Ode II.	27_32	26			118—138 245—247	136 76
1		50	19		II.	41, 2	44. 47
	III. IV.	10—12 42—44	26 54			43-45	47 50
	V.	1 -8	19 18			49—51 51, 2	54 62
	VI.		73			65	12
	IX.	25—28	39 136			167, 8	57 77
	XI.	1—4 2, 3	39 30	Ad Pi- sones.			135
		13-20	112	SOIICS		26, 7	157
	XII. XIV.	17, 18 1—5	101 20			36, 7 453 ad fin.	155 136

Q. HORATII FLACCI OPERA.

IN ILLUM LIBRORUM ORDINEM,

QUO SUNT OLIM AB IPSO IN VULGUS EDITA,

SECUNDUM RICARDI BENTLEH SENTENTIAM,

RESTITUIT

JACOBUS TATE.

LIBRORUM HORATIANORUM

CONSPECTUS.

	PAG.
SERMONUM LIBER PRIMUS	1
LIBER SECUNDUS	32
EPODON LIBER	64
CARMINUM LIBER PRIMUS	85
LIBER SECUNDUS	115
LIBER TERTIUS	135
EPISTOLARUM LIBER PRIMUS	168
CARMEN SÆCULARE	200
CARMINUM LIBER QUARTUS	205
EPISTOLARUM LIBER SECUNDUS	223
DE ARTE POETICA AD PISONES EPISTOLA	236

Q. HORATII FLACCI

SERMONUM

LIBER PRIMUS.

SATIRA I.

Qui fit, Mæcenas, ut nemo, quam sibi sortem
Seu Ratio dederit, seu Fors objecerit, illa
Contentus vivat, laudet diversa sequentes?
O! fortunati mercatores, gravis annis
Miles ait, multo jam fractus membra labore.	5
Contra mercator, navim jactantibus austris,
Militia est potior: quid enim? concurritur: horæ
Momento cita mors venit, aut victoria læta.
Agricolam laudat juris legumque peritus,
Sub galli cantum consultor ubi ostia pulsat.	10
Ille datis vadibus qui rure extractus in urbem est,
Solos felices viventes clamat in urbe.
Cætera de genere hoc (adco sunt multa) loquacem
Delassare valent Fabium: ne te morer, audi
Quo rem deducam. Si quis deus, En ego, dicat,	15
Jam faciam quod vultis: eris tu, qui modo miles,
Mercator: tu, consultus modo rusticus: hinc vos,
Vos hinc mutatis discedite partibus. Eja,
Quid statis? Nolint. Atqui licet esse beatis.
Quid causæ est, merito quin illis Jupiter ambas	20
Iratus buccas inflet? neque se fore posthac
Tam facilem dicat, votis ut præbeat aurem?
Præterea, ne sic, ut qui jocularia, ridens
Percurram; quanquam ridentem dicere verum
Quid vetat? ut pueris olim dant crustula blandi	25
Te

Doctores, elementa velint ut discere prima-Sed tamen amoto quæramus seria ludo. Ille gravem duro terram qui vertit aratro, Perfidus hic caupo, miles, nautæque per omne Audaces mare qui currunt, hac mente laborem 30 Sese ferre, senes ut in otia tuta recedant, Aiunt, cum sibi sint congesta cibaria: sicut Parvula (nam exemplo est) magni formica laboris Ore trahit, quodcunque potest, atque addit acervo, Quem struit, haud ignara ac non incauta futuri: 35 Quæ, simul inversum contristat Aquarius annum, Non usquam prorepit, et illis utitur ante Quæsitis sapiens; cum te neque fervidus æstus Dimoveat lucro, neque hiems, ignis, mare, ferrum; Nil obstet tibi, dum ne sit te ditior alter. 40 Quid juvat immensum te argenti pondus et auri Furtim defossa timidum deponere terra? ¶ Quod, si comminuas, vilem redigatur ad assem. ¶ At ni id fit, quid habet pulchri constructus acervus? Millia frumenti tua triverit area centum. 45 Non tuus hoc capiet venter plus quam meus: ut si Reticulum panis venales inter onusto Forte vehas humero, nihilo plus accipias quam Vel dic, quid referat intra Qui nil portârit. Naturæ fines viventi, jugera centum, an 50 Mille aret? ¶ At suave est ex magno tollere acervo. ¶ Dum ex parvo nobis tantundem haurire relinguas, Cur tua plus laudes cumeris granaria nostris? Ut tibi si sit opus liquidi non amplius urna, Vel cyatho; et dicas, Magno de flumine mallem, 55 Quam ex hoc fonticulo tantundem sumere. Eo fit. Plenior ut siguos delectet copia justo, Cum ripa simul avulsos ferat Aufidus acer: At qui tantuli eget quanto est opus, is neque limo Turbatam haurit aquam, neque vitam amittit in undis. 60 At bona pars hominum decepta cupidine falso,

Nil satis est, inquit; quia tanti, quantum habeas, sis.
Quid facias illi? jubcas miserum esse, libenter
Quatenus id facit: ut quidam memoratur Athenis
Sordidus ac dives, populi contemnere voces	65
Sic solitus; Populus me sibilat, at mihi plaudo
Ipse domi, simul ac nummos contemplor in arca.
Tantalus a labris sitiens fugientia captat
Flumina: quid rides? mutato nomine de te
Fabula narratur: congestis undique saccis	70
Indormis inhians, et tanquam parcere sacris	, -
Cogeris, aut pictis tanquam gaudere tabellis.
Nescis quo valeat nummus, quem præbeat usum?
Panis ematur, olus, vini sextarius : adde,
Queis humana sibi doleat natura negatis.	75
An vigilare metu exanimem, noctesque diesque	, -
Formidare malos fures, incendia, servos,
Ne te compilent fugientes : hoc juvat? horum
Semper ego optârim pauperrimus esse bonorum.
At si condoluit tentatum frigore corpus,	80
Aut alius casus lecto te affixit; habes qui Assideat, fomenta paret, medicum roget ut te
Suscitet ac reddat natis carisque propinquis?
Non uxor salvum te vult, non filius: omnes
Vicini oderunt, noti, pueri atque puellæ.	85
Miraris, cum tu argento post omnia ponas,
Si nemo præstet quem non merearis amorem?
An si cognatos, nullo natura labore
Quos tibi dat, retinere velis servareque amicos;
Infelix operam perdas, ut siquis asellum	90
In campo doceat parentem currere frænis?
Denique sit finis quærendi; quoque habeas plus,
Pauperiem metuas minus, et finire laborem
Incipias, parto quod avebas, ne facias quod
Ummidius quidam (non longa est fabula) dives	95
Ut metiretur nummos, ita sordidus ut se
Non unquam servo melius vestiret, ad usque

Supremum tempus, ne se penuria victus Opprimeret, metuebat. At hunc liberta securi Divisit medium, fortissima Tyndaridarum. 100 ¶ Quid mî igitur suades? ut vivam Mænius, aut sic Ut Nomentanus? ¶ Pergis pugnantia secum Frontibus adversis componere? non ego, avarum Cum veto te fieri, vappam jubeo ac nebulonem. Est inter Tanaim quiddam socerumque Viselli. 105 Est modus in rebus; sunt certi denique fines, Quos ultra citraque nequit consistere rectum. Illuc, unde abii, redeo; nemon' ut avarus Se probet, ac potius laudet diversa sequentes? Quodque aliena capella gerat distentius uber, 110 Tabescat? neque se majori pauperiorum Turbæ comparet? hunc atque hunc superare laboret? Sic festinanti semper locupletior obstat: Ut cum carceribus missos rapit ungula currus, Instat equis auriga suos vincentibus, illum 115 Præteritum temnens extremos inter euntem. Inde fit ut raro, qui se vixisse beatum Dicat, et exacto contentus tempore vitæ Cedat, uti conviva satur, reperire queamus. Jam satis est: ne me Crispini scrinia lippi 120 Compilâsse putes, verbum non amplius addam.

SATIRA II.

5

Ambubajarum collegia, pharmacopolæ, Mendici, mimæ, balatrones, hoc genus omne Mæstum ac solicitum est cantoris morte Tigelli; Quippe benignus erat: contra hic ne prodigus esse Dicatur metuens, inopi dare nolit amico, Frigus quo duramque famem depellere possit. Hunc si perconteris, avi cur atque parentis

Præclaram ingrata stringat malus ingluvie rem,
Omnia conductis coëmens obsonia nummis;
Sordidus atque animi quod parvi nolit haberi,	10
Respondet: Laudatur ab his, culpatur ab illis.
Fufidius vappæ famam timet ac nebulonis,
Dives agris, dives positis in fœnore nummis.
Quinas hic capiti mercedes exsecat; atque
Quanto perditior quisque est, tanto acrius urguet;	15
Nomina sectatur, modo sumta veste virili,
Sub patribus duris, tironum. Maxime, quis non,
Jupiter, exclamat, simulatque audivit? ¶ At in se
Pro quæstu sumtum facit hic. ¶ Vix credere possis
Quam sibi non sit amicus: ita ut pater ille, Terenti	20
Fabula quem miserum nato vixisse fugato
Inducit, non se pejus cruciaverit atque hic.
Si quis nunc quærat, Quo res hæc pertinet? Illuc;
Dum vitant stulti vitia, in contraria currunt.
Malthinus tunicis demissis ambulat; est qui	25
Inguen ad obscœnum subductis usque facetus:
Pastillos Rufillus olet, Gorgonius hireum:
Nil medium est. Sunt qui nolint tetigisse, nisi illas
Quarum subsuta talos tegat instita veste:
Contra alius nullam, nisi olente in fornice stantem.	30
Quidam notus homo cum exiret fornice, Macte
Virtute esto, inquit sententia dia Catonis:
Nam simulae venas inflavit tetra libido,
Huc juvenes æquum est descendere, non alienas
Permolere uxores. Nolim laudarier, inquit,	35
Sic me, mirator cunni Cupiennius albi.
Audire est operæ pretium, procedere recte
Qui mœchis non vultis, ut omni parte laborent;
Utque illis multo corrupta dolore voluptas,
Atque hæc rara, cadat dura inter sæpe pericla.	40
Hic se precipitem tecto dedit : ille flagellis
Ad mortem cæsus: fugiens hie decidit acrem
Prædonum in turbam : dedit hic pro corpore nummos	:

Hunc perminxerunt calones: quin etiam illud Accidit, ut quidam testes caudamque salacem 45 Demeteret ferrum. Jure omnes: Galba negabat. Tutior at quanto merx est in classe secunda! Libertinarum dico, Sallustius in quas Non minus insanit, quam qui mœchatur : at hic si, Qua res qua ratio suaderet, quaque modeste 50 Munifico esse licet, vellet bonus atque benignus Esse; daret quantum satis esset, nec sibi damno Dedecorique foret: verum hoc se amplectitur uno: Hoc amat, hoc laudat; Matronam nullam ego tango: Ut quondam Marsæus, amator Originis, ille 55 Qui patrium mimæ donat fundumque laremque, Nil fuerit mî, inquit, cum uxoribus unquam alienis: Verum est cum mimis, est cum meretricibus; unde Fama malum gravius, quam res trahit: an tibi abunde Personam satis est, non illud quicquid ubique 60 Officit, evitare? bonam deperdere famam, Rem patris oblimare, malum est ubicunque. Quid inter-Est in matrona, ancilla, peccesve togata? Villius in Fausta Sullæ gener, hoc miser uno Nomine deceptus, pœnas dedit usque superque 65 Quam satis est; pugnis cæsus, ferroque petitus, Exclusus fore, cum Longarenus foret intus. Huic si mutonis verbis mala tanta videntis Diceret hae animus; Quid vis tibi? nunquid ego a te Magno prognatum deposco consule cunnum, Velatumque stola, mea cum conferbuit ira? Quid responderet? Magno patre nata puella est. At quanto meliora monet, pugnantiaque istis, Dives opis natura suæ, si tu modo recte Dispensare velis, ac non fugienda petendis 75 Immiscere! Tuo vitio, rerumne, labores, Nil referre putas? Quare ne pœniteat te: Desine matronas sectarier, unde laboris Plus haurire mali est, quam ex re decerpere fructus.

Nec magis huic inter niveos viridesque lapillos Sit licet, hoc, Cerinthe, tuo tenerum est femur, aut crus Rectius; atque etiam melius persæpe togatæ. Adde huc, quod mercem sine fucis gestat; aperte Quod venale habet, ostendit; nec, si quid honesti est, Jactat habetque palam, quærit quo turpia celet. Regibus hic mos est, ubi equos mercantur, opertos Inspiciunt; ne si facies (ut sæpe) decora Molli fulta pede est, emtorem inducat hiantem; Quod pulchræ clunes, breve quod caput, ardua cervix. Hoc illi recte? ne corporis optima Lynceis Contemplere oculis, Hypsæa cæcior illa Quæ mala sunt spectes. ¶ O crus! O brachia! ¶ verum Depygis, nasuta, brevi latere ac pede longo est. Matronæ, præter faciem, nil cernere possis, Cætera, ni Catia est, demissa veste tegentis. 95 Si interdicta petes, vallo circumdata, nam te Hoc facit insanum, multæ tibi tum officient res: Custodes, lectica, ciniflones, parasitæ, Ad talos stola demissa, et circumdata palla; Plurima, quæ invideant pure apparere tibi rem. 100 Altera, nil obstat: Cois tibi pene videre est Ut nudam; ne crure malo, ne sit pede turpi: Metiri possis oculo latus. An tibi mavis Insidias fieri, pretiumque avellier, ante Quam mercem ostendi? ¶ Leporem venator ut alta 105 In nive sectetur, positum sic tangere nolit: Cantat, et apponit, Meus est amor huic similis : nam Transvolat in medio posita, et fugientia captat. ¶ Hiscine versiculis speras tibi posse dolores, Atque æstus curasque graves e pectore pelli? 110 Nonne cupidinibus statuat natura modum quem, Quid latura sibi, quid sit dolitura negatum, Quærere plus prodest, et inane abscindere soldo? Num, tibi cum fauces urit sitis, aurea quæris Pocula? num esuriens fastidis omnia præter 115 Pavonem rhombumque? tument tibi cum inguina, num, si Ancilla aut verna est præsto puer, impetus in quem Continuo fiat, malis tentigine rumpi? Non ego; namque parabilem amo Venerem, facilemque. ¶ Illam, Post paulo; Sed pluris: Si exierit vir; Gallis hanc, Philodemus ait; sibi, quæ neque magno Stet pretio, neque cunctetur, cum est jussa, venire: Candida rectaque sit: munda hactenus, ut neque longa Nec magis alba velit, quam det natura, videri. Hæc ubi supposuit dextrum corpus mihi lævo, 125 Ilia et Ægeria est: do nomen quodlibet illi. Nec vereor, ne dum futuo, vir rure recurrat, Janua frangatur, latret canis, undique magno Pulsa domus strepitu resonet, vepallida lecto Desiliat mulier, miseram se conscia clamet; 130 Cruribus hæc metuat, doti deprensa, egomet mi. Discincta tunica fugiendum est, ac pede nudo, Ne nummi percant, aut pyga, aut denique fama. Deprendi miserum est: Fabio vel judice vincam.

SATIRA III.

Omnibus hoc vitium est cantoribus, inter amicos
Ut nunquam inducant animum cantare rogati;
Injussi nunquam desistant. Sardus habebat
Ille Tigellius hoc. Cæsar, qui cogere posset,
Si peteret per amicitiam patris atque suam, non Quicquam proficeret: si collibuisset, ab ovo
Usque ad mala citaret; Io Bacche! modo summa
Vocc, modo hac, resonat quæ chordis quattuor ima.
Nil æquale homini fuit illi: sæpe velut qui Currebat fugiens hostem; persæpe velut qui Junonis sacra ferret; habebat sæpe ducentos,
Sæpe decom servos: modo reges atque tetrarchas.

Omnia magna, loquens: modo, Sit mihi mensa tripes,	et
Concha salis puri, et toga quæ defendere frigus,
Quamvis crassa, queat. Decies centena dedisses	15
Huic parco paucis contento, quinque diebus
Nil erat in loculis: noctes vigilabat ad ipsum
Mane, diem totum stertebat; nil fuit unquam
Sie impar sibi. Nune aliquis dicat mihi, Quid tu?
Nullane habes vitia? Imo alia, et fortasse minora.	20
Mænius absentem Novium cum carperet; Heus tu,
Quidam ait, ignoras te? an ut ignotum dare nobis
Verba putas? Egomet mî ignosco, Mænius inquit.
Stultus et improbus hic amor est, dignusque notari.
Cum tua pervideas oculis male lippus inunctis,	25
Cur in amicorum vitiis tam cernis acutum,
Quam aut aquila, aut serpens Epidaurius! At tibi con	tra.
Evenit, inquirant vitia ut tua rursus et illi.
Iracundior est paulo? minus aptus acutis
Naribus horum hominum? rideri possit, eo quod	30
Rusticius tonso toga defluit, et male laxus
In pede calceus hæret? At est bonus, ut melior vir
Non alius quisquam: at tibi amicus: at ingenium inge	ns
Inculto latet hoc sub corpore. Denique teipsum
Concute, numqua tibi vitiorum inseverit olim	35
Natura, aut etiam consuetudo mala; namque
Neglectis urenda filix innascitur agris.
Illuc prævertamur; amatorem quod amieæ
Turpia decipiunt cœcum vitia, aut etiam ipsa hæc
Delectant; veluti Balbinum polypus Hagnæ:	40
Vellem in amicitia sic erraremus; et isti
Errori nomen virtus posuisset honestum.
At, patet at gnati, sic nos debemus amici,
Siquod sit vitium, non fastidire: strabonem
Appellat Pætum pater; et Pullum, male parvus	45
Si cui filius est, ut abortivus fuit olim
Sisyphus: hune, Varum, distortis cruribus; illum

Parcius hic vivit ? frugi dicatur : ineptus Et jactantior hic paulo est? concinnus amicis 50 Postulat ut videatur : at est truculentior, atque Plus æquo liber? simplex fortisque habeatur. Caldior est? acres inter numeretur: opinor, Hæc res et jungit, junctos et servat amicos. At nos virtutes ipsas invertimus, atque 55 Sincerum cupimus vas incrustare. Probus quis Nobiscum vivit, multum demissus homo? illi Tardo ac cognomen pingui damus : hic fugit omnes Insidias, nullique malo latus obdit apertum?-Cum genus hoc inter vitæ versetur, ubi acris 60 Invidia, atque vigent ubi crimina-pro bene sano Ac non incauto, fictum astutumque vocamus. Simplicior quis et est, qualem me sæpe libenter Obtulerim tibi, Mæcenas, ut forte legentem Aut tacitum impellat quovis sermone molestus? 65 Communi sensu plane caret, inquimus. Eheu Quam temere in nosmet legem sancimus iniquam! Nam vitiis nemo sine nascitur: optimus ille est, Qui minimis urguetur. Amicus dulcis, ut æquum est, Cum mea compenset vitiis bona, pluribus hisce 70 (Si modo plura mihi bona sunt) inclinet, amari Si volet: hac lege, in trutina ponetur eadem. Qui ne tuberibus propriis offendat amicum Postulat, ignoscet verrucis illius: æquum est, Peccatis veniam poscentem reddere rursus. 75 Denique, quatenus excidi penitus vitium iræ, Cætera item nequeunt stultis hærentia: cur non Ponderibus modulisque suis ratio utitur? ac res Ut quæque est, ita suppliciis delicta coërcet? Si quis eum servum, patinam qui tollere jussus 80 Semesos pisces tepidumque ligurrierit jus, In cruce suffigat, Labeone insanior inter Sanos dicatur. Quanto hoc furiosius atque Majus peccatum est? Paulum deliquit amieus;

Quod nisi concedas, habeare insuavis, acerbus,	85
Odisti et fugis, ut Rusonem debitor æris:
Qui, nisi cum tristes misero venere Calendæ,
Mercedem aut nummos unde unde extricat, amaras
Porrecto jugulo historias, captivus ut, audit.
Comminxit lectum potus, mensave catillum	90
Evandri manibus tritum dejecit; ob hanc rem,
Aut positum ante mea quia pullum in parte catini
Sustulit esuriens, minus hoc jucundus amicus
Sit mihi? Quid faciam si furtum fecerit? aut si
Prodiderit commissa fide? sponsumve negarit?	95
Queis paria esse fere placuit peccata, laborant,
Cum ventum ad verum est: sensus moresque repugn	ant,
Atque ipsa utilitas, justi prope mater et æqui.
Cum prorepserunt primis animalia terris,
Mutum et turpe pecus, glandem atque cubilia propter,	100
Unguibus et pugnis, dein fustibus, atque ita porro
Pugnabant armis, quæ post fabricaverat usus;
Donec verba, quibus voces sensusque notarent,
Nominaque invenere: dehinc absistere bello,
Oppida cœperunt munire, et ponere leges,	105
Ne quis fur esset, neu latro, neu quis adulter.
Nam fuit ante Helenam cunnus teterrima belli
Causa: sed ignotis perierunt mortibus illi,
Quos Venerem incertam rapientes more ferarum
Viribus editior cædebat, ut in grege taurus.	110
Jura inventa metu injusti fateare necesse est,
Tempora si fastosque velis evolvere mundi.
Nec natura potest justo secernere iniquum,
Dividit ut bona diversis, fugienda petendis.
Nec vincet ratio hoc, tantundem ut peccet idemque	115
Qui teneros caules alieni fregerit horti,
Et qui nocturnus sacra divum legerit. Adsit
Regula, peccatis quæ pænas irroget æquas:
Ne scutica dignum horribili sectere flagello.
Nam, ut ferula cædas meritum majora subire	190

Verbera, non vereor: cum dicas esse pares res Furta latrociniis, et magnis parva mineris Falce recisurum simili te, si tibi regnum Permittant homines. Si dives qui sapiens est. Et sutor bonus, et solus formosus, et est rex; Cur optas quod habes? ¶ Non nôsti quid pater, inquit, Chrysippus dicat: Sapiens crepidas sibi nunquam Nec soleas fecit; sutor tamen est sapiens. ¶ Qui? ¶ Ut. quamvis tacet Hermogenes, cantor tamen atque Optimus est modulator; ut Alfenus vafer, omni 130 Abiecto instrumento artis, clausaque taberna, Sutor erat: sapiens operis sic optimus omnis Est opifex solus; sic rex. ¶ Vellunt tibi barbam Lascivi pueri; quos tu nisi fuste coërces. Urgueris turba circum te stante, miserque 135 Rumperis, et latras, magnorum maxime regum. Ne longum faciam, dum tu quadrante lavatum Rex ibis, neque te quisquam stipator, ineptum Præter Crispinum, sectabitur: et mihi dulces Ignoscent, siquid peccâro stultus, amici; 140 Inque vicem illorum patiar delicta libenter, Privatusque magis vivam te rege beatus.

SATIRA IV.

Eurolis, atque Cratinus, Aristophanesque, Poëtæ, Atque alii quorum Comœdia prisca virorum est, Siquis erat dignus describi, quod malus, aut fur, Quod mechus foret, aut sicarius, aut alioqui Famosus, multa cum libertate notabant. Hinc omnis pendet Lucilius, hosce secutus, Mutatis tantum pedibus numerisque; facetus, Emunctæ naris, durus componere versus: Nam fuit hoc vitiosus, in hora sæpe dugentos.

5

Ut magnum, versus dictabat, stans pede in uno.	10
Cum flueret lutulentus, crat quod tollere velles:
Garrulus, atque piger scribendi ferre laborem;
Scribendi recte: nam ut multum, nil moror.—Ecce,
Crispinus minimo me provocat. ¶ Accipe, si vis,
Accipe jam tabulas; detur nobis locus, hora,	15
Custodes; videamus uter plus scribere possit.
Dii bene fecerunt, inopis me quodque pusilli
Finxerunt animi, raro et perpauca loquentis:
At tu conclusas hircinis follibus auras,
Usque laborantes dum ferrum molliat ignis,	20
Ut mavis, imitare. Beatus Fannius, ultro
Delatis capsis et imagine; cum mea nemo
Scripta legat, (vulgo recitare timentis,) ob hanc rem,
Quod sunt quos genus hoc minime juvat; utpote plure	es
Culpari dignos. Quemvis media elige turba;	25
Aut ob avaritiam, aut misera ambitione laborat.
Hic nuptarum insanus amoribus, hic puerorum;
Hunc capit argenti splendor; stupet Albius ære;
Hic mutat merces surgente a sole, ad eum quo
Vespertina tepet regio; quin per mala præceps	30
Fertur, uti pulvis collectus turbine, nequid
Summa deperdat metuens, aut ampliet ut rem.
Omnes hi metuunt versus, odere Poëtas.
¶ Fœnum habet in cornu, longe fuge: dummodo risu	m
Excutiat sibi, non hic cuiquam parcet amico:	35
Et, quodeunque semel chartis illeverit, omnes
Gestiet a furno redeuntes scire lacuque,
Et pueros et anus. ¶ Agedum pauca accipe contra:
Primum ego me illorum, dederim quibus esse Poëtas,
Excerpam numero: neque enim concludere versum	40
Dixeris esse satis; neque, siquis scribat, uti nos,
Sermoni propiora, putes hunc esse Poëtam.
Ingenium cui sit, cui mens divinior, atque os
Magna sonaturum, des nominis hujus honorem.
Idcirco quidam, Comcedia, necne Poëma	4.5

Esset, quæsivere; quod acer spiritus ac vis Nec verbis nec rebus inest; nisi quod pede certo Differt sermoni, sermo merus. At pater ardens Sævit, quod meretrice nepos insanus amica Filius, uxorem grandi cum dote recuset, 50 Ebrius et (magnum quod dedecus) ambulet ante Noctem cum facibus. ¶ Numquid Pomponius istis Audiret leviora, pater si viveret?-Ergo Non satis est puris versum perscribere verbis; Quem si dissolvas, quivis stomachetur eodem 55 Quo personatus pacto pater. His, ego quæ nunc, Olim quæ scripsit Lucilius, eripias si Tempora certa modosque, et quod prius ordine verbum est, Posterius facias, præponens ultima primis; Non, ut si solvas, " Postquam discordia tetra 60 "Belli ferratos postes, portasque refregit:" Invenias etiam disjecti membra Poëtæ. Hactenus hæc: alias, justum sit necne Poëma, Nunc illud quæram; meritone tibi sit Suspectum genus hoc scribendi. Sulcius acer 65 Ambulat, et Caprius, rauci male, cumque libellis; Magnus uterque timor latronibus; at bene siquis Et vivat puris manibus, contemnat utrumque. Ut sis tu similis Cœli Birrique, latronum, Non ego sim Caprî, neque Sulcî; (cur metuas me?) Nulla taberna meos habeat neque pila libellos, Queis manus insudet vulgi, Hermogenisque Tigellì. Nec recitem quidquam, nisi amicis, idque coactus, Non ubivis, coramve quibuslibet. ¶ In medio qui Scripta foro recitent, sunt multi. ¶ Quique lavantes: 75 Suave locus voci resonat conclusus. Inanes Hoc juvat, haud illud quærentes, num sine sensu, Tempore num faciant alieno. ¶ Lædere gaudes, Inquis; et hoc studio pravus facis. ¶ Unde petitum Hoc in me jacis: est auctor quis denique eorum, 80 Vixi cum quibus? Absentem qui rodit amicum

Qui non defendit, alio culpante; solutos Qui captat risus hominum, famamque dicacis: Fingere qui non visa potest, commissa tacere Qui nequit; hic niger est, hunc tu Romane caveto. 85 Sæpe tribus lectis videas cœnare quaternos: E quibus unus amet quavis aspergere cunctos, Præter cum qui præbet aquam: post, hunc quoque potus, Condita cum verax aperit præcordia Liber: Hic tibi comis, et urbanus, liberque videtur, 90 Infesto nigris. Ego, si risi quod ineptus Pastillos Rufillus olet, Gorgonius hircum, Lividus et mordax videor tibi? Mentio si qua De Capitolini furtis injecta Petillì Te coram fuerit: defendas, ut tuus est mos: 95 ¶ Me Capitolinus convictore usus amicoque A puero est, causaque mea permulta rogatus Fecit; et, incolumis lætor quod vivit in urbe: Sed tamen admiror, quo pacto judicium illud Fugerit. ¶ Hic nigræ succus loliginis; hæc est 100 Ærugo mera; quod vitium procul afore chartis, Atque animo prius, ut siquid promittere de me Possum aliud, vere promitto. Liberius si Dixero quid, si forte jocosius, hoc mihi juris Cum venia dabis: insuevit pater optimus hoc me, 105 Ut fugerem exemplis vitiorum quæque notando. Cum me hortaretur, parce, frugaliter, atque Viverem uti contentus eo, quod mi ipse parâsset: Nonne vides, Albî ut male vivat filius? utque Barrus inops? magnum documentum, ne patriam rem 110 Perdere quis velit. A turpi meretricis amore Cum deterreret, Sectani dissimilis sis. Ne sequerer mœchas, concessa cum Venere uti Possem, Deprensi non bella est fama Trebonî, Aiebat. Sapiens, vitatu quidque petitu 115 Sit melius, causas reddet tibi: mi satis est, si Traditum ab antiquis morem servare, tuamque, Dum custodis eges, vitam famamque tueri Incolumen possum: simulac duraverit ætas Membra animumque tuum, nabis sine cortice. Sic me 120 Formabat pucrum dictis: et sive jubebat Ut facerem quid, Habes auctorem quo facias hoc; Unum ex judicibus selectis objiciebat: Sive vetabat, An hoc inhonestum et inutile factum Necne sit, addubites, flagret rumore malo cum 125 Hic atque ille? Avidos vicinum funus ut ægros Exanimat, mortisque metu sibi parcere cogit: Sic teneros animos aliena opprobria sæpe Absterrent vitiis. Ex hoc ego sanus ab illis, Perniciem quæcunque ferunt; mediocribus, et queis 130 Ignoscas, vitiis tencor; fortassis et isthinc Largiter abstulerit longa ætas, liber amicus, Consilium proprium: neque enim, cum lectulus aut me Porticus excepit, desum mihi: Rectius hoc est: Hoc faciens, vivam melius; sic dulcis amicis 135 Occurram; hoc quidam non belle; num quid ego illi Imprudens olim faciam simile? Hæc ego mecum Compressis agito labris: ubi quid datur oti, Illudo chartis: hoc est mediocribus illis Ex vitiis unum; cui si concedere nolis, 140 Multa Poëtarum veniat manus, auxilio quæ Sit mihi (nam multo plures sumus) ac veluti te Judæi cogemus in hanc concedere turbam.

SATIRA V.

5

Egressum magna me excepit Aricia Roma Hospitio modico; Rhetor comes Heliodorus, Græcorum longe doctissimus. Inde Forum Appî, Differtum nautis, cauponibus atque malignis. Hoc iter ignavi divisimus, altius ac nos Præcinctis unum: minus est gravis Appia tardis.

Hic ego, propter aquam, quod erat teterrima, ventri
Indico bellum, cœnantes haud animo æquo
Exspectans comites. Jam nox inducere terris
Umbras, et cœlo diffundere signa parabat:	10
Tum pueri nautis, pueris convicia nautæ
Ingerere. ¶ Huc appelle. ¶ Trecentos inseris, ohe	e !
Jam satis est. ¶ Dum æs exigitur, dum mula ligatu	ır,
Tota abit hora: mali culices, ranæque palustres	,
Avertunt somnos: absentem ut cantat amicam	15
Multa prolutus vappa nauta, atque viator
Certatim; tandem fessus dormire viator
Incipit; ac missæ pastum retinacula mulæ
Nauta piger saxo religat, stertitque supinus.
Jamque dies aderat, cum nil procedere lintrem	20
Sentimus: donec cerebrosus prosilit unus,
Ac mulæ nautæque caput lumbosque saligno
Fuste dolat: quarta vix demum exponimur hora.
Ora manusque tua lavimus, Feronia, lympha.
Millia tum pransi tria repimus, atque subimus	25
Impositum saxis late candentibus Anxur.
Huc venturus erat Mæcenas optimus, atque
Cocceius: missi magnis de rebus uterque
Legati, aversos soliti componere amicos.
Hîc oculis ego nigra meis collyria lippus	30
Illinere. Interea Mæcenas advenit, atque
Cocceius, Capitoque simul Fonteius, ad unguem
Factus homo, Antonî, non ut magis alter, amicus.
Fundos Aufidio Lusco Prætore libenter
Linquimus, insani ridentes præmia scribæ,	35
Prætextam, et latum clavum, prunæque vatillum.
In Mamurrarum lassi deinde urbe manemus,
Murena præbente domum, Capitone culinam.
Postera lux oritur multo gratissima: namque
Plotius et Varius Sinuessæ Virgiliusque	40
Occurrent: animæ, quales neque candidiores

Terra tulit, neque queis me sit devinctior alter.
O qui complexus! et gaudia quanta fuerunt!
Nil ego contulerim jucundo sanus amico.
Proxima Campano ponti quæ villula, tectum	45
Præbuit; et parochi quæ debent ligna, salemque.
Hinc muli Capuæ clitellas tempore ponunt.
Lusum it Mæcenas; dormitum ego Virgiliusque:
Namque pila lippis inimicum et ludere crudis.
Hinc nos Cocceii recipit plenissima villa,	50
Quæ super est Caudî cauponas. Nunc mihi paucis
Sarmenti scurræ pugnam Messîque Cicirri,
Musa, velim memores; et quo patre natus uterque
Contulerit lites. Messî clarum genus Osci;
Sarmenti domina exstat. Ab his majoribus orti	55
Ad pugnam venere: prior Sarmentus, Equi te
Esse feri similem dico. Ridemus: et ipse
Messius, Accipio; caput et movet: O, tua cornu
Ni foret exsecto frons (inquit) quid faceres, cum
Sic mutilus miniteris? At illi fœda cicatrix	60
Setosam lævi frontem turpaverat oris.
Campanum in morbum, in faciem permulta jocatus,
Pastorem saltaret uti Cyclopa rogabat;
Nil illi larva aut Tragicis opus esse cothurnis.
Multa Cicirrus ad hæc, donâsset jamne catenam	65
Ex voto Laribus, quærebat: scriba quod esset,
Nilo deterius dominæ jus esse. Rogabat
Denique, cur unquam fugisset; cui satis una
Farris libra foret, gracili sic, tamque pusillo.
Prorsus jucunde cœnam produximus illam.	70
Tendimus hinc recta Beneventum; ubi sedulus hospe	S
Pene macros arsit dum turdos versat in igne:
Nam vaga per veterem dilapso flamma culinam
Vulcano, summum properabat lambere tectum.
Convivas avidos cœnam servosque timentes	75
Tum rapere, atque omnes restinguere velle videres.
Incipit ex illo montes Appulia notos

Ostentare mihi, quos torret Atabulus; et quos Nunquam erepsemus, nisi nos vicina Trivici Villa recepisset, lacrymoso non sine fumo. 80 Udos cum foliis ramos urente camino. Hic ego mendacem stultissimus usque puellam Ad mediam noctem exspecto: somnus tamen aufert Intentum Veneri: tum immundo somnia visu Nocturnam vestem maculant, ventremque supinum. 85 Quattuor hinc rapimur viginti et millia rhedis, Mansuri oppidulo quod versu dicere non est, Signis perfacile est: venit vilissima rerum Hic aqua; sed panis longe pulcherrimus, ultra Callidus ut soleat humeris portare viator, 90 Nam Canusî lapidosus; aquæ non ditior urna: Qui locus a forti Diomede est conditus olim. Flentibus hic Varius discedit moestus amicis. Inde Rubos fessi pervenimus, utpote longum Carpentes iter, et factum corruptius imbri. 95 Postera tempestas melior; via pejor adusque Barî mœnia piscosi: dehinc Gnatia lymphis Iratis extructa dedit risusque jocosque; Dum flamma sine tura liquescere limine sacro Persuadere cupit: credat Judæus Apella; 100 Non ego: namque Deos didici securum agere ævum; Nec siquid miri faciat natura, Deos id Tristes ex alto cœli demittere tecto. Brundusium longæ finis chartæque viæque.

SATIRA VI.

Non, quia, Mæcenas, Lydorum quicquid Hetruscos Incoluit fines, nemo generosior est te; Nec, quod avus tibi maternus fuit, atque paternus, Olim qui magnis legionibus imperitarent;

Ut plerique solent, naso suspendis adunco	5
Ignotos, ut me libertino patre natum:
Cum referre negas, quali sit quisque parente
Natus, dum ingenuus. Persuades hoc tibi vere;
Ante potestatem Tullî, atque ignobile regnum,
Multos sæpe viros nullis majoribus ortos,	10
Et vixisse probos, amplis et honoribus auctos:
Contra, Lævinum, Valeri genus, unde Superbus
Tarquinius regno pulsus fuit, unius assis
Non unquam pretio pluris licuisse, notante
Judice quo nôsti populo, qui stultus honores	15
Sæpe dat indignis, et famæ servit ineptus;
Qui stupet in titulis et imaginibus. Quid oportet
Nos facere, a vulgo longe longeque remotos?
Namque esto, populus Lævino mallet honorem
Quam Decio mandare novo; censorque moveret	20
Appius, ingenuo si non essem patre natus:
Vel merito, quoniam in propria non pelle quiessem.
¶ Sed fulgente trahit constrictos gloria curru
Non minus ignotos generosis. ¶ Quo tibi, Tilli,
Sumere depositum clavum, fierique tribuno?	25
Invidia accrevit, privato quæ minor esset:
Nam ut quisque insanus nigris medium impediit crus
Pellibus, et latum demisit pectore clavum,
Audit continuo, Quis homo hic? et, Quo patre natus	?
Ut si qui ægrotet quo morbo Barrus, haberi	30
Et cupiat formosus; eat quacunque, puellis
Injiciat curam quærendi singula, quali
Sit facie, sura quali, pede, dente, capillo:
Sic qui promittit, cives, urbem sibi curæ,
Imperium fore, et Italiam et delubra deorum;	35
Quo patre sit natus, num ignota matre inhonestus,
Omnes mortales curare et quærere cogit.
¶ Tune Syri, Damæ, aut Dionysî filius, audes
Dejicere e saxo cives, aut tradere Cadmo?
¶ At Novius collega gradu post me sedet uno;	40

Namque est ille, pater quod erat meus. ¶ Hoc tibi Pau	ılus
Et Messala videris? At hic, si plostra ducenta
Concurrantque foro tria funera, magna sonabit
Cornua quod vincatque tubas: saltem tenet hoc nos.
¶ Nunc ad me redeo, libertino patre natum:	45
Quem rodunt omnes libertino patre natum:
Nunc quia sum tibi, Mæcenas, convictor; at olim
Quod mihi pareret legio Romana tribuno.
Dissimile hoc illi est: quia non ut forsit honorem
Jure mihi invideat quivis, ita te quoque amicum;	50
Præsertim cautum dignos assumere, prava
Ambitione procul. Felicem dicere non hoc
Me possum, casu quod te sortitus amicum:
Nulla etenim mihi te fors obtulit: optimus olim
Virgilius, post hunc Varius, dixere quid essem.	53
Ut veni coram, singultim pauca locutus
(Infans namque pudor prohibebat plura profari)
Non ego me claro natum patre, non ego circum
Me Satureiano vectari rura caballo,
Sed quod eram, narro: respondes, ut tuus est mos,	60
Pauca: abeo; et revocas nono post mense, jubesque
Esse in amicorum numero. Magnum hoc ego duco,
Quod placui tibi, qui turpi secernis honestum,
Non patre præclaro, sed vita et pectore puro.
Atqui si vitiis mediocribus, ac mea paucis	65
Mendosa est natura, alioqui recta, (velut si Egregio inspersos reprendas corpore nævos,)
Si neque avaritiam, neque sordes, aut mala lustra
Objiciet vere quisquam mihi; purus et insons
(Ut me collaudem) si vivo et carus amicis:	70
Causa fuit pater his, qui macro pauper agello	•
Noluit in Flavî ludum me mittere, magni
Quo pueri magnis e centurionibus orti,
Lævo suspensi loculos tabulamque lacerto,
Ibant octonis referentes idibus æra:	75
Sed puerum est ausus Romam portare, docendum	, ,

Artes quas doceat quivis eques atque senator Semet prognatos: vestem servosque sequentes, In magno ut populo, si quis vidisset, avita Ex re præberi sumtus mihi crederet illos. 80 Ipse mihi custos incorruptissimus omnes Circum doctores aderat. Quid multa? pudicum (Qui primus virtutis honos) servavit ab omni Non solum facto, verum opprobrio quoque turpi: Nec timuit, sibi ne vitio quis verteret, olim 85 Si præco parvas, aut (ut fuit ipse) coactor Mercedes sequerer: neque ego essem questus. At hoc nunc Laus illi debetur, et a me gratia major. Nil me pœniteat sanum patris hujus: eoque Non, ut magna dolo factum negat esse suo pars, 90 Quod non ingenuos habeat clarosque parentes;-Sic me defendam. Longe mea discrepat istis Et vox et ratio: nam si natura juberet A certis annis ævum remeare peractum, Atque alios legere ad fastum quoscunque parentes; — 95 Optaret sibi quisque; meis contentus, honestos Fascibus et sellis nollem mihi sumere, demens Judicio vulgi; sanus fortasse tuo, quod Nollem onus (haud unquam solitus) portare molestum. Nam mihi continuo major quærenda foret res, 100 Atque salutandi plures; ducendus et unus Et comes alter, uti ne solus rusve peregreve Exirem; plures calones atque caballi Pascendi; ducenda petorrita. Nunc mihi curto Ire licet mulo, vel, si libet, usque Tarentum, 105 Mantica cui lumbos onere ulceret, atque eques armos. Objiciet nemo sordes milii, quas tibi, Tilli, Cum Tiburte via prætorem quinque sequuntur Te pueri, lasanum portantes œnophorumque. Hoc ego commodius quam tu, præclare senator, 110 Millibus atque aliis, vivo; quacunque libido est, Incedo solus; percontor quanti olus, ac far;

Fallacem Circum, vespertinumque pererro Sæpe forum; assisto divinis; inde domum me Ad porri et ciceris refero laganique catinum: 115 Cœna ministratur pueris tribus; et lapis albus Pocula cum cyatho duo sustinet; astat echino Vilis cum patera guttus, Campana supellex. Deinde eo dormitum, non solicitus, mihi quod cras Surgendum sit mane, obeundus Marsya, qui se 120 Vultum ferre negat Noviorum posse minoris. Ad quartam jaceo: post hanc vagor, aut ego lecto, Aut scripto quod me tacitum juvet: ungor olivo, Non quo fraudatis immundus Nacca lucernis. Ast ubi me fessum sol acrior ire lavatum 125 Admonuit, fugio Campum lusumque trigonem. Pransus non avide, quantum interpellet inani Ventre diem durare, domesticus otior. Hæc est Vita solutorum misera ambitione gravique: His me consolor victurum suavius, ac si 130 Quæstor avus, pater atque meus, patruusque fuisset.

SATIRA VII.

Proscripti Regis Rupilì pus atque venenum
Ibrida quo pacto sit Persius ultus, opinor
Omnibus et lippis notum et tonsoribus esse.
Persius hic permagna negotia dives habebat
Clazomenis, etiam lites cum Rege molestas;
Durus homo, atque odio qui posset vincere Regem;
Confidens, tumidus; adeo sermonis amari,
Sisennas, Barros ut equis præcurreret albis.
Ad Regem redeo: postquam nihil inter utrumque
Convenit (hoc etenim sunt omnes jure molesti
Quo fortes, quibus adversum bellum incidit. Inter
Hectora Priamiden, animosum atque inter Achillem

Ira fuit capitalis, ut ultima divideret mors Non aliam ob causam, nisi quod virtus in utroque Summa fuit. Duo si discordia vexet inertes: 15 Aut si disparibus bellum incidat, ut Diomedi Cum Lycio Glauco; discedet pigrior, ultro Muneribus missis)—Bruto Prætore tenente Ditem Asiam, Rupilî et Persî par pugnat, uti non Compositum melius cum Bitho Bacchius; in jus 20 Acres procurrent, magnum spectaculum uterque. Persius exponit causam, ridetur ab omni Conventu: laudat Brutum, laudatque cohortem; Solem Asiæ Brutum appellat; stellasque salubres Appellat comites, excepto Rege; canem illum, 25 Invisum agricolis sidus, venisse: ruebat Flumen ut hibernum, fertur quo rara securis. Tum Prænestinus salso multoque fluenti Expressa arbusto regerit convicia, durus Vindemiator, et invictus, cui sæpe viator 30 Cessisset, magna compellans voce cuculum. At Græcus, postquam est Italo perfusus aceto, Persius exclamat, Per magnos, Brute, Deos te Oro, qui reges consuêris tollere, cur non Hunc Regem jugulas? operum hoc (mihi crede) tuorum est. 35

SATIRA VIII.

OLIM truncus eram ficulnus, inutile lignum,
Cum faber incertus scamnum faceret ne Priapum,
Maluit esse deum: deus inde ego, furum aviumque
Maxima formido; nam fures dextra coërcet,
Obscænoque ruber porrectus ab inguine palus:
Ast importunas volucres in vertice arundo
Terret fixa, vetatque novis considere in hortis.

5

Huc prius angustis ejecta cadavera cellis Conservus vili portanda locabat in arca. Hoc miseræ plebi stabat commune sepulcrum, 10 Pantolabo scurræ, Nomentanoque nepoti. Mille pedes in fronte, trecentos cippus in agrum Hic dabat: hæredes monumentum ne sequeretur. Nunc licet Esquiliis habitare salubribus, atque Aggere in aprico spatiari, qua modo tristes 15 Albis informem spectabant ossibus agrum. Cum mihi non tantum furcsque feræque suëtæ Hunc vexare locum, curæ sunt atque labori, Quantum, carminibus quæ versant atque venenis 20 Humanos animos: has nullo perdere possum, Nec prohibere modo, simulac vaga luna decorum Protulit os, quin ossa legant, herbasque nocentes. Vidi egomet nigra succinctam vadere palla Canidiam, pedibus nudis, passoque capillo, Cum Sagana majore ululantem : pallor utrasque 25 Fecerat horrendas aspectu. Scalpere terram Unguibus, et pullam divellere mordicus agnam Coeperunt; cruor in fossam confusus, ut inde Manes elicerent, animas responsa daturas. Lanea et effigies erat, altera cerca; major 30 Lanea, quæ pænis compesceret inferiorem. Cerea suppliciter stabat, servilibus ut quæ Jam peritura modis. Hecaten vocat altera sævam, Altera Tisiphonen: serpentes atque videres Infernas errare canes, lunamque rubentem, 35 Ne foret his testis, post magna latere sepulcra. Mentior at si quid, merdis caput inquiner albis Corvorum; atque in me veniat mictum atque cacatum Julius et fragilis Pediatia, furque Voranus. Singula quid memorem? quo pacto alterna loquentes 40 Umbræ cum Sagana resonârint triste et acutum; Utque lupi barbam variæ cum dente colubræ Abdiderint furtim terris; et imagine cerea

Largior arserit ignis; et ut non testis inultus
Horruerim voces Furiarum et facta duarum.

Nam, displosa sonat quantum vesica, pepedi
Diffissa nate ficus; at illæ currere in urbem:
Canidiæ dentes, altum Saganæ caliendrum
Excidere, atque herbas, atque incantata lacertis
Vincula, cum magno risuque jocoque videres.

50

SATIRA IX.

I BAM forte Via sacra, sicut meus est mos. Nescio quid meditans nugarum, et totus in illis: Accurrit quidam notus mihi nomine tantum, Arreptaque manu, ¶Quid agis, dulcissime rerum? ¶Suaviter, ut nunc est, inquam; et cupio omnia quæ vis, 5 Cum assectaretur, Numquid vis? occupo: at ille. Nôris nos, inquit; docti sumus. Hic ego, Pluris Hoc, inquam, mihi eris: misere discedere quærens, Ire modo ocius, interdum consistere, in aurem Dicere nescio quid puero: cum sudor ad imos 10 Manaret talos, O te, Bolane, cerebri Felicem! aiebam tacitus: cum quidlibet ille Garriret, vicos, urbem laudaret; ut illi Nil respondebam, Misere cupis, inquit, abire, Jamdudum video: sed nil agis; usque tenebo, 15 Persequar. Hinc quo nunc iter est tibi? ¶ Nil opus est te Circumagi; quendam volo visere, non tibi notum: Trans Tiberim longe cubat is, prope Cæsaris hortos. ¶ Nil habeo quod agam, et non sum piger; usque sequar te. Demitto auriculas, ut iniquæ mentis asellus, 20 Cum gravius dorso subiit onus. Incipit ille; Si bene me novi, non Viscum pluris amicum, Non Varium, facies: nam quis me scribere plures Aut citius possit versus? quis membra movere Mollius? invideat quod et Hermogenes, ego canto. 25 Interpellandi locus hic erat: ¶ Est tibi mater? Cognati, queis te salvo est opus? ¶ Haud mihi quisquam; Omnes composui. ¶ Felices! nunc ego resto: Confice; namque instat fatum mihi triste, Sabella Quod puero cecinit motâ divina anus uruâ; 30 "Hunc neque dira venena nec hosticus auferet ensis, " Nec laterum dolor, aut tussis, nec tarda podagra; "Garrulus hunc quando consumet cunque: loquaces, " Si sapiat, vitet, simulatque adoleverit ætas." Ventum erat ad Vestæ, quarta jam parte diei 35 Præterita: et casu tunc respondere vadato Debebat; quod ni fecisset, perdere litem. Si me amas, inquit, paulum hic ades. ¶ Inteream si Aut valeo stare, aut novi civilia jura; Et propero quo scis. ¶ Dubius sum quid faciam, inquit; 40 Tene relinguam, an rem. ¶ Me, sodes. ¶ Non faciam, ille: Et præcedere cæpit. Ego (ut contendere durum est Cum victore) sequor. Mæcenas quomodo tecum? Hinc repetit. Paucorum hominum, et mentis bene sanæ: Nemo dexterius fortuna est usus. ¶ Haberes 45 Magnum adjutorem, posset qui ferre secundas, Hunc hominem velles si tradere; dispeream ni Summôsses omnes. ¶ Non isto vivimus illic Quo tu rere modo: domus hac nec purior ulla est Nec magis his aliena malis: nil mî officit unquam, 50 Ditior hic, aut est quia doctior; est locus uni-Cuique suus. ¶ Magnum narras, vix credibile. ¶ Atqui Sic habet. ¶ Accendis quare cupiam magis illi Proximus esse. ¶ Velis tantummodo, quæ tua virtus, Expugnabis; et est qui vinci possit, eoque 55 Difficiles aditus primos habet. ¶ Haud mihi deero: Muneribus servos corrumpam; non, hodie si Exclusus fuero, desistam; tempora quæram; Occurram in triviis; deducam. NIL sine magno Vita labore dedit mortalibus. ¶ Hæc dum agit, ecce, 60 Fuscus Aristius occurrit, mihi carus, et illum Qui pulchre nosset: consistimus: Unde venis? et. Quò tendis? rogat, et respondet. Vellere cœpi, Et prensare manu lentissima brachia, nutans, Distorquens oculos, ut me eriperet: male salsus 65 Ridens dissimulare: meum jecur urere bilis. Certe nescio quid secreto velle loqui te Aiebas mecum: Memini bene; sed meliori Tempore dicam: hodie tricesima sabbata: vin' tu Curtis Judæis oppedere? Nulla mihi, inquam, 70 Relligio est: At mî: sum paulo infirmior, unus Multorum; ignosces; alias loquar. Hunccine solem Tam nigrum surrexe mihi! fugit improbus, ac me Sub cultro linguit. Casu venit obvius illi Adversarius: et. Quo tu turpissime? magna 75 Exclamat voce, et, Licet antestari? Ego vero Oppono auriculam: rapit in jus: clamor utringue: Undique concursus. Sic me servavit Apollo.

SATIRA X.

Nempe incomposito dixi pede currere versus
Lucilî: quis tam Lucilî fautor inepte est,
Ut non hoc fateatur? At idem, quod sale multo
Urbem defricuit, charta laudatur eadem.
Nec tamen hoc tribuens, dederim quoque cætera: nam sic 5
Et Laberî mimos, ut pulchra poëmata, mirer.
Ergo non satis est risu diducere rictum
Auditoris: et est quædam tamen hic quoque virtus.
Est brevitate opus, ut currat sententia, neu se
Impediat verbis lassas onerantibus aures. 10
Et sermone opus est modo tristi, sæpe jocoso,
Defendente vicem modo rhetoris, atque poëtæ,
Interdum urbani, parcentis viribus, atque

Extenuantis eas consulto. Ridiculum acri
Fortius et melius magnas plerumque secat res.	15
Illi, scripta quibus Comædia prisca viris est,
Hoc stabant, hoc sunt imitandi; quos neque pulcher
Hermogenes unquam legit, neque simius iste
Nil præter Calvum et doctus cantare Catullum.
¶ At magnum fecit, quod verbis Græca Latinis	20
Miscuit. ¶ O seri studiorum! quine putetis
Difficile et mirum, Rhodio quod Pitholeonti
Contigit? ¶ At sermo lingua concinnus utraque
Suavior, ut Chio nota si commista Falerni est.
¶Cum versus facias; teipsum percontor, an et cum	25
Dura tibi peragenda rei sit causa Petilli.
Scilicet oblitus patriæque patrisque Latini
Cum Pedius causas exsudet Publicola atque
Corvinus, patriis intermiscere petita
Verba foris malis, Canusini more bilinguis?	30
Atque ego cum Græcos facerem, natus mare citra,
Versiculos, vetuit tali me voce Quirinus,
Post mediam noctem visus, cum somnia vera:
In silvam non ligna feras insanius, ac si
Magnas Græcorum malis implere catervas.	35
Turgidus Alpinus jugulat dum Memnona, dumque
Defingit Rheni luteum caput; hæc ego ludo
Quæ nec in æde sonent certantia judice Tarpa;
Nec redeant iterum atque iterum spectanda theatris.
Arguta meretrice potes, Davoque Chremeta	40
Eludente senem, comis garrire libellos,
Unus vivorum, Fundani: Pollio regum
Facta canit, pede ter percusso: forte Epos acer,
Ut nemo, Varius, ducit: molle atque facetum
Virgilio annuerunt gaudentes rure Camœnæ.	45
Hoc erat experto frustra Varrone Atacino,
Atque quibusdam aliis, melius quod scribere possem,
Inventore minor: neque ego illi detrahere ausim
Hærentem capiti multa cum laude coronam.

At dixi fluere hunc lutulentum, sæpe ferentem	50
Plura quidem tollenda relinquendis: age, quæso,
Tu nihil in magno doctus reprêndis Homero?
Nil comis Tragici mutat Lucilius Accî?
Non ridet versus Ennî gravitate minores,
Cum de se loquitur, non ut majore reprênsis?	55
Quid vetat et nosmet Lucilì scripta legentes
Quærere, num illius, num rerum dura negârit
Versiculos natura magis factos, et euntes
Mollius, ac si quis pedibus quid claudere senis,
Hoc tantum contentus, amet scripsisse ducentos	60
Ante cibum versus, totidem cœnatus; Hetrusci
Quale fuit Cassî rapido ferventius amni
Ingenium, capsis quem fama est esse librisque
Ambustum propriis. Fuerit Lucilius, inquam,
Comis et urbanus; fuerit limatior idem,	65
Quam rudis et Græcis intacti carminis auctor,
Quamque Poëtarum seniorum turba; sed ille,
Si foret hoc nostrum fato delatus in ævum,
Detereret sibi multa; recideret omne quod ultra
Perfectum traheretur; et in versu faciendo	70
Sæpe caput scaberet, vivos et roderet ungues.
Sæpe stilum vertas, iterum quæ digna legi sint
Scripturus; neque te ut miretur turba, labores,
Contentus paucis lectoribus: an tua demens
Vilibus in ludis dictari carmina malis?	75
Non ego; nam satis est equitem mihi plaudere, ut au	ıdax,
Contemtis aliis, explosa Arbuscula dixit.
Men' moveat cimex Pantilius; aut cruciet quod
Vellicet absentem Demetrius? aut quod ineptus
Fannius Hermogenis lædat conviva Tigellî?	80
Plotius, et Varius, Mæcenas, Virgiliusque,
Valgius, et probet hæc Octavius optimus, atque
Fuscus; et hæc utinam Viscorum laudet uterque:
Ambitione relegata, te dicere possum,
Pollio, te, Messala, tuo cum fratre: simulque	85

Vos, Bibule et Servi; simul his te, candide Furni:
Complures alios, doctos ego quos et amicos
Prudens prætereo, quibus hæc, sint qualiacunque,
Arridere velim; doliturus, si placeant spe
Deterius nostra. Demetri, teque, Tigelli,
Discipularum inter jubeo plorare cathedras.
I puer, atque meo citus hæc subscribe libello.

90

Q. HORATH FLACCI

SERMONUM

LIBER SECUNDUS.

SATIRA I.

SUNT quibus in Satira videor nimis acer, et ultra
Legem tendere opus ; sine nervis altera quicquid
Composui pars esse putat, similesque meorum
Mille die versus deduci posse. Trebati,	4
Quid faciam, præscribe. ¶Quiescas. ¶Ne faciam, inc	quis,
Omnino versus? ¶Aio. ¶Peream male, si non	•
Optimum erat: verum nequeo dormire. ¶Ter uncti
Transnanto Tiberim, somno quibus est opus alto,
Irriguumque mero sub noctem corpus habento.
Aut, si tantus amor scribendi te rapit, aude	10
Cæsaris invicti res dicere, multa laborum
Præmia laturus. ¶ Cupidum, pater optime, vires
Deficiunt: neque enim quivis horrentia pilis
Agmina, nec fracta pereuntes cuspide Gallos,
Aut labentis equo describat vulnera Parthi.	15
¶ Attamen et justum poteras et scribere fortem,
Scipiadam ut sapiens Lucilius. ¶ Haud mihi deero,	,
Cum res ipsa feret. Nisi dextro tempore, Flacci
Verba per attentam non ibunt Cæsaris aurem;
Cui male si palpere, recalcitrat undique tutus.	20
¶Quanto rectius hoc, quam tristi lædere versu
Pantolabum scurram Nomentanumque nepotem!
Cum sibi quisque timet, quanquam est intactus, et o	dit.
¶Quid faciam? Saltat Milonius, ut semel icto
Accessit fervor capiti, numerusque lucernis.	25
Castor gaudet equis; ovo prognatus eodem,

Pugnis: quot capitum vivunt, totidem studiorum Millia: me pedibus delectat claudere verba, Lucili ritu, nostrum melioris utroque. Ille velut fidis arcana sodalibus olim 30 Credebat libris; neque, si male cesserat, usquam Decurrens alio, neque si bene : quo fit ut omnis Votiva pateat veluti descripta tabella Vita senis. Seguor hunc, Lucanus an Appulus, anceps: Nam Venusinus arat finem sub utrumque colonus, 35 Missus ad hoc pulsis (vetus est ut fama) Sabellis : Quo ne per vacuum Romano incurreret hostis: Sive quod Appula gens, seu quod Lucania bellum Incuteret violenta. Sed hic stilus haud petet ultro Quemquam animantem; et me veluti custodiet ensis Vagina tectus, quem cur destringere coner, Tutus ab infestis latronibus? O pater et rex Jupiter, ut pereat positum rubigine telum, Nec quisquam noceat cupido mihi paeis! at ille. Qui me commôrit (Melius non tangere! clamo) 45 Flebit, et insignis tota cantabitur urbe. Cervius iratus leges minitatur et urnam ; Canidia, Albutî, quibus est inimica, venenum; Grande malum Turius, siguid se judice certes. Ut, quo quisque valet, suspectos terreat, utque 50 Imperet hoc natura potens, sic collige mecum. Dente lupus, cornu taurus petit; unde, nisi intus Monstratum? Scævæ vivacem crede nepoti Matrem: nil faciet sceleris pia dextera (mirum: Ut neque calce lupus quemquam, neque dente petit bos) 55 Sed mala tollet anum vitiato melle cicuta. Ne longum faciam: seu me tranquilla sencetus Exspectat, seu mors atris circumvolat alis; Dives, inops, Romæ, seu fors ita jusscrit exsul, Quisquis erit vitæ, scribam, color. ¶ O puer, ut sis 60 Vitalis, metuo; et majorum ne quis amicus Frigore te feriat. ¶ Quid? cum est Lucilius ausus Primus in hunc operis componere carmina morem, Detrahere et pellem, nitidus qua quisque per ora Cederet, introrsam turpis; num Lælius, et qui 65 Duxit ab oppressa meritum Carthagine nomen, Ingenio offensi? aut læso doluere Metello. Famosisque Lupo cooperto versibus? Atqui Primores populi arripuit, populumque tributim; Scilicet uni æquus virtuti, atque ejus amicis. 70 Quin ubi se a vulgo et scena in secreta remôrant Virtus Scipiadæ et mitis sapientia Lælî: Nugari cum illo, et discincti ludere, donec Decoqueretur olus, soliti. Quicquid sum ego, quamvis Infra Lucili censum ingeniumque, tamen me 75 Cum magnis vixisse invita fatebitur usque Invidia, et fragili quærens illidere dentem, Offendet solido. Nisi quid tu, docte Trebati, Dissentis. ¶ Equidem nihil hic diffingere possum. Sed tamen ut monitus caveas (ne forte negotî 80 Incutiat tibi quid sanctarum inscitia legum) Si mala condiderit in quem quis carmina, jus est Judiciumque. ¶ Esto, siquis mala; sed bona siquis Judice condiderit laudatus Cæsare, siquis Opprobriis dignum latraverit, integer ipse? 85 ¶ Solventur risu tabulæ: tu missus abibis.

SATIRA II.

Quæ virtus et quanta, boni, sit vivere parvo
(Nec meus hic sermo est, sed quæ præcepit Ofellus, Rusticus, abnormis sapiens, crassaque Minerva)
Discite, non inter lances mensasque nitentes,
Cum stupet insanis acies fulgoribus, et cum
Adelinis falsis animus meliora recusat;
Verum hic impransi mecum disquirite.

¶ Cur hoc?

¶ Dicam si potero. Male verum examinat omnis
Corruptus judex. Leporem sectatus, equove
Lassus ab indomito, (vel, si Romana fatigat 10)
Militia assuetum Græcari, seu pila velox,
Molliter austerum studio fallente laborem,
Seu te discus agit, pete cedentem aëra disco,)
Cum labor extuderit fastidia, siccus, inanis
Sperne cibum vilem; nisi Hymettia mella Falerno 18	ž
Ne biberis diluta: foris est promus, et atrum
Defendens pisces hiemat mare; cum sale panis
Latrantem stomachum bene leniet. Unde putas, aut
Qui partum? Non in caro nidore voluptas
Summa, sed in teipso est. Tu pulmentaria quære 20)
Sudando: pinguem vitiis, albumque, neque ostrea,
Nec scarus, aut poterit peregrina juvare lagois.
Vix tamen eripiam, posito pavone, velis quin
Hoc potius, quam gallina, tergere palatum,
Corruptus vanis rerum ; quia veneat auro 25	í
Rara avis, et picta pandat spectacula cauda:
Tanquam ad rem attineat quicquam. Num vesceris ista	3
Quam laudas, pluma? cocto num adest honor idem?
Carne tamen quamvis distat nihil hac magis illa,
Imparibus formis deceptum te patet, esto:	ļ
Unde datum sentis, lupus hic Tiberinus, an alto
Captus hiet, pontesne inter jactatus, an amnis
Ostia sub Tusci?—Laudas, insane, trilibrem
Mullum, in singula quem minuas pulmenta necesse est
Ducit te species ; video: quo pertinet ergo, 35	í
Proceros odisse lupos? quia scilicet illis
Majorem natura modum dedit, his breve pondus.
Jejunus rare stomachus vulgaria temnit.
Porrectum magno magnum spectare catino
Vellem, ait Harpyiis gula digna rapacibus. At vos 40)
Præsentes Austri coquite horum obsonia: quamvis
Putet aper rhombusque recens, mala copia quando
Ægrum solicitat stomachum : cum rapula plonus

Atque acidas mavult inulas. Necdum omnis abacta
Pauperies epulis regum: nam vilibus ovis 45	Ď
Nigrisque est oleis hodie locus. Haud ita pridem
Gallonî præconis erat acipensere mensa
Infamis: quid? tum rhombos minus æquor alebat?
Tutus erat rhombus, tutoque ciconia nido,
Donec vos auctor docuit prætorius. Ergo 50)
Si quis nunc mergos suaves edixerit assos,
Parebit pravi docilis Romana juventus.
Sordidus a tenui victu distabit, Ofello
Judice: nam frustra vitium vitaveris illud,
Si te alio pravum detorseris. Avidienus, 53	5
Cui Canis ex vero ductum cognomen adhæret,
Quinquennes oleas est, et silvestria corna;
Ac, nisi mutatum, parcit defundere vinum; et Cujus odorem olei nequeas perferre (licebit Ille repotia, natales, aliosve dierum 60)
Festos albatus celebret) cornu ipse bilibri
Caulibus instillat, veteris non parcus aceti.
Quali igitur victu sapiens utetur? et horum
Utrum imitabitur? Hac urguet lupus, hac canis, aiunt.
Mundus erit, qui non offendat sordidus, atque 65	í
In neutram partem cultus miser: hic neque servis,
Albutî senis exemplo, dum munia didit,
Sævus erit; neque, sicut simplex Nævius, unctam
Convivis præbebit aquam: vitium hoc quoque magnum.
Accipe nunc, victus tenuis que quantaque secum 70)
Afferat. In primis valeas bene; nam variæ res
Ut noceant homini, credas, memor illius escæ,
Quæ simplex olim tibi sederit: at simul assis
Miscueris elixa, simul conchylia turdis;
Dulcia se in bilem vertent, stomachoque tumultum 75	Š
Lenta feret pituita. Vides ut pallidus omnis
Cœna desurgat dubia? Quin corpus onustum
Hesternis vitiis animum quoque prægravat una,
Atque adfligit humo divinæ particulam auræ.

Alter, ubi dieto citius curata sopori	80
Membra dedit, vegetus præscripta ad munia surgit.
Hie tamen ad melius poterit transcurrere quondam:
Sive diem festum rediens adduxerit annus;
Seu recreare volet tenuatum corpus; ubi que
Accedent anni, et tractari mollius ætas	85
Imbecilla volet: tibi quiduam accedet ad istam,
Quam puer et validus præsumis, mollitiem : seu
Dura valetudo inciderit, seu tarda senectus?
Rancidum aprum antiqui laudabant, non quia nasus
Illis nullus erat, sed, credo, hac mente, quod hospes	90
Tardius adveniens vitiatum commodius, quam
Integrum edax dominus consumeret. Hos utinam in	ter
Heroas natum Tellus me prima tulisset!
Das aliquid famæ, quæ carmine gratior aurem
Occupat humanam? grandes rhombi patinæque	95
Grande ferunt una cum damno dedecus; adde
Iratum patruum, vicinos, te tibi iniquum,
Et frustra mortis cupidum, cum deerit egenti
As, laquei pretium. Jure, inquit, Trausius istis
Jurgatur verbis: Ego vectigalia magna,	100
Divitiasque habeo tribus amplas regibus. Ergo
Quod superat, non est melius quo insumere possis?
Cur eget indignus quisquam, te divite? quare
Templa ruunt antiqua Deûm? Cur, improbe, caræ
Non aliquid patriæ tanto emetiris acervo?	105
Uni nimirum tibi recte semper crunt res.
O magnus postliac inimicis risus! Uterne
Ad casus dubios fidet sibi certius? hic, qui Pluribus assuêrit mentem corpusque superbum?
An qui, contentus parvo metuensque futuri,	110
In pace, ut sapiens, aptârit idonea bello?
¶ Quo magis his credas; puer hunc ego parvus Ofell	um
Integris opibus novi non latius usum,
Quam nunc accisis. Videas metato in agello
Cum pecore et gnatis fortem mercede colonum,	115

¶ Non ego, narrantem, temere edi luce profesta Quicquam præter olus, fumosæ cum pede pernæ. Ac mihi seu longum post tempus venerat hospes, Sive operum vacuo gratus conviva per imbrem Vicinus, bene erat, non piscibus urbe petitis, 120 Sed pullo atque hœdo: tum pensilis uva secundas Et nux ornabat mensas, cum duplice ficu: Post hoc ludus erat culpa potare magistra: Ac venerata Ceres, ita culmo surgeret alto, Explicuit vino contractæ seria frontis. 125 Sæviat, atque novos moveat fortuna tumultus, Quantum hinc imminuet? quanto aut ego parcius, aut vos, O pueri, nituistis, ut huc novus incola venit? Nam propriæ telluris herum natura neque illum, Nec me, nec quemquam statuit: nos expulit ille; 130 Illum aut nequities, aut vafri inscitia juris; Postremo expellet certe vivacior hæres. Nunc ager Umbreni sub nomine, nuper Ofelli Dictus erat, nulli proprius; sed cedit in usum Nunc mihi, nunc alii: quocirca vivite fortes, 135 Fortiaque adversis opponite pectora rebus.

SATIRA III.

Sic raro scribis, ut toto non quater anno
Membranam poscas, scriptorum quæque retexens,
Iratus tibi quod vini somnique benignus
Nil dignum sermone canas. Quid fiet? at ipsis
Saturnalibus huc fugisti; sobrius ergo
Dic aliquid dignum promissis: incipe; nil est.
Culpantur frustra calami, immeritusque laborat
Iratis natus paries Diis atque poëtis.
Atqui vultus erat multa et præclara minantis,
Si vacuum tepido cepisset villula tecto.

Quorsum pertinuit stipare Platona Menandro, Eupolin Archilocho? comites educere tantos? Invidiam placare paras Virtute relicta? Contemnere miser: vitanda est improba Siren Desidia: aut quicquid vita meliore parâsti, 15 Ponendum æquo animo. ¶ Dii te, Damasippe, deæque Verum ob consilium donent tonsore: sed unde Tam bene me nôsti? ¶ Postquam omnis res mea Janum Ad medium fracta est, aliena negotia curo, Excussus propriis: olim nam quærere amabam 20 Quo vafer ille pedes lavisset Sisyphus ære, Quid scalptum infabre, quid fusum durius esset: Callidus huic signo ponebam millia centum: Hortos egregiasque domos mercarier unus Cum lucro nôram; unde frequentia Mercuriale 25 Imposuere mihi cognomen compita. ¶ Novi: Et morbi miror purgatum te illius. ¶ Atqui Emovit veterem mire novus, ut solet, in cor Trajecto lateris miseri capitisque dolore: Ut lethargicus hic, cum fit pugil, et medicum urguet. 30 ¶ Dum nequid simile huic, esto ut libet. ¶ O bone, ne te Frustrere; insanis et tu, stultique prope omnes, Siquid Stertinius veri crepat; unde ego mira Descripsi docilis præcepta hæc, tempore quo me Solatus jussit sapientem pascere barbam, 35 Atque a Fabricio non tristem ponte reverti. Nam male re gesta cum vellem mittere operto Me capite in flumen, dexter stetit, et Cave faxis Te quicquam indignum: pudor (inquit) te malus angit, Insanos qui inter vereare insanus haberi. Primum nam inquiram, quid sit furere; hoc si erit in te Solo, nil verbi, pereas quin fortiter, addam. Quem mala stultitia, et quemcunque inscitia veri Cæcum agit, insanum Chrysippi porticus et grex Autumat. Hæc populos, hæc magnos formula reges, 45 Excepto sapiente, tenet. Nunc accipe quare

Desipiant omnes æque ac tu, qui tibi nomen Insano posuere. Velut silvis, ubi passim Palantes error certo de tramite pellit; Ille sinistrorsum, hic dextrorsum abit; unus utrique 50 Error, sed variis illudit partibus: hoc te Crede modo insanum, nihilo ut sapientior ille, Qui te deridet, caudam trahat. Est genus unum Stultitiæ nihilum metuenda timentis; ut ignes, Ut rupes fluviosque in campo obstare queratur: 55 Alterum et huic varium, et nihilo sapientius, ignes Per medios fluviosque ruentis: clamet amica Mater, honesta soror, cum cognatis, pater, uxor; Hic fossa est ingens! hic rupes maxima! serva! Non magis audierit quam Fusius ebrius olim 60 Cum Ilionam edormit, Catienis mille ducentis. Mater te appello, clamantibus. Huic ego vulgum Errori similem cunctum insanire docebo. Insanit veteres statuas Damasippus emendo. Integer est mentis Damasippi creditor? esto: 65 Accipe quod nunquam reddas mihi, si tibi dicam, Tune insanus eris, si acceperis; an magis excors, Rejecta præda, quam præsens Mercurius fert? Scribe decem a Nerio: non est satis; adde Cicutæ Nodosi tabulas centum: mille adde catenas: 70 Effugiet tamen hæc sceleratus vincula Proteus. Cum rapies in jus malis ridentem alienis, Fiet aper, modo avis, modo saxum, et cum volet, arbor. Si male rem gerere, insani est; contra, bene, sani; Putidius multo cerebrum est (mihi crede) Perilli. 75 Dictantis, quod tu nunquam rescribere possis. Audire, atque togam jubeo componere, quisquis Ambitione mala aut argenti pallet amore, Quisquis luxuria tristive superstitione, Aut alio mentis morbo calet; huc propius me, 80 Dum docco insanire omnes, vos ordine adite. Danda est hellebori multo pars maxima avaris:

Nescio an Anticyram ratio illis destinet omnem.
Hæredes Staberî summam incidere sepulcro;
Ni sic fecissent, gladiatorum dare centum 8	35
Damnati populo paria, atque epulum, arbitrio Arrî;
Frumenti quantum metit Africa. Sive ego prave,
Seu recte, hoc volui; ne sis patruus mihi. Credo
Hoc Staberî prudentem animum vidisse. Quid ergo
	90
Hæredes voluit? Quoad vixit, credidit ingens
Pauperiem vitium, et cavit nihil acrius; ut si
Forte minus locuples uno quadrante perisset,
Ipse videretur sibi nequior: omnis enim res,
	15
Divitiis parent; quas qui contraxerit, ille
Clarus crit, fortis, justus-Sapiensne? Etiam! et rex,
Et quicquid volet. Hoc, veluti virtute paratum,
Speravit magnæ laudi fore. Quid simile isti
Græcus Aristippus, qui servos projicere aurum	00
In media jussit Libya, quia tardius irent
Propter onus segnes? uter est insanior horum?
Nil agit exemplum, litem quod lite resolvit.
Siquis emat citharas, emptas comportet in unum,
Nec studio citharæ nec Musæ deditus ulli; 10)5
Si scalpra et formas, non sutor; nautica vela,
Aversus mercaturis: delirus et amens
Undique dicatur merito. Qui discrepat istis,
Qui nummos aurumque recondit, nescius uti
Compositis, metuensque velut contingere sacrum? 11	0
Siquis ad ingentem frumenti semper acervum
Porrectus vigilet, cum longo fuste; neque illinc
Audeat esuriens dominus contingere granum,
Ac potius foliis parcus vescatur amaris:
Si positis intus Chii veterisque Falerni 11	5
Mille cadis—nihil est: tercentum millibus, acre
Potet acetum: age, si et stramentis incubet, unde-
Octoginta annos natus, cui stragula vestis.

Blattarum ac tinearum epulæ, putrescat in arca: Nimirum insanus paucis videatur, eo quod 120 Maxima pars hominum morbo jactatur eodem. Filius, aut etiam hæc libertus ut ebibat hæres, Dis inimice senex custodis? ne tibi desit? Quantulum enim summæ curtabit quisque dierum. Unguere si caules oleo meliore, caputque 125 Cœperis impexa fœdum porrigine? Si quidvis satis est, perjuras, surripis, aufers Undique? tun' sanus? Populum si cædere saxis Incipias, servosve tuo quos ære parâris, Insanum te omnes pueri clamentque puellæ: 130 Cum laqueo uxorem interimis, matremque veneno, Incolumi capite es? Quid enim? Neque tu hoc facis Argis. Nec ferro ut demens genitricem occidis Orestes. An tu reris eum occisa insanîsse parente? Ac non ante malis dementem actum Furiis, quam 135 In matris jugulo ferrum tepefecit acutum? Quin ex quo est habitus male tutæ mentis Orestes, Nil sane fecit quod tu reprêndere possis: Non Pyladen ferro violare aususve sororem Electram; tantum maledicit utrique vocando 140 Hanc, Furiam; hunc, aliud, jussit quod splendida bilis. Pauper Opimius argenti positi intus et auri, Qui Veientanum festis potare diebus Campana solitus trulla, vappamque profestis, Quondam lethargo grandi est oppressus, ut hæres 145 Jam circum loculos et claves lætus ovansque Curreret: hunc medicus multum celer atque fideli Excitat hoc pacto; mensam poni jubet, atque Effundi saccos nummorum; accedere plures Ad numerandum: hominem sic erigit: addit et illud, 150 Ni tua custodis, avidus jam hæc auferet hæres. ¶ Men'vivo? ¶ Ut vivas igitur, vigila: hoc age. ¶ Quid vis? ¶ Deficient inopem venæ te, ni cibus atque Ingens accedat stomacho fultura ruenti.

Tu cessas? agedum sume hoc ptisanarium oryza. 155 ¶ Quanti emptæ? ¶ Parvo. ¶ Quanti ergo? ¶ Octussibus. ¶ Eheu!

Quid refert, morbo, an furtis pereamve rapinis? Quisnam igitur sanus? Qui non stultus. Quid avarus? Stultus et insanus. Quid? siquis non sit avarus, Cur. Stoice? Dicam. 160 Continuo sanus? Minime. Non est cardiacus, Craterum dixisse putato, Hic æger: recte est igitur, surgetque? negabit; Quod latus aut renes morbo tentantur acuto. Non est perjurus, neque sordidus; immolet æquis Hic porcum Laribus: verum ambitiosus et audax; 165 Naviger Anticyram: quid enim differt, barathrone Dones quicquid habes, an nunquam utare paratis? Servius Oppidius Canusî duo prædia, dives Antiquo censu, natis divîsse duobus Fertur, et hæc moriens pueris dixisse vocatis 170 Ad lectum, Postquam te talos, Aule, nucesque Ferre sinu laxo, donare et ludere vidi; Te, Tiberi, numerare, cavis abscondere tristem: Extimui ne vos ageret vesania discors; Tu Nomentanum, tu ne sequerere Cicutam. 175 Quare per divos oratus uterque Penates, Tu cave ne minuas; tu, ne majus facias id Quod satis esse putat pater, et natura coërcet. Præterea ne vos titillet gloria, jure-Jurando obstringam ambo: uter ædilis fuerit ve 180 Vestrûm prætor, is intestabilis et sacer esto. In cicere atque faba bona tu perdas que lupinis, Latus ut in Circo spatiere, aut æneus ut stes, Nudus agris, nudus nummis, insane, paternis? Scilicet ut plausus, quos fert Agrippa, feras tu, 185 Astuta ingenuum vulpes imitata leonem? Neguis humâsse velit Ajacem, Atrida, vetas cur? ¶ Rex sum. ¶ Nil ultra quæro plebeius. ¶ Et æquam Rem imperito: at sicui videor non justus, inulto Dicere, quod sentis, permitto. ¶ Maxime regum, Dii tibi dent capta classem reducere Troja! Ergo consulere, et mox respondere licebit? ¶ Consule. ¶ Cur Ajax heros ab Achille secundus Putescit, toties servatis clarus Achivis, Gaudeat ut populus Priami Priamusque inhumato, 195 Per quem tot juvenes patrio caruere sepulchro? ¶ Mille ovium insanus morti dedit; inclytum Ulyssem Et Menelaum una mecum se occidere clamans. ¶ Tu cum pro vitula statuis dulcem Aulide natam Ante aras, spargisque mola caput, improbe, salsa, 200 Rectum animi servas? Quorsum? Insanus quid enim Ajax Fecit, cum stravit ferro pecus? abstinuit vim Uxore et gnato, mala multa precatus Atridis. Non ille aut Teucrum, aut ipsum violavit Ulyssem. ¶ Verum ego, ut hærentes adverso littore naves 205 Eriperem, prudens placavi sanguine divos. Nempe tuo, furiose. Meo; sed non furiosus. ¶ Qui species alias veri scelerisque tumultu Permistas capiet, commotus habebitur; atque, 210 Stultitiane erret, nihilum distabit, an ira. Ajax cum immeritos occidit, desipit, agnos? Cum prudens scelus ob titulos admittis inanes, Stas animo? et purum est vitio tibi cum tumidum est cor? Siquis lectica nitidam gestare amet agnam, Huic vestem ut gnatæ paret, ancillas paret, aurum, 215 Rufam et Rufillam appellet, fortique marito Destinet uxorem; interdicto huic omne adimat jus Prætor, et ad sanos abeat tutela propinquos. Quid? siquis gnatam pro muta devovet agna, Integer est animi? ne dixeris. Ergo, ubi prava 220 Stultitia, hic est summa insania: qui sceleratus, Et furiosus erit; quem cepit vitrea fama, Hunc circumtonuit gaudens Bellona cruentis. Nunc age, luxuriam et Nomentanum arripe mecum: 225 Vincet enim stultos ratio insanire nepotes. Hic simul accepit patrimonî mille talenta, Edicit, piscator uti, pomarius, auceps.

Unguentarius, ac Tusci turba impia vici, Cum seurris fartor, cum Velabro omne macellum, Mane domum veniant. Quid tum? Venere frequentes, 230 Verba facit leno, Quicquid mihi, quicquid et horum Cuique domi est, id crede tuum : et vel nunc pete, vel eras. Accipe quid contra juvenis responderit æquus; In nive Lucana dormis ocreatus, ut aprum Cœnem ego; tu pisces hiberno ex æquore vellis; 235 Segnis ego, indignus qui tantum possideam : aufer! Sume tibi decies; tibi tantundem; tibi triplex, Unde uxor media currit de nocte citata. Filius Æsopi detractam ex aure Metellæ, Scilicet ut decies solidûm exsorberet, aceto 240 Diluit insignem baccam; qui sanior, ac si Illud idem in rapidum flumen, jaceretve cloacam? Quinti progenies Arrî, par nobile fratrum, Nequitia et nugis, pravorum et amore gemellum, Luscinias soliti impenso prandere ecemtas: 245 Quorsum abeant? sanin' creta, an carbone notandi? Ædificare casas, plostello adjungere mures, Ludere par impar, equitare in arundine longa, Si quem delectet barbatum, amentia verset. Si puerilius his, ratio esse evincet, amare; 250 Nec quidquam differre, utrumne in pulvere, trimus Quale prius, ludas opus, an meretricis amore Solicitus plores: quæro, faciasne quod olim Mutatus Polemon? ponas insignia morbi, Fasciolas, cubital, focalia, potus ut ille 255 Dicitur ex collo furtim carpsisse coronas, Postquam est impransi correptus voce magistri? Porrigis irato puero cum poma, recusat: Sume, Catelle; negat: si non des, optat. Amator Exclusus qui distat, agit ubi secum, eat, an non, 260 Quo rediturus erat non arcessitus, et hæret Invisis foribus? Ne nune, cum me vocat ultro, Accedam? an potius mediter finire dolores?

Exclusit, revocat: redeam? non, si obsecret. Ecce Servus, non paulo sapientior; O here, quæ res 265 Nec modum habet, neque consilium, ratione modoque Tractari non vult: in amore hæc sunt mala; bellum. Pax rursum; hæc siguis tempestatis prope ritu Mobilia, et cæca fluitantia sorte, laboret Reddere certa sibi, nihilo plus explicet, ac si 270 Insanire paret certa ratione modoque. Quid? cum Picenis excerpens semina pomis, Gaudes si cameram percusti forte, penes te es? Quid? cum balba feris annoso verba palato, Ædificante casas qui sanior? Adde cruorem 275 Stultitiæ, atque ignem gladio scrutare: modo, inquam, Hellade percussa Marius cum præcipitât se, Cerritus fuit? an commotæ crimine mentis Absolves hominem, et sceleris damnabis eundem. Ex more imponens cognata vocabula rebus? 280 Libertinus erat, qui circum compita siccus Lautis mane senex manibus currebat : et. Unum (Quid tam magnum? addens) unum me surpite morti, Diis etenim facile est, orabat; sanus utrisque Auribus atque oculis; mentem, nisi litigiosus, 985 Exciperet dominus cum venderet : hoc quoque vulgus Chrysippus ponit fœcunda in gente Menenî. Jupiter, ingentes qui das adimisque dolores, Mater ait pueri menses jam quinque cubantis, Frigida si puerum quartana reliquerit, illo 290 Mane die quo tu indicis ieiunia, nudus In Tiberi stabit: casus medicusve levârit Ægrum ex præcipiti, mater delira necabit In gelida fixum ripa, febrimque reducet: Quone malo mentem concussa? timore Deorum. 295 Hæc mihi Stertinius sapientum octavus amico Arma dedit, posthac ne compellarer inultus. Dixerit insanum qui me, totidem audiet; atque Respicere ignoto discet pendentia tergo.

¶ Stoice, post damnum sic vendas omnia pluris: 300 Qua me stultitia (quoniam non est genus unum) Insanire putas? ego nam videor mihi sanus. ¶ Quid, caput abscissum demens cum portat Agave Gnati infelicis, sibi tum furiosa videtur? ¶ Stultum me fateor (liceat concedere veris) 305 Atque etiam insanum; tantum hoc edissere, quo me Ægrotare putes animi vitio. ¶ Accipe; primum Ædificas, hoc est, longos imitaris, abimo Ad summum totus moduli bipedalis; et idem Corpore majorem rides Turbonis in armis 310 Spiritum et incessum: qui ridiculus minus illo? An quodcunque facit Mæcenas, te quoque verum est, Tanto dissimilem, et tanto certare minorem? Absentis ranæ pullis vituli pede pressis, Unus ubi effugit, matri denarrat, ut ingens 315 Belua cognatos eliserit: illa rogare, Quantane? num tantum, sufflans se, magna fuisset? ¶ Major dimidio. ¶ Num tantum? ¶ Cum magis atque Se magis inflaret; Non, si te ruperis, inquit, Par cris. Hæc a te non multum abludit imago. 320 Adde poëmata nunc (hoc est, oleum adde camino) Quæ siquis sanus fecit, sanus facis et tu. Non dico horrendam rabiem. ¶ Jam desine. ¶ Cultum Majorem censu. ¶ Teneas, Damasippe, tuis te. ¶ Mille puellarum, puerorum mille furores. 325 ¶ O major tandem parcas, insane, minori.

SATIRA IV.

UNDE, et quo Catius? ¶ Non est mihi tempus aventi Ponere signa novis præceptis, qualia vincunt Pythagoran, Anytique reum, doctumque Platona. ¶ Peccatum fateor, cum te sic tempore lævo

Interpellârim: sed des veniam bonus, oro.	5
Quod si interciderit tibi nunc aliquid, repetes mox;
Sive est naturæ hoc, sive artis, mirus utroque.
¶ Quin id erat curæ, quo pacto cuncta tenerem ;
Utpote res tenues, tenui sermone peractas.
TEde hominis nomen; simul et, Romanus an hospes.	10
¶ Ipsa memor præcepta canam; celabitur auctor.
Longa quibus facies ovis erit, illa memento,
Ut succi melioris, et ut magis alma rotundis
Ponere: namque marem cohibent callosa vitellum.
Cole suburbano, qui siccis crevit in agris	15
Dulcior; irriguo nihil est elutius horto.
Si vespertinus subito te oppresserit hospes,
Ne gallina malum responset dura palato,
Doctus eris vivam misto mersare Falerno;
Hoc teneram faciet. Pratensibus optima fungis	20
Natura est: aliis male creditur. Ille salubres
Æstates peraget, qui nigris prandia moris
Finiet, ante gravem quæ legerit arbore solem.
Aufidius forti miscebat mella Falerno,
Mendose; quoniam vacuis committere venis	25
Nil nisi lene decet: leni præcordia mulso
Prolueris melius. Si dura morabitur alvus,
Mytilus et viles pellent obstantia conchæ,
Et lapathi brevis herba, sed albo non sine Coo.
Lubrica nascentes implent conchylia lunæ.	30
Sed non omne mare est generosæ fertile testæ.
Murice Bajano melior Lucrina peloris:
Ostrea Circeiis, Miseno oriuntur echini;
Pectinibus patulis jactat se molle Tarentum.
Nec sibi cœnarum quivis temere arroget artem,	35
Non prius exacta tenui ratione saporum.
Nec satis est cara pisces averrere mensa,
Ignarum quibus est jus aptius, et quibus assis
Languidus in cubitum jam se conviva reponet.
Umber et iligna nutritus glande rotundas	40

Curvet aper lances earnem vitantis inertem:
Nam Laurens malus est, ulvis et arundine pinguis.
Vinea summittit capreas non semper edules.
Fecundae leporis sapiens sectabitur armos.
Piscibus atque avibus quæ natura et foret ætas,	45
Ante meum nulli patuit quæsita palatum.
Sunt quorum ingenium nova tantum crustula promit.
Nequaquam satis in re una consumere curam:
Ut siquis solum hoc, mala ne sint vina, laboret,
Quali perfundat pisces, securus, olivo,	50
Massica si cœlo supponas vina sereno,
Nocturna, siquid crassi est, tenuabitur aura,
Et decedet odor nervis inimicus; at illa
Integrum perdunt lino vitiata saporem.
Surrentina vafer qui miscet fæce Falerna	55
Vina, columbino limum bene colligit ovo;
Quatenus ima petit volvens aliena vitellus.
Tostis marcentem squillis recreabis et Afra
Potorem cochlea; nam lactuca innatat acri
Post vinum stomacho: perna magis ac magis hillis	60
Flagitat in morsus refici; quin omnia malit
Quæcunque immundis fervent illata popinis.
Est operæ pretium duplicis pernoscere juris
Naturam : simplex e dulci constat olivo,
Quod pingui miscere mero muriaque decebit,	65
Non alia quam qua Byzantia putuit orea.
Hoc ubi confusum sectis inferbuit herbis,
Corycioque croco sparsum stetit, insuper addes
Pressa Venafranæ quod bacca remisit olivæ.
Picenis cedunt pomis Tiburtia succo;	70
Nam facie præstant. Venucula convenit ollis,
Rectius Albanam fumo duraveris uvam:
Hanc ego cum malis, ego fæcem primus et halec,
Primus et invenior piper album, cum sale nigro
Incretum, puris circumposuisse catillis.	75
Immane est vitium, dare millia terna macello.

Angustoque vagos pisces urguere catino. Magna movet stomacho fastidia, seu puer unctis Tractavit calicem manibus, dum furta ligurrit; Sive gravis veteri crateræ limus adhæsit. 80 Vilibus in scopis, in mappis, in scobe, quantus Consistit sumtus? neglectis, flagitium ingens. Ten' lapides varios lutulenta radere palma, Et Tyrias dare circum illota toralia vestes? Oblitum, quanto curam sumtumque minorem 85 Hæc habeant, tanto reprêndi justius illis, Quæ nisi divitibus nequeant contingere mensis. ¶Docte Cati, per amicitiam divosque rogatus, Ducere me auditum, perges quocunque, memento. Nam quamvis referas memori mihi pectore cuncta, 90 Non tamen interpres tantundem juveris; adde Vultum habitumque hominis; quem tu vidisse beatus, Non magni pendis, quia contigit: at mihi cura Non mediocris inest, fontes ut adire remotos, Atque haurire queam vitæ præcepta beatæ. 95

SATIRA V.

Hoc quoque, Tiresia, præter narrata petenti
Responde: quibus amissas reparare queam res
Artibus atque modis. Quid rides? ¶ Jamne doloso
Non satis est Ithacam revehi, patriosque penates
Aspicere? ¶ O nulli quidquam mentite, vides ut
Nudus inopsque domum redeam, te vate, neque illic
Aut apotheca procis intacta est, aut pecus: atqui
Et genus, et virtus, nisi cum re, vilior alga est.
¶ Quando pauperiem, missis ambagibus, horres,
Accipe, qua ratione queas ditescere. Turdus
10
Sive aliud privum dabitur tibi, devolet illue,
Res ubi magna nitet, domíno sene; dulcia poma,
Et quoscunque feret cultus tibi fundus honores,

Ante Larem gustet venerabilior Lara dives; Qui quamvis perjurus erit, sine gente, cruentus 15 Sanguine fraterno, fugitivus : ne tamen illi Tu comes exterior, si postulet, ire recuses. ¶ Utne tegam spurco Damæ latus? haud ita Trojæ Me gessi, certans semper melioribus. ¶ Ergo Pauper eris. ¶ Fortem hoc animum tolerare jubebo: 20 Et quondam majora tuli. Tu protinus, unde Divitias ærisque ruam, dic Augur, acervos. ¶Dixi equidem, et dico. Captes astutus ubique Testamenta senum: neu si vafer unus et alter Insidiatorem præroso fugerit hamo, 25 Aut spem deponas, aut artem illusus omittas. Magna minorve foro si res certabitur olim, Vivet uter locuples sine natis, improbus ultro Qui meliorem audax vocet in jus, illius esto Defensor: fama civem causaque priorem 30 Sperne, domi si natus erit fecundave conjux. Quinte, puta, aut Publi (gaudent prænomine molles Auriculæ) tibi me virtus tua fecit amicum: Jus anceps novi, causas defendere possum: Eripiet quivis oculos citius mihi, quam te 35 Contemtum quassa nuce pauperet : hæc mea cura est, Ne quid tu perdas, neu sis jocus: ire domum atque Pelliculam curare jube: fi cognitor ipse. Persta, atque obdura, seu rubra canicula findet Infantes statuas; seu pingui tentus omaso 40 Furius hibernas cana nive conspuet Alpes. Nonne vides (aliquis cubito stantem prope tangens Inquiet) ut patiens! ut amicis aptus! ut acer! Plures annabunt thunni, et cetaria crescent. Si cui præterea validus male filius in re 45 Præclara sublatus aletur; ne manifestum Cœlibis obsequium nudet te, leniter in spem Adrepe officiosus, ut et scribare secundus Hæres, et siquis casus puerum egerit Orco,

In vacuum venias: perraro hæc alea fallit.	50
Qui testamentum tradet tibi cumque legendum,
Abnuere, et tabulas a te removere memento:
Sic tamen ut limis rapias quid prima secundo
Cera velit versu; solus, multisne cohæres,
Veloci percurre oculo. Plerumque recoetus	55
Scriba ex quinqueviro corvum deludet hiantem,
Captatorque dabit risus Nasica Corano.
¶ Num furis? an prudens ludis me, obscura canend	0.2
¶ O Laërtiade, quiequid dicam, aut erit, aut non:
Divinare etenim magnus mihi donat Apollo.	60
¶ Quid tamen ista velit sibi fabula, si licet, ede.
¶ Tempore quo juvenis Parthis horrendus, ab alto
Demissum genus Ænea, tellure marique
Magnus erit, forti nubet procera Corano
Filia Nasicæ, metuentis reddere soldum.	65
Tum gener hoc faciet; tabulas socero dabit, atque
Ut legat orabit: multum Nasica negatas
Accipiet tandem, et tacitus leget; invenietque
Nil sibi legatum, præter plorare, suisque.
Illud ad hæc jubeo; mulier si forte dolosa	70
Libertusve senem delirum temperet, illis	-
Accedas socius: laudes, lauderis ut absens:
Adjuvat hoc quoque; sed vincit longe prius ipsum
Expugnare caput: scribet mala carmina vecors?
Laudato: scortator erit? cave te roget: ultro	75
Penelopen facilis potiori trade. ¶ Putasne,
Perduci poterit tam frugi tamque pudica,
Quam nequiere proci recto depellere cursu?
¶ Venit enim magnum donandi parca juventus,
Nec tantum Veneris quantum studiosa culinæ;	80
Sic tibi Penelope frugi est : quæ si semel uno
De sene gustârit tecum partita lucellum,
Ut canis, a corio nunquam absterrebitur uncto.
Me sene, quod dicam, factum est; anus improba The	bis
Ex testamento sic est elata : cadaver	85

Unctum oleo largo nudis humeris tulit hæres: Scilicet clabi si posset mortua : credo. Quod nimium institerat viventi. Cautus adito: Neu desis operæ, neve immoderatus abundes. Difficilem et morosum offendet garrulus: ultro 90 Non etiam sileas. Davus sis comicus, atque Stes capite obstipo, multum similis metuenti. Obsequio grassare: mone, si increbruit aura, Cautus uti velet carum caput: extrahe turba, Oppositis humeris: aurem substringe loquaci. 95 Importunus amat laudari? donec Ohe! jam Ad cœlum manibus sublatis, dixerit, urgue; et Crescentem tumidis infla sermonibus utrem. Cum te servitio longo curaque levârit; Et certum vigilans, Quartæ esto partis Ulysses, 100 Audieris, hæres: Ergo nunc Dama sodalis Nusquam est? unde mihi tam fortem, tamque fidelem? Sparge subinde: et, si paulum potes, illacrymare. Est Gaudia prodentem vultum celare. Sepulcrum Permissum arbitrio, sine sordibus exstrue: funus 105 Egregie factum laudet vicinia. Siquis Forte cohæredum senior male tussiet, huic tu Die, ex parte tua, seu fundi sive domus sit Emtor, gaudentem nummo te addicere. Sed me Imperiosa trahit Proserpina: vive valeque. 110

SATIRA VI.

Hoc erat in votis; modus agri non ita magnus, Hortus ubi, et tecto vicinus jugis aquæ fons Et paulum silvæ super his foret: auctius atque DI melius fecere: bene est: nil amplius oro, Maia nate, nisi ut propria hæc mihi munera faxis. Si neque majorem feci ratione mala rem,

Nec sum facturus vitio culpave minorem; Si veneror stultus nihil horum; O si angulus ille Proximus accedat, qui nunc denormat agellum! O si urnam argenti fors quæ mihi monstret! ut illi. 10 Thesauro invento qui mercenarius agrum Illum ipsum mercatus aravit, dives amico Hercule. Si, quod adest, gratum juvat: hac prece te oro, Pingue pecus domino facias, et cætera, præter Ingenium: utque soles, custos mihi maximus adsis. 15 Ergo ubi me in montes et in arcem ex urbe removi. (Quid prius illustrem Satiris Musaque pedestri?) Nec mala me ambitio perdit, nec plumbeus Auster, Autumnusque gravis, Libitinæ quæstus acerbæ. Matutine pater, seu Jane libentius audis, 20 Unde homines operum primos vitæque labores Instituunt (sic Diis placitum) tu carminis esto Principium. Romæ sponsorem me rapis. ¶ Eja, Ne prior officio quisquam respondeat, urgue: Sive Aguilo radit terras, seu bruma nivalem 25 Interiore diem gyro trahit, ire necesse est. ¶ Postmodo, quod mi obsit, clare certumque locuto, Luctandum in turba; facienda injuria tardis. ¶ Quid vis insane? et quas res agis? improbus urguet Iratis precibus; tu pulses omne quod obstat, 30 Ad Mæcenatem memori si mente recurras? ¶ Hoc juvat, et melli est, non mentiar. At simul atras Ventum est Esquilias, aliena negotia centum Per caput et circa saliunt latus. Ante secundam Roscius orabat sibi adesses ad Puteal cras. 35 De re communi scribæ magna atque nova te Orabant hodie meminisses, Quinte, reverti. Imprimat his cura Mæcenas signa tabellis. Dixeris, Experiar: Si vis, potes, addit, et instat. Septimus octavo propior jam fugerit annus, 40 Ex quo Mæcenas me cœpit habere suorum In numero, duntaxat ad hoc, quem tollere rheda

Vellet, iter faciens, et cui concredere nugas Hoc genus; Hora quota est? Threx est Gallina Syro par? Matutina parum cautos jam frigora mordent: 45 Et quæ rimosa bene deponuntur in aure. Per totum hoc tempus subjectior in diem et horam Invidiæ. Noster ludos spectaverat una; Luserat in Campo; Fortunæ filius; omnes. Frigidus a Rostris manat per compita rumor: 50 Quicunque obvius est, me consulit; ¶ O bone (nam te Scire, Deos quoniam propius contingis, oportet) Num quid de Dacis audisti? ¶ Nil equidem. ¶ Ut tu Semper eris derisor! ¶ At omnes DI exagitent me, Si quicquam. ¶ Quid? militibus promissa Triquetra 55 Prædia Cæsar; an est Itala tellure daturus? Jurantem me scire nihil mirantur ut unum Scilicet egregii mortalem altique silentî. Perditur hæc inter misero lux, non sine votis: O rus quando ego te aspiciam? quandoque licebit, 60 Nunc veterum libris, nunc somno et inertibus horis Ducere solicitæ jucunda oblivia vitæ? O quando faba Pythagoræ cognata, simulque Uncta satis pingui ponentur oluscula lardo? O noctes cœnæque deûm! quibus ipse meique, 65 Ante larem proprium vescor, vernasque procaces Pasco libatis dapibus. Prout cuique libido est, Siccat inæquales calices conviva solutus Legibus insanis; seu quis capit acria fortis Pocula, seu modicis uvescit lætius. 70 Sermo oritur non de villis domibusve alienis, Nec, male necne Lepos saltet; sed quod magis ad nos Pertinet, et nescire malum est, agitamus: utrumne Divitiis homines, an sint virtute beati; Quidve ad amicitias, usus rectumne trahat nos; 75Et quæ sit natura boni; summumque quid ejus. Cervius hæc inter vicinus garrit aniles Ex rc fabellas. Siquis nam laudat Arellî

Solicitas ignarus opes, sic incipit. ¶ Olim
Rusticus urbanum murem mus paupere fertur	80
Accepisse cavo, veterem vetus hospes amicum;
Asper, et attentus quæsitis, ut tamen arctum
Solveret hospitiis animum. Quid multa? neque ille
Sepositi ciceris, nec longæ invidit avenæ:
Aridum et ore ferens acinum, semesaque lardi	85
Frusta dedit, cupiens varia fastidia cœna
Vincere tangentis male singula dente superbo:
Cum pater ipse domus palea porrectus in horna
Esset ador loliumque, dapis meliora relinquens.
Tandem urbanus ad hunc, Quid te juvat, inquit, amic	e. 90
Prærupti nemoris patientem vivere dorso?	, .
Vis tu homines urbemque feris præponere silvis?
Carpe viam (mihi crede) comes, terrestria quando
Mortales animas vivunt sortita, neque ulla est
Aut magno aut parvo leti fuga: quo, bone, circa,	95
Dum licet, in rebus jucundis vive beatus:
Vive memor quam sis ævi brevis. Hæc ubi dicta
Agrestem pepulere, domo levis exsilit: inde
Ambo propositum peragunt iter, urbis aventes
Mœnia nocturni subrepere. Jamque tenebat	100
Nox medium cœli spatium, cum ponit uterque
In locuplete domo vestigia; rubro ubi cocco
Tincta super lectos canderet vestis eburnos,
Multaque de magna superessent fercula cœna,
Quæ procul exstructis inerant hesterna canistris.	105
Ergo ubi purpurea porrectum in veste locavit
Agrestem, veluti succinctus cursitat hospes,
Continuatque dapes; nec non vernaliter ipsis
Fungitur officiis, prælambens omne quod affert.
Ille cubans gaudet mutata sorte, bonisque	110
Rebus agit lætum convivam; cum subito ingens
Valvarum strepitus lectis excussit utrumque.
Currere per totum pavidi conclave; magisque
Exanimes trenidare simul domne alta Molossis

P. rsonuit canibus. Tum rusticus, Haud mihi vita 115 Est opus hac, ait, et valeas: me silva cavusque Tutus ab insidiis tenui solabitur ervo.

SATIRA VII.

JAMPUDUM ausculto; et cupiens tibi dicere servus Pauca, reformido. ¶ Davusne? ¶ Ita, Davus, amicum Mancipium domino, et frugi quod sit satis; hoc est, Ut vitale putes. ¶ Age, libertate Decembri (Quando ita majores voluerunt) utere; narra. 5 ¶ Pars hominum vitiis gaudet constanter, et urguet Propositum; pars multa natat, modo recta capesseus, Interdum pravis obnoxia: sæpe notatus Cum tribus anellis, modo læva Priscus inani, Vixit inæqualis, clavum ut mutaret in horas, 10 Ædibus ex magnis subito se conderet, unde Mundior exirct vix libertinus honeste. Jam meechus Romæ, jam mallet doctor Athenis Vivere, Vertumnis, quotquot sunt, natus iniquis. Scurra Volanerius, postquam illi justa cheragra 15 Contudit articulos, qui pro se tolleret atque Mitteret in phimum talos, mercede diurna Conductum pavit: quanto constantior idem In vitiis, tanto levius miser ac prior illo Qui jam contento, jam laxo fune laborat. 20 Non dices hodie, quorsum hæc tam putida tendant, Furcifer? Ad te, inquam. Quo pacto, pessime? Laudas Fortunam et mores antiquæ plebis; et idem, Siguis ad illa Deus subito te agat, usque recuses; Aut quia non sentis quod clamas rectius esse, 25 Aut quia non firmus rectum defendis, et hæres, Nequicquam coeno cupiens evellere plantam. Romæ rus optas, absentem rusticus urbem

Tollis ad astra levis. Si nusquam es forte vocatus
Ad cœnam, laudas securum olus: ac, velut usquam	30
Vinctus eas, ita te felicem dicis, amasque,
Quod nusquam tibi sit potandum. Jusserit ad se
Mæcenas serum sub lumina prima venire
Convivam; Nemon' oleum fert ocius? ecquis
Audit? cum magno blateras clamore, furisque.	35
Milvius et scurræ tibi non referenda precati
Discedunt. Etenim fateor me, dixerit ille,
Duci ventre levem; nasum nidore supinor;
Imbecillus, iners, siquid vis, adde, popino.
Tu, cum sis quod ego, et fortassis nequior, ultro	40
Insectere, velut melior? verbisque decoris
Obvolvas vitium? quid si me stultior ipso
Quingentis emto drachmis deprênderis? aufer
Me vultu terrere; manum stomachumque teneto,
Dum, quæ Crispini docuit me janitor, edo.	45
Te conjux aliena capit, meretricula Davum:
Peccat uter nostrûm cruce dignius? acris ubi me
Natura incendit, sub clara nuda lucerna
Quæcunque excepit turgentis verbera caudæ
Clunibus, aut agitavit equum lasciva supinum,	50
Dimittit neque famosum, neque solicitum, ne
Ditior, aut formæ melioris meiat eodem.
Tu, cum projectis insignibus, annulo equestri
Romanoque habitu, prodis ex judice Dama
Turpis, odoratum caput obscurante lacerna,	55
Non es quod simulas? metuens induceris, atque
Altercante libidinibus tremis ossa pavore.
Quid refert, uri virgis, ferroque necari
Auctoratus eas; an turpi clausus in arca,
Quo te demisit peccati conscia herilis	60
Contractum, genibus tangas caput? Estne marito
Matronæ peccantis in ambo justa potestas?
In corruptorem vel justior: illa tamen se
Non habitu mutatve loco, peccatve superne.

Cum te formidet mulier, neque credat amanti. 65 Ibis sub furcam prudens, dominoque furenti Committee rem omnem, et vitam, et cum corpore famam. Evâsti? metues, credo, doctusque cavebis: Quæres quando iterum paveas, iterumque perire Possis. O toties servus! quæ belua ruptis. 70 Cum semel effugit, reddit se prava catenis? Non sum mœchus, ait: neque ego, hercule, fur, ubi vasa Prætereo sapiens argentea: tolle periclum, Jam vaga prosiliet frænis natura remotis. Tune mihi dominus, rerum imperiis hominumque 75 Tot tantisque minor? quem ter vindicta quaterque Imposita haud unquam misera formidine privet. Adde super, dictis quod non levius valeat; nam Sive vicarius est, qui servo paret, uti mos Vester ait; seu conservus: tibi quid sum ego? nempe 80 Tu, mihi qui imperitas, aliis servis miser, atque Duceris ut nervis alienis mobile lignum. Quisnam igitur liber? Sapiens, sibi qui imperiosus: Quem neque pauperies, neque mors, neque vincula terrent; Responsare cupidinibus, contemnere honores Fortis; et in seipso totus teres atque rotundus. Externi nequid valeat per leve morari; In quem manca ruit semper fortuna. Potesne Ex his ut proprium quid noscere? Quinque talenta Poscit te mulier, vexat, foribusque repulsum 90 Perfundit gelida: rursus vocat: eripe turpi Colla jugo: liber, liber sum, dic age: non quis; Urguet enim dominus mentem non lenis, et acres Subjectat lasso stimulos, versatque negantem. Vel cum Pausiaca torpes, insane, tabella, 95 Qui peccas minus atque ego, cum Fulvî Rutubæque. Aut Placideiani contento poplite miror Prœlia, rubrica picta aut carbone; velut si Re vera pugnent, feriant, vitentque moventes Arma viri? Nequam et cessator Davus; at ipse 100

Subtilis veterum judex et callidus audis. Nil ego, si ducor libo fumante; tibi ingens Virtus atque animus cœnis responsat opimis? Obsequium ventris mihi perniciosius est: cur? Tergo plector enim; quî tu impunitior illa, 105 Quæ parvo sumi nequeunt, opsonia captas? Nempe inamarescunt epulæ sine fine petitæ, Illusique pedes vitiosum ferre recusant Corpus. An hic peccat, sub noctem qui puer uvam Furtiva mutat strigili? qui prædia vendit. 110 Nil servile, gulæ parens, habet? Adde, quod idem Non horam tecum esse potes, non otia recte Ponere: teque ipsum vitas, fugitivus ut erro, Jam vino quærens, jam somno fallere curam: Frustra: nam comes atra premit sequiturque fugacem. 115 ¶ Unde mihilapidem?¶ Quorsum est opus?¶ Unde sagittas? ¶ Aut insanit homo, aut versus facit. ¶ Ocius hinc te Ni rapis, accedes opera agro nona Sabino.

SATIRA VIII.

Ut Nasidieni juvit te cœna beati?
Nam mihi quærenti convivam, dictus here illic
De medio potare die. ¶ Sic, ut mihi nunquam
In vita fuerit melius. ¶ Da, si grave non est,
Quæ prima iratum ventrem placaverit esca.
In primis Lucanus aper: leni fuit Austro
Captus, ut aiebat cœnæ pater; acria circum
Rapula, lactucæ, radices, qualia lassum
Pervellunt stomachum; siser, halec, fæcula Coa.
His ubi sublatis puer alte cinctus acernam
Gausape purpurco mensam pertersit, et alter
Sublegit quodeunque jaceret inutile, quodque
Posset cœnantes offendere: ut Attica virgo

5

10

Cum sacris Cercris, procedit fuscus Hydaspes,
Cacuba vina ferens; Alcon, Chium, maris expers.	15
Hic herus; Albanum, Macenas, sive Falernum
Te magis appositis delectat, habemus utrumque.
¶ Divitias miseras! Sed queis cœnantibus una,
Fundani, pulchre fuerit tibi, nôsse laboro.
¶ Summus ego, et prope me Viscus Thurinus, et infra,	20
Si memini, Varius; cum Servilio Balatrone
Vibidius, quos Mæcenas adduxerat umbras.
Nomentanus erat super ipsum, Porcius infra,
Ridiculus totas simul obsorbere placentas:
Nomentanus ad hoc, qui siquid forte lateret,	25
Indice monstraret digito: nam eætera turba,
Nos, inquam, ecenamus aves, conchylia, pisees,
Longe dissimilem noto celantia suecum;
Ut vel continuo patuit, cum passeris atque
Ingustata mihi porrexerat ilia rhombi.	30
Post hoc me docuit melimela rubere minorem
Ad lunam delecta: quid hoc intersit, ab ipso
Audieris melius. Tum Vibidius Balatroni;
Nos nisi damnose bibimus, moriemur inulti:
Et calices poscit majores: vertere pallor	35
Tum parochi faciem, nil sic metuentis ut acres
Potores; vel quod maledicunt liberius, vel
Fervida quod subtile exsurdant vina palatum.
Invertunt Alliphanis vinaria tota
Vibidius Balatroque, secutis omnibus: imi	40
Convivæ lecti nihilum nocuere lagenis.
Affertur squillas inter muræna natantes
In patina porrecta. Sub hoc herus, Hæe gravida, inq	uit,
Capta est, deterior post partum carne futura.
His mistum jus est, olco, quod prima Venafri	45
Pressit cella; garo de succis piseis Iberi;
Vino quinquenni, verum citra mare nato,
Dum coquitur (cocto Chium sic convenit, ut non Hoc magis ullum aliud); pipere albo, non sine aceto,

Quod Methymnæam vitio mutaverit uvam.	50
Erucas virides, inulas ego primus amaras
Monstravi incoquere, (inlutos Curtillus echinos,)
Ut melius, muria, quam testa marina remittit.
Interea suspensa graves aulæa ruinas
In patinam fecere, trahentia pulveris atri	55
Quantum non Aquilo Campanis excitat agris.
Nos majus veriti, postquam nihil esse pericli
Sensimus, erigimur. Rufus, posito capite, ut si
Filius immaturus obîsset, flere. Quis esset
Finis, ni sapiens sic Nomentanus amicum	60
Tolleret; Heu Fortuna! quis est crudelior in nos
Te Deus? ut semper gaudes illudere rebus
Humanis! Varius mappa compescere risum
Vix poterat. Balatro suspendens omnia naso,
Hæc est conditio vivendi, aiebat; eoque	65
Responsura tuo nunquam est par fama labori.
Tene, ut ego accipiar laute, torquerier omni
Solicitudine districtum? ne panis adustus,
Ne male conditum jus apponatur? ut omnes
Præcincti recte pueri comptique ministrent?	70
Adde hos præterea casus; aulæa ruant si,	•
Ut modo; si patinam pede lapsus frangat agaso.
Sed convivatoris, uti ducis, ingenium res
Adversæ nudare solent, celare secundæ.
Nasidienus ad hæc; Tibi Dii, quæcunque preceris,	75
Commoda dent; ita vir bonus es, convivaque comis:
Et soleas poscit: tum in lecto quoque videres
Stridere secreta divisos aure susurros.
¶ Nullos his mallem ludos spectâsse: sed illa
Redde, age, quæ deinceps risisti. ¶ Vibidius dum	80
Quærit de pueris, num sit quoque fracta lagena,
Quod sibi poscenti non dentur pocula; dumque
Ridetur fictis rerum, Balatrone secundo;
Nasidiene, redis mutatæ frontis, ut arte
Emendaturus fortunam · deinde secuti	85

Mazonomo puei magno discerpta ferentes

Membra gruis, sparsi sale multo non sine farre;
Pinguibus et ficis pastum jecur anseris albi;
Et leporum avulsos, ut multo suavius, armos,
Quam si cum lumbis quis edit: tum pectore adusto
Vidimus et merulas poni, et sine clune palumbes;
Suaves res, si non causas narraret earum et
Naturas dominus; quem nos sic fugimus ulti,
Ut nihil omnino gustaremus, velut illis
Canidia afflàsset, pejor serpentibus Afris.

95

Q. HORATH FLACCI

EPODON LIBER.

I. (METRUM I.)

AD M.ECENATEM.

IBIS Liburnis inter alta navium,
Amice, propugnacula,
Paratus omne Cæsaris periculum
Subire, Mæcenas, tuo?
Quid nos, quibus te vita si superstite	- 5
Jucunda; si contra, gravis?
Utrumne jussi persequemur otium,
Non dulce, ni tecum simul?
An hunc laborem mente laturi, decet
Qua ferre non molles viros?	10
Feremus; et te vel per Alpium juga,
Inhospitalem et Caucasum,
Vel occidentis usque ad ultimum sinum,
Forti sequemur pectore.
Roges, tuum labore quid juvem meo,	15
Imbellis ac firmus parum?
Comes minore sum futurus in metu,
Qui major absentes habet.
Ut assidens implumibus pullis avis
Serpentium adlapsus timet,	20
Magis relictis; non, ut adsit, auxili
Latura plus præsentibus.
Libenter hoc et omne militabitur
Bellum in tuæ spem gratiæ;
Non ut juvencis illigata pluribus	25
Aratra nitantur meis,

Pecusve Calabris ante sidus fervidum
Lucana mutet pascua,
Nec ut superni villa candens Tusculi
Circæa tangat mænia: 30
Satis superque me benignitas tua
Ditavit: haud paravero
Quod aut avarus, ut Chremes, terra premam,
Discinctus aut perdam ut nepos.

II. (M. 1.)

VITÆ RUSTICÆ LAUDES.

Beatus ille, qui procul negotiis
(Ut prisca gens mortalium)
Paterna rura bubus exercet suis,
Solutus omni fœnore.
Neque excitatur classico miles truci,	5
Neque horret iratum mare;
Forumque vitat et superba civium
Potentiorum limina.
Ergo aut adulta vitium propagine
Altas maritat populos,	10
Inutilesque falce ramos amputans,
Feliciores inserit;
Aut in reducta valle mugientium
Prospectat errantes greges;
Aut pressa puris mella condit amphoris;	15
Aut tondet infirmas oves;
Vel, cum decorum mitibus pomis caput
Autumnus arvis extulit,
Ut gaudet insitiva decerpens pyra,
Certantem et uvam purpuræ,	20
Qua muneretur te Priape, et te pater

Sylvane, tutor finium!
Libet jacere modo sub antiqua ilice,
Modo in tenaci gramine.
Labuntur altis interim ripis aquæ;	25
Queruntur in sylvis aves;
Fontesque lymphis obstrepunt manantibus,
Somnos quod invitet leves.
At cum tonantis annus hibernus Jovis
Imbres nivesque comparat,	30
Aut trudit acres hinc et hinc multa cane
Apros in obstantes plagas;
Aut amite levi rara tendit retia,
Turdis edacibus dolos;
Pavidumque leporem, et advenam laqueo gruem,	35
Jucunda captat præmia.
Quis non malarum, quas amor curas habet,
Hæc inter obliviscitur?
Quod si pudica mulier in partem juvet
Domum atque dulces liberos,	40
(Sabina qualis, aut perusta solibus
Pernicis uxor Appuli,)
Sacram vetustis exstruat lignis focum
Lassi sub adventum viri:
Claudensque textis cratibus lætum pecus,	45
Distenta siccet ubera;
Et horna dulci vina promens dolio,
Dapes inemtas apparet;—
Non me Lucrina juverint conchylia,	20
Magisve rhombus, aut scari,	50
Si quos Eois intonata fluctibus
Hiems ad hoc vertat mare:
Non Afra avis descendat in ventrem meum,
Non attagen Ionicus	55
Jucundior, quam lecta de pinguissimis	00
Oliva ramis arborum,
Aut herba lapathi prata amantis, et gravi

EPODON LIBER.	0/
Malvæ salubres corpori,
Vel agna festis cæsa Terminalibus,
Vel hædus ereptus lupo.	60
Has inter epulas, ut juvat pastas oves
Videre properantes domum!
Videre fessos vomerem inversum boves
Collo trahentes languido,
Positosque vernas, ditis examen domus,	65
Circum renidentes Lares!
Hæc ubi locutus fænerator Alfius,
Jamjam futurus rusticus,
Omnem redegit Idibus pecuniam;
Quærit Calendis ponere.
,

III. (M. 1.)

AD M.ECENATEM.

Parentis olim siquis impia manu
Senile guttur fregerit,
Edit cicutis alium nocentius.
O dura messorum ilia!
Quid hoc veneni sævit in præcordiis?	5
Num viperinus his cruor
Incoctus herbis me fefellit? an malas
Canidia tractavit dapes?
Ut Argonautas præter omnes candidum
Medea mirata est ducem,	10
Ignota tauris illigaturum juga
Perunxit hoc Iasonem:
Hoc delibutis ulta donis pellicem,
Scrpente fugit alite.
Nec tantus unquam siderum insedit vapor	15
Siticulosæ Appuliæ;
· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·

Nec munus humeris efficacis Herculis
Inarsit æstuosius.

At, siquid unquam tale concupiveris,
Jocose Mæcenas, precor
Manum puella savio opponat tuo,
Extrema et in sponda cubet.

20

IV. (M. I.)

AD MÆNAM, POMPEH LIBERTUM.

Lupis et agnis quanta sortito obtigit,
Tecum mihi discordia est,
Ibericis peruste funibus latus,
Et crura dura compede.
Licet superbus ambules pecunia,	5
Fortuna non mutat genus.
Videsne, sacram metiente te viam
Cum bis ter ulnarum toga,
Ut ora vertat huc et huc euntium
Liberrima indignatio?	10
Sectus flagellis hic Triumviralibus,
Præconis ad fastidium,
Arat Falerni mille fundi jugera,
Et Appiam mannis terit;
Sedilibusque magnus in primis eques,	15
Othone contempto, sedet.
Quid attinct tot ora navium gravi
Rostrata duci pondere
Contra latrones atque servilem manum,
Hoe, hoe tribuno militum?	20

V. (M. I.)

IN CANIDIAM VENEFICAM.

At, O deorum quicquid in cælo regit
Terras et humanum genus!
Quid iste fert tumultus? et quid omnium
Vultus in unum me truces?
Per liberos te, si vocata partubus	5
Lucina veris affuit,
Per hoc inane purpuræ decus precor,
Per improbaturum hæc Jovem,
Quid ut noverca me intueris, aut uti
Petita ferro belua?	10
Ut hæc tremente questus ore constitit
Insignibus raptis puer,
Impube corpus, quale posset impia
Mollire Thracum pectora;
Canidia brevibus implicata viperis	15
Crines et incomtum caput,
Jubet sepulchris caprificos erutas,
Jubet cupressus funebres,
Et uncta turpis ova ranæ sanguine,
Plumamque nocturnæ strigis,	20
Herbasque quas Iolcos atque Iberia
Mittit, venenorum ferax,
Et ossa ab ore rapta jejunæ canis,
Flammis aduri Colchicis.
At expedita Sagana, per totam domum	25
Spargens Avernales aquas,
Horret capillis ut marinus asperis
Echinus, aut currens aper.
Abacta nulla Veia conscientia,
Ligonibus duris humum	30
Exhaurichat ingemens laboribus.

Quo posset infossus puer
Longo die bis terque mutatæ dapis
Inemori spectaculo,
Cum promineret ore, quantum exstant aqua	35
Suspensa mento corpora ;
Exusta uti medulla, et aridum jecur
Amoris esset poculum,
Interminato cum semel fixæ cibo
Intabuissent pupulæ.	40
Non defuisse masculæ libidinis
Ariminensem Foliam,
Et otiosa credidit Neapolis,
Et omne vicinum oppidum:
Quæ sidera excantata voce Thessala,	45
Lunamque cælo deripit.
Hic irresectum sæva dente livido
Canidia rodens pollicem,
Quid dixit? aut quid tacuit? O rebus meis
Non infideles arbitræ,	50
Nox, et Diana quæ silentium regis,
Arcana cum fiunt sacra;
Nunc nunc adeste: nunc in hostiles domos
Iram atque numen vertite:
Formidolosæ dum latent silvis feræ,	55
Dulci sopore languidæ;
Senem (quod omnes rideant) adulterum
Latrent Suburanæ canes,
Nardo perunetum, quale non perfectius
Meæ laborârint manus.	60
Quid accidit? cur dira barbaræ minus
Venena Medeæ valent?
Quibus superbam fugit ulta pellicem,
Magni Creontis filiam,
Cum palla, tabo munus imbutum, novam	65
Incendio nuptam abstulit.
Atqui nec herba nec latens in asperis

1	ı

EPODON LIBER.

Radix fefellit me locis.
Indormit unctis omnium cubilibus
Oblivione pellicum.	70
Ah! ah! solutus ambulat veneficæ
Scientioris carmine.
Non usitatis Vare, potionibus
(O multa fleturum caput!)
Ad me recurres; nec vocata mens tua	75
Marsis redibit vocibus.
Majus parabo, majus infundam tibi
Fastidienti poculum.
Priusque cælum sidet inferius mari,
Tellure porrecta super,	80
Quam non amore sic mco flagres uti
Bitumen atris ignibus.
Sub hæc puer, jam non ut ante, mollibus
Lenire verbis impias;
Sed dubius unde rumperet silentium,	85
Misit Thyesteas preces.
Venena magnum fas nefasque, non valent
Convertere humanam vicem.
Diris agam vos: dira detestatio
Nulla expiatur victima.	90
Quin, ubi perire jussus exspiravero,
Nocturnus occurram Furor,
Petamque vultus umbra curvis unguibus,
(Quæ vis Deorum est Manium;)
Et inquietis assidens præcordiis,	95
Pavore somnos auferam.
Vos turba vicatim hinc et hinc saxis petens
Contundet, obscenas anus;
Post, insepulta membra different lupi,
Et Esquiliniæ alites:	100
Neque hoc parentes (heu mihi superstites!)
Effugerit spectaculum.

VI. (M. 1.)

IN CASSIUM SEVERUM.

Quid immerentes hospites vexas, canis. Ignavus adversum lupos? Quin huc inanes, si potes, vertis minas, Et me remorsurum petis? Nam, qualis aut Molossus, aut fulvus Lacon, 5 (Amica vis pastoribus,) Agam per altas aure sublata nives, Quæcunque præcedet fera. Tu cum timenda voce complêsti nemus, Projectum odoraris cibum. 10 Cave, cave: namque in malos asperrimus Parata tollo cornua: Qualis Lycambæ spretus infido gener, Aut acer hostis Bupalo. An, siquis atro dente me petiverit, 15 Inultus ut flebo puer?

VII. (M. I.)

AD POPULUM ROMANUM.

Quo, quo scelesti ruitis? aut cur dexteris
Aptantur enses conditi?

Parumne campis atque Neptuno super
Fusum est Latini sanguinis?

Non ut superbas invidæ Carthaginis
Romanus arces ureret;
Intactus aut Britannus ut descenderet
Sacra catenatus via:

Sed ut, secundum vota Parthorum, sua
Urbs hæc periret dextera.

EPODON LIBER.

Neque hic lupis mos, nec fuit leonibus,
Nunquam nisi in dispar feris.
Furorne cœcus, an rapit vis acrior?
An culpa? responsum date.
Tacent; et ora pallor albus inficit;	15
Mentesque perculsæ stupent.
Sic est: acerba fata Romanos agunt,
Scelusque fraternæ necis;
Ut immerentis fluxit in terram Remi
Sacer nepotibus cruor.	20

VIII. (M. 1.)

IN ANUM LIBIDINOSAM.

ROGARE longo putidam te sæculo,
Vires quid enervet meas!
Cum sit tibi dens ater, et rugis vetus
Frontem senectus exaret;
Hietque turpis inter aridas nates	5
Podex, velut crudæ bovis.
Sed incitat me pectus, et mammæ putres,
Equina quales ubera ;
Venterque mollis, et femur tumentibus
Exile suris additum.	10
Esto beata: funus atque imagines
Ducant triumphales tuum ;
Nec sit marita quæ rotundioribus
Onusta baccis ambulet.
Quid? quod libelli Stoici inter Sericos	15
Jacere pulvillos amant?
Illiterati num minus nervi rigent?
Minusve languet fascinum?
Quod ut superbo provoces ab inguine,
Ore adlaborandum est tibi.	20

IX. (M. 1).

AD MÆCENATEM.

QUANDO repostum Cæcubum ad festas dapes,
Victore lætus Cæsare,
Tecum sub alta (sic Jovi gratum) domo,
Beate Mæcenas, bibam,
Sonante mixtum tibiis carmen lyra,	5
Hac Dorium, illis Barbarum?
Ut nuper, actus cum freto Neptunius
Dux fugit, ustis navibus,
Minatus urbi vincla, quæ detraxerat
Servis amicus perfidis.	10
Romanus, eheu! (posteri negabitis)
Emancipatus fœminæ,
Fert vallum et arma miles, et spadonibus
Servire rugosis potest;
Interque signa turpe militaria	15
Sol aspicit conopium.
Ad hoc frementes verterunt bis mille equos
Galli canentes Cæsarem;
Hostiliumque navium portu latent	-
Puppes sinistrorsum citæ.	20
Io Triumphe, tu moraris aureos
Currus, et intactas boves:
Io triumphe, nec Jugurthino parem
Bello reportâsti ducem;
Neque Africano, cui super Carthaginem	25
Virtus sepulchrum condidit.
Terra marique victus hostis, Punico
Lugubre mutavit sagum;
Aut ille centum nobilem Cretam urbibus,
Ventis iturus non suis;	30
Exercitatas aut petit Syrtes Noto;

Aut fertur incerto mari.
Capaciores affer huc, puer, scyphos,
Et Chia vina, aut Lesbia;
Vel, quod fluentem nauseam coerceat,
Metire nobis Cæcubum.
Curam metumque Cæsaris rerum juvat
Dulci Lyæo solvere.

Х. (м. 1.)

IN M.EVIUM.
MALA soluta navis exit alite,
Ferens olentem Mævium.
Ut horridis utrumque verberes latus,
Auster, memento fluctibus;
Niger rudentes Eurus, inverso mari,	5
Fractosque remos differat;
Insurgat Aquilo, quantus altis montibus
Frangit trementes ilices;
Nec sidus atra nocte amicum appareat,
Qua tristis Orion cadit :	10
Quietiore nec feratur æquore,
Quam Graia victorum manus;
Cum Pallas usto vertit iram ab Ilio
In impiam Ajacis ratem.
O quantus instat navitis sudor tuis,	15
Tibique pallor luteus,
Et illa non virilis ejulatio,
Preces et aversum ad Jovem;
Ionius udo cum remugiens sinus
Noto carinam ruperit!	20
Opima quod si præda curvo littore
Porrecta mergos juveris;
Libidinosus immolabitur caper,
Et-agna Tempestatibus.

XI. (METRUM II.)

AD PETTIUM.

Petti, nihil me, sicut antea, juvat
Scribere versiculos amore perculsum gravi;
Amore, qui me præter omnes expetit
Mollibus in pueris aut in puellis urere.
Hic tertius December, ex quo destiti	5
Inachia furerc, sylvis honorem decutit.
Heu! me, per urbem (nam pudet tanti mali)
Fabula quanta fui! conviviorum et pœnitet,
In queis amantem et languor et silentium
Arguit, et latere petitus imo spiritus.	10
Contrane lucrum nil valere candidum
Pauperis ingenium! querebar adplorans tibi;
Simul calentis inverecundus deus
Fervidiora mero arcana promôrat loco.
Quod si meis inæstuat præcordiis	15
Libera bilis, ut hæc ingrata ventis dividat
Fomenta, vulnus nil malum levantia;
Desinet imparibus certare summotus pudor.
Ubi hæc severus te palam laudaveram,
Jussus abire domum, ferebar incerto pede	20
Ad non amicos (heu!) mihi postes, et (heu!)
Limina dura, quibus lumbos et infregi latus.
Nunc, gloriantis quamlibet mulicrculam
Vincere mollitia, amor Lycisci me tenet;
Unde expedire non amicorum queant	25
Libera consilia, nec contumeliæ graves;
Sed alius ardor aut puellæ candidæ,
Aut teretis pueri, longam renodantis comam.

XII. (METRUM 111.)

Quid tibi vis, mulier nigris dignissima barris?
Munera cur mihi, quidve tabellas
Mittis, nec firmo juveni, neque naris obesæ?
Namque sagacius unus odoror,
Polypus, an gravis hirsutis cubet hircus in alis,	5
Quam canis acer ubi lateat sus.
Quis sudor vietis, et quam malus undique membris
Crescit odor! cum pene soluto
Indomitam properat rabiem sedare; nec illi
Jam manet humida creta, colorque	10
Stercore fucatus crocodili; jamque subando
Tenta cubilia tectaque rumpit ;
Vel mea cum sævis agitat fastidia verbis;
Inachia langues minus, ac me:
Inachiam ter nocte potes; mihi semper ad unum	15
Mollis opus: pereat male quæ te
Lesbia, quærenti taurum, monstravit inertem;
Cum mihi Cous adesset Amyntas,
Cujus in indomito constantior inguine nervus,
Quam nova collibus arbor inhæret.	20
Muricibus Tyriis iteratæ vellera lanæ
Cui properabantur? Tibi nempe:
Ne foret æquales inter conviva, magis quem
Diligeret mulier sua quam te.
O ego infelix, quam tu fugis, ut pavet acres	25
Agna lupos, capreæque leones.

XIII. (METRUM IV.)

AD AMICUM.

Horrida tempestas eælum contraxit, et imbres Nivesque deducunt Jovem; nunc mare, nunc silüæ

Threïcio Aquilone sonant; rapiamus, amice,
Occasionem de die; dumque virent genua,
Et decet, obducta solvatur fronte senectus.	5
Tu vina Torquato move consule pressa meo.
Cætera mitte loqui: Deus hæc fortasse benigna
Reducet in sedem vice. Nunc et Achæmenio
Perfundi nardo juvat, et fide Cyllenea
Levare diris pectora solicitudinibus:	10
Nobilis ut grandi cecinit Centaurus alumno;
Invicte, mortalis dea nate puer Thetide,
Te manet Assaraci tellus, quam frigida parvi
Findunt Scamandri flumina, lubricus et Simoïs;
Unde tibi reditum certo subtemine Parcæ	15
Rupere; nec mater domum cœrula te revehct.
Illic omne malum vino cantuque levato,
Deformis ægrimoniæ dulcibus alloquiis.

XIV. (METRUM V.)

AD MÆCENATEM.
Mollis inertia cur tantam diffuderit imis
Oblivionem sensibus,
Pocula Letheos ut si ducentia somnos
Arente fauce traxerim,
Candide Mæcenas, occidis sæpe rogando:	5
Deus, Deus nam me vetat,
Inceptos, olim promissum carmen, Iambos
Ad umbilicum adducere.
Non aliter Samio dicunt arsisse Bathyllo
Anacreonta Teium ;	10
Qui persæpe cava testudine flevit amorem,
Non elaboratum ad pedem.

her	-
1	۹	4

EPODON LIBER.

Ureris ipse miser: quod si non pulchrior ignis Accendit obsessam Ilion,

Gaude sorte tua; me libertina, neque uno Contenta, Phryne macerat.

15

5

10

15

20

XV. (M. v.)

AD NEÆRAM.

Nox erat	, et	cœlo	fulgebat	luna	sereno
Inter 1	nin	ora si	dera,

Cum tu, magnorum numen læsura Deorum, In verba jurabas mea,

Arctius atque hedera procera astringitur ilex Lentis adhærens brachiis;

Dum pecori lupus, et nautis infestus Orion Turbaret hibernum mare, Intonsosque agitaret Apollinis aura capillos, Fore hunc amorem mutuum.

O dolitura mea multum virtute Neæra : Nam siquid in Flacco viri est,

Non feret assiduas potiori te dare noctes, Et quæret iratus parem;

Nec semel offensæ cedet constantia formæ, Si certus intrârit dolor.

At tu, quicunque es felicior, atque meo nunc Superbus incedis malo,

Sis pecore et multa dives tellure licebit, Tibique Pactolus fluat,

Nec te Pythagoræ fallant arcana renati, Formaque vincas Nirea;

Eheu! translatos alio mœrebis amores:
Ast ego vicissim riscro.

XVI. (METRUM VI.)

AD POPULUM ROMANUM.

ALTERA jam teritur bellis civilibus ætas,
Suis et ipsa Roma viribus ruit.
Quam neque finitimi valuerunt perdere Marsi,
Minacis aut Etrusca Porsenæ manus,
Æmula nec virtus Capuæ, nec Spartacus acer,	5
Novisque rebus infidelis Allobrox;
Nec fera cœrulea domuit Germania pube,
Parentibusque abominatus Annibal; —
Impia perdemus devoti sanguinis ætas;
Ferisque rursus occupabitur solum.	10
Barbarus, heu! cineres insistet victor, et urbem
Eques sonante verberabit ungula;
Quæque carent ventis et solibus, ossa Quirini
(Nefas videre) dissipabit insolens.
Forte, quid expediat, communiter, aut melior pars,	15
Malis carere quæritis laboribus.
Nulla sit hac potior sententia: Phocæorum
Velut profugit exsecrata civitas
Agros atque Lares patrios, habitandaque fana
Apris reliquit et rapacibus lupis;	20
Ire pedes quocunque ferent, quocunque per undas
Notus vocabit, aut protervus Africus.
Sic placet? an melius quis habet suadere? secunda
Ratem occupare quid moramur alite?
Sed juremus in hæc: Simul imis saxa renârint	25
Vadis levata, ne redire sit nefas,
Neu conversa domum pigeat dare lintea, quando
Padus Matina laverit cacumina,
In mare seu celsus procurrerit Appenninus,
Novaque monstra junxerit libidine	30
Mirus amor, juvet ut tigres subsidere cervis,
Adulteretur et columba milüo.

Credula nee ravos timeant armenta leones,
Ametque salsa levis hircus æquora.
Hæc, et quæ poterunt reditus abseindere dulces,	35
Eamus omnis exsecrata civitas,
Aut pars indocili melior grege; mollis et exspes
Inominata perprimat cubilia.
Vos, quibus est virtus, muliebrem tollite luctum,
Etrusca præter et volate littora.	40
Nos manet oceanus circumvagus: arva, beata
Petamus arva, divites et insulas;
Reddit ubi Cererem tellus inarata quotannis,
Et imputata floret usque vinea,
Germinat et nunquam-fallentis termes olivæ,	45
Suamque pulla ficus ornat arborem,
Mella cava manant ex ilice, montibus altis
Levis crepante lympha desilit pede.
Illic injussæ veniunt ad mulctra capellæ,
Refertque tenta grex amicus ubera;	50
Nec vespertinus circumgemit ursus ovili,
Nec intumescit alta viperis humus:
Pluraque felices mirabimur; ut neque largis
Aquosus Eurus arva radat imbribus,
Pinguia nec siccis urantur semina glebis,	55
Utrumque rege temperante cœlitum.
Non huc Argoo contendit remige pinus,
Neque impudica Colchis intulit pedem:
Non huc Sidonii torserunt cornua nautæ,
Laboriosa nec cohors Ulyssei :	60
[Nulla nocent pecori contagia, nullius astri
Gregem æstuosa torret impotentia.]
Jupiter illa piæ secrevit littora genti,
Ut inquinavit ære tempus aureum:
Ære, dehinc ferro duravit sæcula; quorum	65
Piis secunda vate me datur fuga.

XVII. (METRUM VII.)

AD CANIDIAM.

HORATIUS.

Jam jam efficaci do manus scientiæ
Supplex, et oro regna per Proserpinæ,
Per et Dianæ non movenda numina,
Per atque libros carminum valentium
Defixa cœlo devocare sidera,	5
Canidia, parce vocibus tandem sacris,
Citumque retro solve, solve, turbinem.
Movit nepotem Telephus Nereium,
In quem superbus ordinârat agmina
Mysorum, et in quem tela acuta torserat.	10
Luxere matres Iliæ addictum feris
Alitibus, atque canibus homicidam Hectorem;
Postquam relictis mænibus rex procidit
Heu! pervicacis ad pedes Achillei.
Setosa duris exuere pellibus	15
Laboriosi remiges Ulyssei,
Volente Circa, membra; tunc mens, et sonus
Relapsus, atque notus in vultus honor.
Dedi satis superque pænarum tibi,
Amata nautis multum et institoribus.	20
Fugit juventas, et verceundus color
Reliquit ossa pelle amicta lurida;
Tuis capillus albus est odoribus,
Nullum a labore me reclinat otium:
Urguet diem nox, et dies noctem, neque est	25
Levare tenta spiritu præcordia.
Ergo negatum vincor ut credam miser,
Sabella pectus increpare carmina,
Caputque Marsa dissilire nænia.
Quid amplius vis? O mare et terra! ardeo,	30
Quantum neque atro delibutus Hercules

Nessi cruore, nec Sicana fervida Urens in Ætna flamma. Tu, donec cinis Injuriosis aridus ventis ferar, Cales venenis officina Colchicis. 35 Quæ finis? aut quod me manet stipendium? Effare: jussas cum fide pænas luam, Paratus expiare, seu poposceris Centum iuvencos, sive mendaci lyra Voles sonari: tu pudica, tu proba, 40 Perambulahis astra sidus aureum. Infamis Helenæ Castor offensus vice. Fraterque magni Castoris, vieti prece, Ademta vati reddidere lumina. Et tu (potes nam) solve me dementia, 45 O nec paternis obsoleta sordibus, Nec in sepulchris pauperum prudens anus Novendiales dissipare pulveres. Tibi hospitale pectus, et puræ manus ; Tuusque venter Pactumeius: et tuo 50 Cruore rubros obstetrix pannos lavit, Utcunque fortis exsilis puerpera.

CANIDIA.

Quid obseratis auribus fundis preces? Non sava nudis surdiora navitis Neptunus alto tundit hibernus salo. 55 Inultus ut tu riseris Cotyttia Vulgata, sacrum liberi Cupidinis? Et Esquilini Pontifex veneficî Impune ut urbem nomine impleris meo? Quid proderat ditâsse Pelignas anus, 60 Velociusve miscuisse toxicum? Sed tardiora fata te votis manent: Ingrata misero vita ducenda est, in hoc, Novis ut usque suppetas laboribus. Optat quietem Pelopis infidus pater, 65

Egens benignæ Tantalus semper dapis; Optat Prometheus obligatus aliti; Optat supremo collocare Sisyphus In monte saxum; sed vetant leges Jovis. Voles modo altis desilire turribus, 70 Modo ense pectus Norico recludere; Frustraque vincla gutturi nectes tuo, Fastidiosa tristis ægrimonia. Vectabor humeris tunc ego inimicis eques; Meæque terra cedet insolentiæ. 75 An, quæ movere cereas imagines, Ut ipse nôsti curiosus, et polo Deripere Lunam vocibus possim meis, Possim crematos excitare mortuos, Desiderique temperare poculum,-80 Plorem artis in te nil valentis exitum?

Q. HORATII FLACCI

CARMINUM

LIBER PRIMUS.

ODE I. (METRUM XIV.)

AD MÆCENATEM.

M.ECENAS atavis edite regibus,
O et præsidium, et dulce decus meum,
Sunt quos curriculo pulverem Olympicum
Collegisse juvat; metaque fervidis
Evitata rotis, palmaque nobilis	5
Terrarum dominos evehit ad Deos.
Hune, si mobilium turba Quiritium
Certat tergeminis tollere honoribus;
Illum, si proprio condidit horreo,
Quidquid de Libycis verritur areis;	10
Gaudentem patrios findere sarculo
Agros, Attalicis conditionibus
Nunquam dimoveas, ut trabe Cypria
Myrtoum pavidus nauta secet mare.
Luctantem Icariis fluctibus Africum	15
Mercator metuens, otium et oppidi
Laudat rura sui: mox reficit rates
Quassas, indocilis pauperiem pati.
Est qui nec veteris pocula Massici,
Nec partem solido demere de die	20
Spernit, nunc viridi membra sub arbuto
Stratus, nunc ad aquæ lene caput sacræ.
Multos castra juvant, et lituo tubæ
Permistus sonitus, bellaque matribus
Detestata Manet sub Jove frigido	95

Venator, teneræ conjugis immemor;
Seu visa est catulis cerva fidelibus,
Seu rupit teretes Marsus aper plagas.
Te doctarum hederæ præmia frontium
Diis miscent superis: me gelidum nemus,
Nympharumque leves cum Satyris chori
Secernunt populo; si neque tibias
Euterpe cohibet, nec Polyhymnia
Lesboum refugit tendere barbiton.
Quod si me lyricis vatibus inseris,
Sublimi feriam sidera vertice.

ODE II. (METRUM XVIII.)

AD AUGUSTUM CÆSAREM.

Jam satis terris nivis atque diræ Grandinis misit Pater, et rubente Dextera sacras jaculatus arces, Terruit urbem: Terruit gentes, grave ne rediret 5 Seculum Pyrrhæ, nova monstra questæ; Omne cum Proteus pecus egit altos Visere montes: Piscium et summa genus hæsit ulmo, Nota quæ sedes fuerat columbis; Et superjecto pavidæ natarunt Æquore damæ. Vidimus flavum Tiberim, retortis Littore Etrusco violenter undis, 15 Ire dejectum monumenta regis, Templaque Vestæ: Iliæ dum se nimium querenti Jactat ultorem, vagus et sinistra Labitur ripa (Jove non probante) uxorius amnis. 20

CARMINUM LIB. 1. 2.	87
Audiet cives acuisse ferrum,
Quo graves Persæ melius perirent ;
Audiet pugnas, vitio parentum
Rara juventus.
Quem vocet Divûm populus ruentis	25
Imperî rebus? prece qua fatigent
Virgines sanctæ minus audientem
Carmina Vestam?
Cui dabit partes scelus expiandi
Jupiter? tandem venias, precamur,	30
Nube candentes humeros amictus
Augur Apollo:
Sive tu mavis, Erycina ridens,
Quam Jocus circumvolat, et Cupido:
Sive neglectum genus et nepotes	35
Respicis auctor,
Heu nimis longo satiate ludo;
Quem juvat clamor, galeæque leves,
Acer et Marsi peditis cruentum
Vultus in hostem.	40
Sive mutata juvenem figura
Ales in terris imitaris, almæ
Filius Maiæ, patiens vocari
Cæsaris ultor:
Serus in cœlum redeas, diuque	45
Lætus intersis populo Quirini:

50

Ales in terris imitaris, almæ Filius Maiæ, patiens vocari Cæsaris ultor: Serus in cœlum redeas, diuque Lætus intersis populo Quirini; Neve te nostris vitiis iniquum

Ocior aura Tollat: Hic magnos potius triumphos, Hic ames dici Pater atque Princeps: Neu sinas Medos equitare inultos, Te duce, Cæsar.

ODE III. (METRUM XV.)

AD NAVEM QUA VEHEBATUR VIRGILIUS ATHENAS

Sic te, diva potens Cypri,
Sic fratres Helenæ, lucida sidera,
Ventorumque regat pater,
Obstrictis aliis, præter Iapyga;
Navis, quæ tibi creditum	5
Debes Virgilium, finibus Atticis
Reddas incolumem, precor,
Et serves animæ dimidium meæ.
Illi robur et æs triplex
Circa pectus erat, qui fragilem truci	10
Commisit pelago ratem
Primus, nec timuit præcipitem Africum
Decertantem Aquilonibus,
Nec tristes Hyadas, nec rabiem Noti;
Quo non arbiter Adriæ	15
Major, tollere seu ponere vult freta.
Quem mortis timuit gradum,
Qui siccis oculis monstra natantia,
Qui vidit mare turbidum, et
Infames scopulos, Acroceraunia?	20
Nequicquam Deus abscidit
Prudens Oceano dissociabili
Terras, si tamen impiæ
Non tangenda rates transiliunt vada.
Audax omnia perpeti	$2\tilde{s}$
Gens humana ruit per vetitum nefas.
Audax Iapeti genus
Ignem fraude mala gentibus intulit:
Post ignem ætheria domo
Subductum, macies et nova febrium	30
Terris incubuit cohors;

Semotique prius tarda necessitas
Leti corripuit gradum.
Expertus vacuum Dædalus aera
Pennis non homini datis:	35
Perrupit Acheronta Herculeus labor.
Nil mortalibus arduum est:
Cœlum ipsum petimus stultitia; neque
Per nostrum patimur scelus
Iracunda Jovem ponere fulmina.	40

ODE IV. (METRUM VIII.)

AD SESTIUM.

Solvitur acris hiems grata vice veris et Favonî Trahuntque siccas machinæ carinas: Ac neque jam stabulis gaudet pecus, aut arator igni; Nec prata canis albicant pruinis. Jam Cytherea choros ducit Venus, imminente Luna: 5 Junetæque Nymphis Gratiæ decentes Alterno terram quatiunt pede; dum graves Cyclopum Vulcanus ardens urit officinas. Nunc decet aut viridi nitidum caput impedire myrto, Aut flore, terræ quem ferunt solutæ. Nunc et in umbrosis Fauno decet immolare lucis, Sen poscat agna, sive malit hædo. Pallida mors æquo pulsat pede pauperum tabernas, Regumque turres. O beate Sesti, Vitæ summa brevis spem nos vetat inchoarc longam, 15 Jam te premet nox, fabulæque Manes, Et domus exilis Plutonia; quo simul meâris, Nec regna vini sortiere talis; Nec tenerum Lycidan mirabere, quo calet juventus Nunc omnis, et mox virgines tepebunt.

ODE V. (METRUM XVII.)

AD PYRRHAM.

Quis multa gracilis te puer in rosa Perfusus liquidis urguet odoribus Grato, Pyrrha, sub antro? Cui flavam religas comam Simplex munditiis? Heu quoties fidem 5 Mutatosque deos flebit, et aspera Nigris æquora ventis Emirabitur insolens. Qui nunc te fruitur credulus aurea: Qui semper vacuam, semper amabilem 10 Sperat, nescius auræ Fallacis! Miseri quibus Intentata nites. Me tabula sacer Votiva paries indicat uvida Suspendisse potenti 15 Vestimenta maris Deo.

ODE VI. (METRUM XVI.)

AD AGRIPPAM.

Scriberis Vario fortis, et hostium
Victor, Mæonii carminis aliti,
Quam rem cunque ferox navibus aut equis
Miles te duce gesserit.
Nos, Agrippa, neque hæc dicere, nec gravem
Pelidæ stomachum, cedere nescii,
Nec cursus duplicis per mare Ulyssei,
Nec sævam Pelopis domum,
Conamur, tenues grandia ; dum pudor,
Imbellisque lyræ Musa potens vetat
Laudes egregii Cæsaris et tuas
Culpa deterere ingen.

CARMINUM LIB. 1. 7.	91
Quis Martem tunica tectum adamantina
Digne scripscrit? aut pulvere Troico
Nigrum Merionen? aut ope Palladis	15
Tydiden superis parem?
Nos convivia, nos prælia virginum,
Strictis in juvenes unguibus acrium,
Cantamus, vacui, sive quid urimur,
Non præter solitum leves.	20
VII. (METRUM III.)
AD MUNATIUM PLANCUM.
AAUDABUNT alii claram Rhodon, aut Mytilenen,
Aut Ephesum, bimarisve Corinthi
Iœnia, vel Baccho Thebas vel Apolline Delphos
Insignes, aut Thessala Tempe.
Sunt quibus unum opus est, intactæ Palladis urbem	5
Carmine perpetuo celebrare, ct
Indique decerptam fronti præponere olivam:
Plurimus in Junonis honorem
Aptum dicit equis Argos, ditesque Mycenas.
Me neque tam patiens Lacedæmon,	10
Nec tam Larissæ percussit campus opimæ,
Quam domus Albuneæ resonantis,
Et præceps Anio, et Tiburni lucus, et uda
Mobilibus pomaria rivis.
Albus ut obscuro deterget nubila cœlo	15
Sæpe Notus, neque parturit imbres
Perpetuos; sie tu sapiens finire memento
Tristitiam vitæque labores
Molli, Plance, mero; seu te fulgentia signis
Castra tenent, seu densa tenebit	20
Tiburis umbra tui. Teucer Salamina patremque
Cum fugeret, tamen uda Lyæo

Tempora populea fertur vinxisse corona, Sic tristes affatus amicos;

Quo nos cunque feret melior fortuna parente, Ibimus, O socii comitesque, Nil desperandum Teucro duce, et auspice Teucro: Certus enim promisit Apollo	25
Ambiguam tellure nova Salamina futuram.
O fortes, pejoraque passi	30
Mecum sæpe viri, nunc vino pellite curas:
Cras ingens iterabimus æquor.
ODE VIII. (METRUM X.)
AD LYDIAM.
Lydia dic, per omnes
Te Deos oro, Sybarim cur properes amando
Perdere; cur apricum
Oderit campum patiens pulveris atque solis.
Cur neque militaris	5
Inter æquales equitat, Gallica nec lupatis
Temperat ora frænis?
Cur timet flavum Tiberim tangere? cur olivum
Sanguine viperino
Cautius vitat? neque jam livida gestat armis	10
Brachia, sæpe disco,
Sæpe trans finem jaculo nobilis expedito?
Quid latet, ut marinæ
Filium dicunt Thetidis sub lacrymosa Trojæ
Funera, ne virilis	15
Cultus in cædem et Lycias proriperet catervas?

ODE IX. (METRUM XIX.)

AD THALIARCHUM.

Vides ut alta stet nive candidum Soracte, nec jam sustineant onus Sylvæ laborantes, geluque Flumina constiterint acuto?

CARMINUM LIB. I. 10.	93
Dissolve frigus, ligna super foco Large reponens; atque benignius Deprome quadrimum Sabina, O Thaliarche, merum diota.	5
Permitte Divis cætera; qui simul Stravere ventos æquore fervido Depræliantes, nec cupressi, Nec veteres agitantur orni. Quid sit futurum cras, fuge quærere; et	10
Quem sors dierum cunque dabit, lucro Adpone; nec dulces amores Sperne puer, neque tu choreas, Donec virenti canities abest Morosa. Nunc et campus, et areæ,	15
Lenesque sub noctem susurri Composita repetantur hora: Nunc et latentis proditor intimo Gratus puellæ risus ab angulo, Pignusque dereptum lacertis Aut digito male pertinaci.	20
ODE X. (M. XVIII.) AD MERCURIUM. MERCURI, facunde, nepos Atlantis, Qui feros cultus hominum recentum Voce formâsti catus, et decoræ More palæstræ:
Te canam, magni Jovis et Deorum Nuntium, curvæque lyræ parentem; Callidum quicquid placuit, jocoso Condere furto.	5
Te boves olim nisi reddidisses Per dolum amotas, puerum minaci Voce dum terret, viduus pharetra Risit Apollo.	10

Quin et Atridas, duce te, superbos Ilio dives Priamus relicto, Thessalosque ignes et iniqua Troix Castra fefellit. Tu pias lætis animas reponis

Sedibus, virgaque levem coerces Aurea turbam, superis Deorum

Gratus et imis.

20

15

ODE XI. (METRUM XIII.)

AD LEUCONOEN.

Tu ne quæsicris, scire nefas, quem mihi, quem tibi Finem Dii dederint, Leuconoe; nec Babylonios Tentâris numeros. Ut melius quiequid erit pati, Seu plures hiemes, seu tribuit Jupiter ultimam, Quæ nunc oppositis debilitat pumicibus mare Tyrrhenum. Sapias, vina liques, et spatio brevi Spem longam reseces: dum loquimur, fugerit invida Ætas: carpe diem, quam minimum credula postero.

ODE XII. (M. XVIII.)

AD AUGUSTUM.

QUEM virum aut heroa lyra vel aeri Tibia sumis celebrare, Clio? Quem Deum? cujus recinet jocosa Nomen imago, Aut in umbrosis Heliconis oris, Aut super Pindo, gelidove in Hæmo? Unde vocalem temere insecutæ

Orphea silvæ, Arte materna rapidos morantem Fluminum lapsus celeresque ventos,

Blandum et auritas fidibus canoris

Ducere quereus.

5

5

10

CARMINUM LIB. 1. 12.	95
Quid prius dicam solitis Parentis
Laudibus? qui res hominum ac Deorum,
Qui mare et terras, variisque mundum	15
Temperat horis:
Unde nil majus generatur ipso,
Nec viget quidquam simile, aut secundum:
Proximos illi tamen occupavit
Pallas honores.	20
Prœliis audax, neque te silebo,
Liber, et sævis inimica virgo
Beluis; nec te metuende certa
Phœbe sagitta.
Dicam et Alciden; puerosque Ledæ,	25
Hunc equis, illum superare pugnis
Nobilem; quorum simul alba nautis
Stella refulsit,
Defluit saxis agitatus humor;
Concidunt venti, fugiuntque nubes,	30
Et minax (quod sic voluere) ponto
Unda recumbit.
Romulum post hos prius, an quietum
Pompilî regnum memorem, an superbos
Tarquinî fasces, dubito, an Catonis	35
Nobile letum.
Regulum, et Scauros, animæque magnæ
Prodigum, Pæno superante, Paulum,
Gratus insigni referam Camena,
Fabriciumque.	40
Hunc, et incomtis Curium capillis
Utilem bello tulit, et Camillum
Sæva paupertas, et avitus apto
Cum lare fundus.
Crescit, occulto velut arbor ævo,	45
Fama Marcelli: micat inter omnes
Julium sidus, velut inter ignes
Luna minores.

Gentis humanæ pater atque custos, Orte Saturno, tibi cura magni		50
Cæsaris fatis data: tu secundo
Cæsare regnes.
Ille, seu Parthos Latio imminentes
Egerit justo domitos triumpho,
Sive subjectos Orientis oræ		55
Seras et Indos,
Te minor latum reget æquus orbem:
Tu gravi curru quaties Olympum;	•
Tu parum castis inimica mittes
Fulmina lucis.		60

ODE XIII. (M. XV.)

AD LYDIAM.

Cum tu, Lydia, Telephi
Cervicem roseam, cerea Telephi
Laudas brachia, Væ! meum
Fervens difficili bile tumet jecur.
Tunc nec mens mihi, nec color	5
Certa sede manet; humor et in genas
Furtim labitur, arguens
Quam lentis penitus macerer ignibus.
Uror, seu tibi candidos
Turpârunt humeros immodicæ mero	10
Rixæ; sive puer furens
Impressit memorem dente labris notam.
Non, si me satis audias,
Speres perpetuum, dulcia barbare
Lædentem oscula, quæ Venus	15
Quinta parte sui nectaris imbuit.

CARMINUM LIB. 1, 14, 15.	97
Felices ter et amplius
Quos irrupta tenet copula, nec malis
Divulsus querimoniis
Suprema citius solvet amor die.	20
ODE XIV. (M. XVII.)
AD REMPUBLICAM.
O Navis, referent in mare te novi
Fluctus? O quid agis? fortiter occupa
Portum: nonne vides, ut
Nudum remigio latus,
Et malus celeri saucius Africo,	5
Antennæque gemant, ac sine funibus
Vix durare carinæ
Possint imperiosius
Æquor? non tibi sunt integra lintea,
Non Dii, quos iterum pressa voces malo.	10
Quamvis Pontica pinus,
Silvæ filia nobilis,
Jactes et genus et nomen inutile;
Nil pictis timidus navita puppibus
Fidit: tu, nisi ventis	15
Debes ludibrium, cave.
Nuper solicitum quæ mihi tædium,

ODE XV. (M. XVI.)

NEREI VATICINIUM DE EXCIDIO TROJE.

Pastor cum traheret per freta navibus Idais Helenam perfidus hospitam,

Nunc desiderium curaque non levis,

Vites æquora Cycladas.

Interfusa nitentes

20

Ingrato celeres obruit otio
Ventos, ut caneret fera
Nereus fata. Mala ducis avi domum,	5
Quam multo repetet Græcia milite,
Conjurata tuas rumpere nuptias,
Et regnum Priami vetus.
Eheu quantus equis, quantus adest viris
Sudor! quanta moves funera Dardanæ	10
Genti! jam galeam Pallas et ægida
Currusque et rabiem parat.
Nequicquam, Veneris præsidio ferox,
Pectes cæsariem, grataque fæminis
Imbelli cithara carmina divides:	15
Nequicquam thalamo graves
Hastas et calami spicula Cnossii
Vitabis, strepitumque, et celerem sequi
Ajacem. Tamen hen! serus adulteros
Crines pulvere collines.	20
Non Laertiaden, exitium tuæ
Gentis, non Pylium Nestora respicis?
Urguent impavidi te Salaminius
Teucer, te Sthenelus sciens
Pugnæ, sive opus est imperitare equis,	25
Non auriga piger. Merionen quoque
Nosces: ecce furit te reperire atrox
Tydides, melior patre:
Quem tu, cervus uti vallis in altera
Visum parte lupum graminis immemor,	30
Sublimi fugies mollis anhelitu,
Non hoc pollicitus tuæ.
Iracunda diem proferet Ilio
Matronisque Phrygum classis Achillei.
Post certas hyemes uret Achaicus	35
Ignis Pergameas domos.

ODE XVI. (M. X1X.)

PALINODIA AD TYNDARIDEM.

O! MATRE pulchra filia pulchrior,
Quem criminosis cunque voles modum
Pones Iambis; sive flamma,
Sive mari libet Hadriano.
Non Dindymene, non adytis quatit	5
Mentem sacerdotum incola Pythius,
Non Liber æque; non acuta
Sic geminant Corybantes æra,
Tristes ut iræ: quas neque Noricus
Deterret ensis, nec mare naufragum,	10
Nec sævus ignis, nec tremendo
Jupiter ipse ruens tumultu.
Fertur Prometheus addere principi
Limo coactus particulam undique
Desectam, et insani leonis	15
Vim stomacho apposuisse nostro.
Iræ Thyesten exitio gravi
Stravere, et altis urbibus ultimæ
Stetere causæ, cur perirent
Funditus, imprimeretque muris	20
Hostile aratrum exercitus insolens.
Compesce mentem; me quoque pectoris
Tentavit in dulci juventa
Fervor, et in celeres Iambos
Misit furentem: nunc ego mitibus	25
Mutare quæro tristia, dum mihi
Fias recantatis amica
Opprobriis, animumque reddas.

ODE XVII. (M. XIX.)

AD TYNDARIDEM.

Velox amænum sæpe Lucretilem
Mutat Lycæo Faunus, et igneam
Defendit æstatem capellis
Usque meis pluviosque ventos.
Impune tutum per nemus arbutos	5
Quærunt latentes et thyma deviæ
Olentis uxores mariti;
Nec virides metuunt colubras,
Nec martiales hæduleæ lupos;
Utcunque dulci, Tyndari, fistula	10
Valles, et Usticæ cubantis
Levia personuere saxa.
Dii me tuentur; Diis pietas mea
Et musa cordi est. Hic tibi copia
Manabit ad plenum benigno	15
Ruris honorum opulenta cornu.
Hic in reducta valle caniculæ
Vitabis æstus, et fide Teïa
Dices laborantes in uno
Penelopen vitreamque Circen.	20
Hic innocentis pocula Lesbii
Duces sub umbra; nec Semeleïus
Cum Marte confundet Thyoneus
Prœlia; nec metues protervum
Suspecta Cyrum, ne male dispari	25
Incontinentes injiciat manus,
Et scindat hærentem coronam
Crinibus, immeritamque vestem.

5

ODE XVIII. (M. XIII.)

AD VARUM.

Nullam, Vare, sacra vite prius severis arborem Circa mite solum Tiburis, et mœnia Catili. Siccis omnia nam dura Deus proposuit; neque Mordaces aliter diffugiunt solicitudines. Quis post vina gravem militiam aut pauperiem crepat? 5 Quis non te potius, Bacche pater, teque, decens Venus? At ne quis modici transiliat munera Liberi, Centaurea monet cum Lapithis rixa super mero Debellata: monet Sithoniis non levis Evius: Cum fas atque nefas exiguo fine libidinum 10 Discernunt avidi. Non ego te, candide Bassareu, Invitum quatiam; nec variis obsita frondibus Sub divum rapiam: sæva tene cum Berecyntio Cornu tympana, quæ subsequitur cæcus Amer sui, Et tollens vacuum plus nimio Gloria verticem, 15 Arcanique Fides prodiga, perlucidior vitro.

ODE XIX. (M. XV.)

DE GLYCERA.

MATER sæva Cupidinum,

Thebanæque jubet me Semeles puer,

Et lasciva Licentia,

Finitis animum reddere amoribus.

Urit me Glyceræ nitor

Splendentis Pario marmore purius:

Urit grata protervitas,

Et vultus nimium lubricus aspici.

In me tota ruens Venus

Cyprum deseruit; nec patitur Scythas 10

Et versis animosum equis

Parthum dicere, nec quæ nihil attinent. Hic vivum mihi cespitem, hic Verbenas, pucri, ponite, turaque Bimi cum patera meri: Mactata veniet lenior hostia.

15

ODE XX. (M. XVIII.)

AD MECENATEM.

VILE potabis modicis Sabinum
Cantharis, Græca quod ego ipse testa
Conditum levi, datus in theatro
Cum tibi plausus,
Clare Mæcenas eques; ut paterni
Fluminis ripæ, simul et jocosa
Redderet laudes tibi Vaticani
Montis imago.
Cæcubum, et prælo domitam Caleno
Tu bibes uvam: mea nec Falernæ
10
Temperant vites, neque Formiani
Pocula colles.

ODE XXI. (M. XVII.)

IN DIANAM ET APOLLINEM.

Dianam teneræ dicite virgines,
Intonsum pueri dicite Cynthium,
Latonamque supremo
Dilectam penitus Jovi.

Vos lætam fluviis et nemorum coma,
Quæcunque aut gelido prominet Algido,
Nigris aut Erymanthi
Silvis, aut viridis Cragi:
Vos Tempe totidem tollite laudibus;
Natalemque, mares, Delon Appollinis,

Insignemque pharetra
Fraternaque humerum lyra.
Hic bellum lacrymosum, hic miscram famem
Pestemque a populo et principe Cæsare in Persas atque Britannos
Vestra motus aget prece.

15

ODE XXII. (m. xviii.)

AD ARISTIUM FUSCUM.

Integer vitæ scelerisque purus Non eget Mauri jaculis neque arcu Nec venenatis gravida sagittis, Fusce, pharetra; Sive per Syrtes iter æstuosas, 5 Sive facturus per inhospitalem Caucasum, vel quæ loca fabulosus Lambit Hydaspes. Namque me silva lupus in Sabina, Dum meam canto Lalagen, et ultra 10 Terminum curis vagor expeditus, Fugit inermem: Qualc portentum neque militaris Daunias latis alit esculetis. Nec Jubæ tellus generat, leonum 15 Arida nutrix. Pone me pigris ubi nulla campis Arbor æstiva recreatur aura, Quod latus mundi nebulæ malusque Jupiter urguet; 20 Pone sub curru nimium propinqui Solis, in terra domibus negata; Dulce ridentem Lalagen amabo, Dulce loquentem.

ODE XXIII. (M. XVII.)

AD CHLOEN.

Vitas hinnuleo me similis, Chloe,
Quaerenti pavidam montibus aviis

Matrem, non sine vano
Aurarum et silüæ metu.

Nam seu mobilibus vepris inhorruit
5
Ad ventum foliis, seu virides rubum
Dimovere lacertæ,
Et corde et genibus tremit.

Atqui non ego te, tigris ut aspera
Gætulusve leo, frangere persequor:
Tandem desine matrem
Tempestiva sequi viro.

ODE XXIV. (M. XVI.)

AD VIRGILIUM.

Quis desiderio sit pudor aut modus Tam cari capitis? Præcipe lugubres Cantus, Melpomene, cui liquidam pater Vocem cum cithara dedit. Ergo Quinctilium perpetuus sopor 5 Urguet? cui Pudor, et Justitiæ soror Incorrupta Fides, nudaque Veritas, Quando ullum invenient parem? Multis ille bonis flebilis occidit : 10 Nulli flebilior quam tibi, Virgili. Tu frustra pius, heu! non ita creditum Poscis Quinctilium Deos. Quod si Threïcio blandius Orpheo Auditam moderere arboribus fidem : 15 Non vanæ redeat sanguis imagini, Quam virga semel horrida.

CARM	INHM	LIB. I.	-25.	26

Non lenis precibus fata recludere, Nigro compulerit Mercurius gregi. Durum: sed levius fit patientia, Quicquid corrigere est nefas.

20

ODE XXV. (M. XVIII.)

AD LYDIAM.

Parcius junctas quatiunt fenestras Ictibus crebris juvenes protervi, Nec tibi somnos adimunt; amatque Janua limen,

Quæ prius multum facilis movebat Cardines: audis minus et minus iam. Me tuo longas percunte noctes,

Lydia, dormis? Invicem mœchos anus arrogantes Flebis in solo levis angiportu, Thracio bacchante magis sub interlunia vento:

Cum tibi flagrans amor, et libido Quæ solet matres furiare equorum, Sæviet circa jeeur ulcerosum;

Non sine questu, Læta quod pubes hedera virente Gaudeat pulla magis atque myrto; Aridas frondes Hyemis sodali Dedicet Euro.

ODE XXVI. (M. XIX.)

DE ÆLIO LAMIA.

Musis amicus, tristitiam et metus Tradam protervis in mare Creticum Portare ventis; queis sub Arcto Rex gelidæ metuatur oræ,

105

5

10

15

20

Quid Tiridatem terreat, unice 5
Securus. O quæ fontibus integris
Gaudes, apricos necte flores,
Necte meo Lamiæ coronam,
Pimpleï dulcis: nil sine te mei
Possunt honores: hunc fidibus novis,
Hunc Lesbio sacrare plectro
Teque tuasque decet sorores.

ODE XXVII. (M. X1X.)

AD SODALES. NATIS in usum lætitiæ scyphis Pugnare Thracum est: tollite barbarum Morem, verecundumque Bacchum Sanguineis prohibete rixis. Vino et lucernis Medus acinaces 5 Immane quantum discrepat! Impium Lenite clamorem, sodales, Et cubito remanete presso. Vultis severi me quoque sumere Partem Falerni? dicat Opuntiæ 10 Frater Megillæ, quo beatus Vulnere, qua pereat sagitta. Cessat voluntas? non alia bibam Mercede. Quæ te cunque domat Venus, Non erubescendis adurit 15 Ignibus; ingenuoque semper Amore peccas: quicquid habes, age, Depone tutis auribus. Ah! miser, Quanta laborabas Charybdi, Digue puer meliore flamma! 20 Quæ saga, quis te solvere Thessalis Magus venenis, quis poterit Deus? Vix illigatum te triformi Pegasus expedict Chimæra.

ODE XXVIII. (M. III.)

ARCHYTAS.

TE maris et terræ numeroque carentis arenæ
Mensorem cohibent, Archyta,
Pulveris exigui prope littus parva Matinum
Munera: nec quidquam tibi prodest
Aerias tentâsse domos, animoque rotundum	5
Percurrisse polum, morituro.
Occidit et Pelopis genitor, conviva Deorum;
Tithonusque remotus in auras,
Et Jovis arcanis Minos admissus: habentque
Tartara Panthoiden, iterum Orco	10
Demissum; quamvis clypeo Trojana refixo
Tempora testatus, nihil ultra
Nervos atque cutem morti concesserat atræ;
Judice te, non sordidus auctor
Naturæ verique. Sed omnes una manet nox,	15
Et calcanda semel via leti.
Dant alios Furiæ torvo spectacula Marti:
Exitio est avidum mare nautis.
Mista senum ac juvenum densentur funcra: nullum
Sæva caput Proserpina fugit.	20
Me quoque devexi rapidus comes Orionis
Illyricis Notus obruit undis.
At tu nauta, vagæ ne parce malignus arenæ
Ossibus et capiti inhumato
Particulam dare: sic, quodcunque minabitur Eurus	25
Fluctibus Hesperiis, Venusinæ
Plectantur silvæ, te sospite; multaque merces,
Unde potest, tibi defluat æquo
Ab Jove, Neptunoque sacri custode Tarenti.
Negligis immeritis nocituram	30
Postmodo te natis fraudem committere? Fors et Debita jura vicesque superbæ

35

Te mancant ipsum: precibus non linquar inultis;
Teque piacula nulla resolvent.
Quanquam festinas, non est mora longa, licebit
Injecto ter pulvere curras.

ODE XXIX. (M. XIX.)

AD ICCIUM.

Icci, beatis nunc Arabum invides
Gazis; et aerem militiam paras
Non ante devictis Sabææ
Regibus, horribilique Medo
Nectis catenas. Quæ tibi virginum	5
Sponso necato barbara serviet?
Puer quis ex aula capillis
Ad cyathum statuetur unetis,
Doetus sagittas tendere Sericas
Arcu paterno? quis neget arduis	10
Pronos relabi posse rivos
Montibus, et Tiberim reverti;
Cum tu coemtos undique nobiles
Libros Panætî, Socraticam et domum,
Mutare loricis Iberis,	15
Pollicitus meliora, tendis?

ODE XXX. (M. XVIII.)

AD VENEREM.

O Venus, regina Cnidi Paphique,
Sperne dilectam Cypron, et vocantis
Ture te multo Glyceræ decoram
Transfer in ædem.
Fervidus tecum puer, et solutis
Gratiæ zonis, properentque Nymphæ,

Et parum comis sine te Juventas, Mercuriusque.

ODE XXXI. (M. XIX.)

AD APOLLINEM.

Quid dedicatum poscit Apollinem Vates? quid orat, de patera novum Fundens liquorem? non opimas Sardiniæ segetes feracis; Non æstuosæ grata Calabriæ 5 Armenta; non aurum, aut ebur Indicum; Non rura quæ Liris quieta Mordet aqua taciturnus amnis. Premant Calena falce, quibus dedit Fortuna, vitem : dives et aureis 10 Mercator exsiccet culullis Vina Syra reparata merce, Diis carus ipsis; quippe ter et quater Anno revisens æquor Atlanticum Impune. Me pascunt olivæ, 15 Me cichorea levesque malvæ. Frui paratis et valido mihi Latoe dones, ac, precor, integra Cum mente; nec turpem senectam Degere, nec cithara carentem. 20

ODE XXXII. (M. XVIII.)

AD LYRAM.

POSCIMUR. Siquid vacui sub umbra Lusimus tecum, quod et hunc in annum Vivat et plures, age, dic Latinum,

Barbite, carmen,
Lesbio primum modulate civi;	5
Qui ferox bello, tamen inter arma,
Sive jactatam religârat udo
Littore navim,
Liberum et Musas, Veneremque et illi
Semper hærentem Puerum canebat,	10
Et Lycum nigris oculis nigroque
Crine decorum.
O decus Phœbi, et dapibus supremi
Grata testudo Jovis, O laborum
Dulce lenimen, mihi cunque salve	15
Rite vocanti.

ODE XXXIII. (M. XVI.)

AD ALBIUM TIBULLUM.

Albi, ne doleas plus nimio memor
Immitis Glyceræ; neu miserabiles
Decantes elegos, cur tibi junior
Læsa præniteat fide.
Insignem tenui fronte Lycorida	5
Cyri torret amor; Cyrus in asperam
Declinat Pholoen: sed prius Appulis
Jungentur capreæ lupis,
Quam turpi Pholoe peccet adultero.
Sic visum Veneri; cui placet impares	10
Formas atque animos sub juga ahenea
Sævo mittere cum joco.
Ipsum me melior cum peteret Venus,
Grata detinuit compede Myrtale
Libertina, fretis acrior Adriæ	15
Curvantis Calabros sinus.

ODE XXXIV. (M. XIX.)

Parcus Deorum cultor et infrequens, Insanientis dum sapientiæ Consultus erro, nunc retrorsum Vela dare, atque iterare cursus Cogor relictos: namque Diespiter, * 5 Igni corusco nubila dividens Plerumque, per purum tonantes Egit equos volucremque currum; Quo bruta tellus, et vaga flumina, Quo Styx, et invisi horrida Tænari 10 Scdes, Atlanteusque finis Concutitur. Valet ima summis Mutare et insignem attenuat Deus. Obscura promens: hinc apicem rapax Fortuna cum stridore acuto 15 Sustulit, hic posuisse gaudet.

ODE XXXV. (M. XIX.)

AD FORTUNAM.

O Diva gratum quæ regis Antium,
Præsens vel imo tollere de gradu
Mortale corpus, vel superbos
Vertere funeribus triumphos:
Te pauper ambit sollicita prece
Ruris colonus; te dominam æquoris,
Quicunque Bithyna lacessit
Carpathium pelagus carina.
Te Dacus asper, te profugi Scythæ,
Urbesque gentesque, et Latium ferox,
Regumque matres barbarorum, et
Purpurei metuunt tyranni,

Injurioso ne pede proruas
Stantem columnam; neu populus frequens
Ad arma cessantes, ad arma	15
Concitet, imperiumque frangat.
Te semper anteit sæva Necessitas,
Clavos trabales et cuneos manu
Gestans ahena; nec severus
Uncus abest, liquidumque plumbum.	20
Te Spes et albo rara Fides colit
Velata panno; nec comitem abnegat,
Utcunque mutata potentes
Veste domos inimica linguis.
At vulgus infidum et meretrix retro	25
Perjura cedit: diffugiunt cadis
Cum fæce siccatis amici,
Ferre jugum pariter dolosi.
Serves iturum Cæsarem in ultimos
Orbis Britannos, et juvenum recens	30
Examen Eois timendum
Partibus, Oceanoque rubro.
Eheu! cicatricum et sceleris pudet
Fratrumque: quid nos dura refugimus
Ætas? quid intactum nefasti	35
Liquimus? unde manum juventus
Metu Deorum continuit? quibus
Pepercit aris? O utinam nova Incude diffingas retusum in
Massagetas Arabasque ferrum.	40

ODE XXXVI. (M. XV.)

DE PLOTIO NUMIDA.

Et ture et fidibus juvat Placare, et vituli sanguine debito

CARMINUM LIB., I. 37.	113
Custodes Numidae Deos;
Qui nune Hesperia sospes ab ultima
Caris multa sodalibus,	5
Nulli plura tamen dividit oscula
Quam dulei Lamiæ, memor
Actæ non alio rege puertiæ,
Mutatæque simul togæ.
Cressa ne careat pulchra dies nota;	10
Neu promtæ modus amphoræ,
Neu morem in Salium sit requies pedum;
Neu multi Damalis meri
Bassum Threicia vincat amystide;
Neu desint cpulis rosæ,	15
Neu vivax apium, neu breve lilium.
Omnes in Damalin putres
Deponent oculos; nec Damalis novo
Divelletur adultero,
Lascivis hederis ambitiosior.	20
ODE XXXVII. (M. XIX.)
AD SODALES.
Nunc est bibendum, nunc pede libero
Pulsanda tellus; nunc Saliaribus
Ornare pulvinar Deorum
Tempus erat dapibus, sodales.
Antehac nefas depromere Cæcubum	5
Cellis avitis, dum Capitolio
Regina dementes ruinas,
Funus et imperio parabat,
Contaminato eum grege turpium
Morbo virorum, quidlibet impotens	10
Sperare, fortunaque dulci
Ebria: sed minuit furorem

Vix una sospes navis ab ignibus;
Mentemque lymphatam Mareotico
Redegit in veros timores	1.5
Cæsar, ab Italia volantem
Remis adurguens, (accipiter velut
Molles columbas, aut leporem citus
Venator in campis nivalis
Æmoniæ,) daret ut catenis	20
Fatale monstrum, quæ generosius
Perire quærens, nec muliebriter
Expavit ensem, nec latentes
Classe cita reparavit oras:
Ausa et jacentem visere regiam	25
Vultu sereno, fortis et asperas
Tractare serpentes, ut atrum
Corpore combiberet venenum,
Deliberata morte ferocior:
Sævis Liburnis scilicet invidens,	30
Privata deduci superbo
Non humilis mulier triumpho.

ODE XXXVIII. (M. XVIII.)

AD MINISTRUM.

Persicos odi, puer, apparatus:
Displicent nexæ philyra coronæ:
Mitte sectari, rosa quo locorum
Sera moretur.
Simplici myrto nihil adlabores,
Sedulus curæ: neque te ministrum
Dedecet myrtus, neque me sub arcta
Vite bibentem.

Q. HORATII FLACCI C A R M I N U M

LIBER SECUNDUS.

ODE I. (M. XIX.)

AD C. ASINIUM POLLIONEM.

Motum ex Metello consule civicum,
Bellique causas, et vitia et modos,
Ludumque Fortunæ, gravesque
Principum amicitias, et arma
Nondum expiatis uncta cruoribus,	5
Periculosæ plenum opus aleæ,
Tractas; et incedis per ignes
Suppositos cineri doloso.
Paulum severæ Musa Tragædiæ
Desit theatris: mox, ubi publicas	10
Res ordinâris, grande munus
Cecropio repetes cothurno,
Insigne mœstis præsidium reis,
Et consulenti, Pollio, curiæ,
Cui laurus æternos honores	15
Dalmatico peperit triumpho.
Jam nunc minaci murmure cornuum
Perstringis aures, jam litui strepunt;
Jam fulgor armorum fugaces
Terret equos equitumque vultus.	20
Videre magnos jam videor duces
Non indecoro pulvere sordidos,
Et cuncta terrarum subacta,
Præter atrocem animum Catonis.

Juno, et Deorum quisquis amicior	25
Afris, inulta cesserat impotens
Tellure, victorum nepotes
Rettulit inferias Jugurthæ.
Quis non Latino sanguine pinguior
Campus sepulchris impia prœlia	30
Testatur, auditumque Medis
Hesperiæ sonitum ruinæ?
Qui gurges, aut quæ flumina lugubris
Ignara belli? quod mare Dauniæ
Non decoloravere cædes?	35
Quæ caret ora cruore nostro?
Sed ne relictis Musa procax jocis
Ceæ retractes munera næniæ;
Mecum Dionæo sub antro
Quære modos leviore plectro.	40
ODE II. (m. xviii.)

AD C. SALLUSTIUM CRISPUM.

Nullus argento color est, -avaris Abditæ terris inimice lamnæ, Crispe Sallusti,-nisi temperato Splendeat usu. Vivet extento Proculeius ævo 5 Notus in fratres animi paterni: Illum aget penna metuente solvi Fama superstes. Latius regnes avidum domando 10 Spiritum, quam si Libyam remotis Gadibus jungas, et uterque Pœnus Serviat uni. Crescit indulgens sibi dirus hydrops; Nee sitim pellit, nisi causa morbi

CARMINUM LIB. II. 3.	117
Fugerit venis, et aquosus albo	15
Corpore languor.
Redditum Cyri solio Phraaten,
Dissidens plebi, numero beatorum
Eximit virtus; populumque falsis
Dedocet uti	20
Vocibus, regnum et diadema tutum
Deferens uni, propriamque laurum,
Quisquis ingentes oculo irretorto
Spectat acervos.
•
ODE III. (M. XIX.)
AD Q. DELLIUM.
ÆQUAM memento rebus in arduis
Servare mentem, non seeus in bonis
Ab insolenti temperatam
Lætitia, moriture Delli,
Seu mœstus omni tempore vixeris,	5
Seu te in remoto gramine per dies
Festos reclinatum beâris
Interiore nota Falerni.
Qua pinus ingens albaque populus
Umbram hospitalem consociare amant	10
Ramis, et obliquo laborat
Lympha fugax trepidare rivo;
Hue vina et unguenta et nimium breves
Flores amœnæ ferre jube rosæ,
Dum res et ætas et sororum	15
Fila trium patiuntur atra.
Cedes coemtis saltibus, et domo
Villaque, flavus quam Tiberis lavit:
Cedes; et exstructis in altum
Divitiis potietur læres.	20

Divesne prisco natus ab Inacho Nil interest, an pauper et infima De gente sub divo moreris, Victima nil miserantis Orci. Omnes eodem cogimur: omnium Versatur urna serius ocius Sors exitura, et nos in æternum Exsilium impositura cymbæ.

25

ODE IV. (M. XVIII.)

AD XANTHIAM PHOCEUM.

NE sit ancillæ tibi amor pudori, Xanthia Phoceu; prius insolentem Serva Briseis niveo colore

Movit Achillem: Movit Ajacem Telamone natum Forma captivæ dominum Tecmessæ: Arsit Atrides medio in triumpho

Virgine rapta;

Barbaræ postquam cecidere turmæ Thessalo victore, et ademtus Hector Tradidit fessis leviora tolli

Pergama Graiis.

Nescias an te generum beati Phyllidis flavæ decorent parentes: Regium certe genus, et penates

Mœret iniquos. Crede non illam tibi de scelesta Plebe dilectam; neque sic fidelem, Sic lucro aversam potuisse nasci Matre pudenda.

Brachia et vultum teretesque suras Integer laudo: fuge suspicari, Cujus octavum trepidavit ætas Claudere lustrum.

5

15

10

20

ODE V. (M. XIX.)

Nondum subacta ferre jugum valet Cervice, nondum munia comparis Æquare, nec tauri ruentis In Venerem tolerare pondus. Circa virentes est animus tuæ 5 Campos juvencæ, nunc fluviis gravem Solantis æstum, nunc in udo Ludere cum vitulis salicte Prægestientis: tolle cupidinem Immitis uvæ; jam tibi lividos 10 Distinguet autumnus racemos Purpureo varius colore. Jam te sequetur, (currit enim ferox Ætas; et illi, quos tibi dempserit. Apponet annos,) jam proterva 15 Fronte petet Lalage maritum; Dilecta quantum non Pholoe fugax. Non Chloris: albo sic humero nitens. Ut pura nocturno renidet Luna mari, Cnidiusve Gyges; 20 Quem si puellarum insereres choro, Mira sagaces falleret hospites Discrimen obscurum, solutis Crinibus, ambiguoque vultu.

ODE VI. (M. XVIII.)

AD SEPTIMIUM.

Septimi, Gades aditure mecum, et Cantabrum indoctum juga ferre nostra, et Barbaras Syrtes, ubi Maura semper Æstuat unda; Tibur Argeo positum colono

Sit meæ sedes utinam senectæ;
Sit modus lasso maris et viarum
Militiæque :
Unde si Parcæ prohibent iniquæ;
Dulce pellitis ovibus Galesi	10
Flumen et regnata petam Laconi
Rura Phalantho.
Ille terrarum milii præter omnes
Angulus ridet; ubi non Hymetto
Mella decedunt, viridique certat	15
Bacca Venafro :
Ver ubi longum, tepidasque præbet
Jupiter brumas, et amicus Aulon
Fertili Baccho minimum Falernis
Invidet uvis.	20
Ille te mecum locus et beatæ
Postulant arces; ibi tu calentem
Debita sparges lacrima favillam

ODE VII. (M. XIX.)

Vatis amici.

AD POMPEIUM VARUM.

O S.EPE mecum tempus in ultimum

Deducte Bruto militiæ duce,
Quis te redonavit Quiritem
Diis patriis, Italoque ccelo,
Pompei, meorum prime sodalium?

Cum quo morantem sæpe diem mero
Fregi, coronatus nitentes
Malobathro Syrio capillos.

Tecum Philippos et celerem fugam

Sensi, relicta non bene parmula,
Cum fracta virtus, et minaces
Turpe solum tetigere mento.

CARMINUM LIB. II. 8.

Sed me per hostes Mercurius celer
Denso paventem sustulit aere:
Te rursus in bellum resorbens	15
Unda fretis tulit æstuosis.
Ergo obligatam redde Jovi dapem,
Longaque fessum militia latus
Depone sub lauru mea; nec
Parce cadis tibi destinatis.	20
Oblivioso levia Massico
Ciboria exple; funde capacibus
Unguenta de conchis: quis udo
Deproperare apio coronas
Curatve myrto? quem Venus arbitrum	25
Dicet bibendi? non ego sanius
Bacchabor Edonis: recepto
Dulce mihi furere est amico.

ODE VIII. (M. XVIII.)

AD BARINEN.

Ulla si juris tibi pejerati
Pœna, Barine, nocuisset unquam,
Dente si nigro fieres, vel uno
Turpior ungui,
Crederem: sed tu, simul obligâsti	5
Perfidum votis caput, enitescis
Pulchrior multo, juvenumque prodis
Publica cura.
Expedit matris cineres opertos
Fallere, et toto taciturna noctis	10
Signa cum cœlo, gelidaque Divos
Morte carentes.
Ridet hoc, inquam, Venus ipsa; rident
Simplices Nymphee forus et Cunido

15
20
5

Manant in agros, aut mare Caspium
Vexant inæquales procellæ
Usque; nec Armeniis in oris,
Amice Valgi, stat glacies iners

Menses per omnes; aut Aquilonibus
Querceta Gargani laborant,
Et foliis viduantur orni.

Tu semper urgues flebilibus modis
Mysten ademtum; nec tibi Vespero
Surgente decedunt amores,
Nec rapidum fugiente solem.
At non ter ævo functus amabilem
Ploravit omnes Antilochum senex
Annos; nec impubem parentes
Troïlon, aut Phrygiæ sorores
Flevere semper. Desine mollium
Tandem guerderum; et petine page

Tandem querelarum; et potius nova Cantemus Augusti tropæa
Cæsaris, et rigidum Niphaten,
20

Medumque flumen gentibus additum Victis, minores volvere vortices, Intraque præscriptum Gelonos Exiguis equitare campis.

ODE X. (M. XVIII.)

AD LICINIUM.
Rectius vives, Licini, neque altum
Semper urguendo; neque, dum procellas
Cautus horreseis, nimium premendo
Littus iniquum.
Auream quisquis mediocritatem	5
Diligit, tutus caret obsoleti
Sordibus tecti, caret invidenda
Sobrius aula.
Sæpius ventis agitatur ingens
Pinus; et celsæ graviore casu	10
Decidunt turres; feriuntque summos
Fulgura montes.
Sperat infestis, metuit secundis
Alteram sortem bene præparatum
Pectus: informes hiemes reducit	15
Jupiter, idem
Summovet. Non, si male nunc, et olim
Sic erit: quondam cithara tacentem
Suscitat Musam, neque semper arcum
Tendit Apollo.	20
Rebus angustis animosus atque
Fortis appare; sapienter idem
Contrahes vento nimium secundo
Turgida vela.

ODE XI. (M. XIX.)

AD Q. HIRPINUM.

Quip bellicosus Cantaber et Scythes, Hirpine Quincti, cogitet, Adria Divisus objecto, remittas Quærere; nec trepides in usum Poscentis ævi pauca: fugit retro 5 Levis juventas et decor, arida Pellente lascivos amores Canitie facilemque somnum. Non semper idem floribus est honos Vernis, neque uno Luna rubens nitet 10 Vultu: quid æternis minorem Consiliis animum fatigas? Cur non sub alta vel platano vel hac Pinu jacentes sic temere, et rosa Canos odorati capillos, 15 Dum licet, Assyriaque nardo Potamus uncti? dissipat Evius Curas edaces: quis puer ocyus Restinguet ardentis Falerni Pocula prætereunte lympha? 20 Quis devium scortum eliciet domo Lyden? eburna, dic age, cum lyra Maturet, incomtam, Lacana More, comam religata nodo.

ODE XII. (M. XVI.)

AD MECENATEM.

Nolis longa feræ bella Numantiæ, Nec durum Annibalem, nec Siculum mare

Poeno purpureum sanguine, mollibus Aptari citharæ modis; Nec sævos Lapithas, et nimium mero 5 Hylæum, domitosque Herculea manu Telluris juvenes, unde periculum Fulgens contremuit domus Saturni veteris: Tuque pedestribus Dices historiis prœlia Cæsaris, 10 Mæcenas, melius, ductaque per vias Regum colla minantium. Me dulces dominæ Musa Licymniæ Cantus, me voluit dicere lucidum Fulgentes oculos, et bene mutuis 1.5 Fidum pectus amoribus: Quam nec ferre pedem dedecuit choris, Nec certare joco, nec dare brachia Ludentem nitidis virginibus, sacro Dianæ celebris die. 20 Num tu, quæ tenuit dives Achæmenes, Aut pinguis Phrygiæ Mygdonias opcs, Permutare velis crine Licymniæ. Plenas aut Arabum domos ? Dum flagrantia detorquet ad oscula 25 Cervicem, aut facili savitia negat Quæ poscente magis gaudeat cripi,

ODE XIH. (M. XIX.)

IN ARBOREM, CUJUS CASU IN AGRO SABINO PENE OPPRESSUS EST.

ILLE et nefasto te posuit die, Quicunque primum, et sacrilega manu Produxit, arbos, in nepotum Perniciem opprobriumque pagi.

Interdum rapere occupet.

Illum et parentis crediderim sui	5
Fregisse cervicem, et penetralia
Sparsisse nocturno cruore
Hospitis. Ille venena Colcha,
Et quicquid usquam concipitur nefas,
Tractavit, agro qui statuit meo	10
Te triste lignum, te caducum
In domini caput immerentis.
Quid quisque vitet, nunquam homini satis
Cautum est in horas: navita Bosporum
Pœnus perhorrescit, neque ultra	15
Cæca timet aliunde fata:
Miles sagittas et celerem fugam
Parthi; catenas Parthus et Italum
Robur: sed improvisa leti
Vis rapuit rapietque gentes.	20
Quam pene furvæ regna Proserpinæ,
Et judicantem vidimus Æacum,
Sedesque discretas piorum, et
Æoliis fidibus querentem
Sappho puellis de popularibus,	25
Et te sonantem plenius aureo
Alcæe plectro dura navis,
Dura fugæ mala, dura belli!
Utrumque sacro digna silentio
Mirantur umbræ dicere: sed magis	30
Pugnas et exactos tyrannos
Densum humeris bibit aure vulgus.
Quid mirum, ubi illis carminibus stupens
Demittit atras belua centiceps
Aures, et intorti capillis	35
Eumenidum recreantur angues?
Quin et Prometheus et Pelopis parens
Dulci laborem decipitur sono :
Nec curat Orion leones,
Aut timidos agitare lyneas.	40

ODE XIV. (M. XIX.)

AD POSTUMUM.

EHEU! fugaces, Postume, Postume,
Labuntur anni; nec pietas moram
Rugis et instanti senectæ
Afferet, indomitæque morti:
Non si trecenis, quotquot eunt dies,	5
Amice, places illacrimabilem
Plutona tauris; qui ter amplum
Geryonen Tityonque tristi
Compescit unda, scilicet omnibus,
Quicunque terræ munere vescimur,	10
Enaviganda, sive reges
Sive inopes erimus coloni.
Frustra cruento Marte carebimus,
Fractisque rauci fluctibus Adriæ;
Frustra per autumnos nocentem	15
Corporibus metuemus Austrum.
Visendus ater flumine languido
Cocytus errans, et Danai genus
Infame, damnatusque longi
Sisyphus Æolides laboris.	20
Linquenda tellus, et domus, et placens
Uxor; neque harum quas colis arborum
Te, præter invisas cupressos,
Ulla brevem dominum sequetur.
Absumet hæres Cæcuba dignior	25
Servata centum clavibus; et mero
Tinguet pavimentum superbis
Pontificum potiore coenis.

ODE XV. (M. XIX.)

Jam pauca aratro jugera regiæ Moles relinquent; undique latius Extenta visentur Lucrino Stagna lacu, platanusque cœlebs Evincet ulmos: tum violaria, et 5 Myrtus, et omnis copia narium, Spargent olivetis odorem, Fertilibus domino priori: Tum spissa ramis laurea fervidos Excludet ictus. Non ita Romuli 10 Præscriptum et intonsi Catonis Auspiciis, veterumque norma. Privatus illis census erat brevis. Commune magnum: nulla decempedis Metata privatis opacam 15 Porticus excipiebat Arcton; Nee fortuitum spernere cespitem Leges sinebant, oppida publico Sumtu jubentes et Deorum Templa novo decorare saxo. 20

ODE XVI. (M. XVIII.)

AD POMPEIUM GROSPHUM.

Otium Divos rogat in patente
Prensus Ægæo, simul atra nubes
Condidit Lunam, neque certa fulgent
Sidera nautis:
Otium bello furiosa Thrace,
Otium Medi pharetra decori,
Grosphe, non gemmis neque purpura venale, nee auro.

CARMINUM LIB. 11. 16.	129
Non enim gazæ, neque consularis
Summovet lictor miscros tumultus	10
Mentis, et curas laqueata circum
Tecta volantes.
Vivitur parvo bene, cui paternum
Splendet in mensa tenui salinum;
Nec leves somnos timor aut cupido	15
Sordidus aufert.
Quid brevi fortes jaculamur ævo
Multa? quid terras alio calentes
Sole mutamus? patriæ quis exsul
Se quoque fugit?	20
Scandit æratas vitiosa naves
Cura; nec turmas equitum relinquit,
Ocior cervis, et agente nimbos
Ocior Euro.
Lætus in præsens animus, quod ultra est,	25
Oderit curare, et amara lento
Temperet risu. Nihil est ab omni
Parte beatum.
Abstulit clarum cita mors Achillem;
Longa Tithonum minuit senectus;	30
Et mihi forsan, tibi quod negârit,
Porriget Hora.
Te greges centum Siculæque circum
Mugiunt vaccæ; tibi tollit hinnitum
Apta quadrigis equa; te bis Afro	35
Murice tinctæ
Vestiunt lanæ: mihi parva rura, et
Spiritum Graiæ tenuem Camænæ
Parca non mendax dedit, et malignum
Spernere vulgus.	40

ODE XVII. (M. XIX.)

AD M.ECENATEM.

Cur me querelis exanimas tuis?
Nec Diis amicum est nec mihi te prius
Obire, Mæcenas, mearum
Grande decus columenque rerum.
Ah! te meæ si partem animæ rapit	5
Maturior vis, quid moror altera,
Nec carus æque, nec superstes
Integer? Ille dies utramque
Ducet ruinam: non ego perfidum
Dixi sacramentum: ibimus, ibimus,	10
Uteunque præcedes, supremum
Carpere iter comites parati.
Me nec Chimæræ spiritus igneæ,
Nec si resurgat centimanus Gyges,
Divellet unquam: sic potenti	15
Justitiæ placitumque Parcis.
Seu Libra, seu me Scorpius aspicit	•
Formidolosus, pars violentior
Natalis horæ, seu tyrannus
Hesperiæ Capricornus undæ;	20
Utrumque nostrum incredibili modo
Consentit astrum: te Jovis impio
Tutela Saturno refulgens
Eripuit, volucrisque Fati
Tardavit alas, cum populus frequens	25
Lætum theatris ter erepuit sonum:
Me truncus illapsus cerebro
Sustulerat, nisi Faunus ietum
Dextra levâsset, Mercurialium
Custos virorum. Reddere victimas	30
Ædemque votivam memento:
Nos humilem feriemus agnam.

ODE XVIII. (METRUM XI.)

Non ebur neque aureum
Mea renidet in domo lacunar,
Non trabes Hymettiæ
Premunt columnas ultima recisas
Africa; neque Attali	5
Ignotus hæres regiam occupavi;
Nec Laconicas mihi
Trahunt honestæ purpuras clientæ.
At fides et ingenî
Benigna vena est ; pauperemque dives	10
Me petit: nihil supra
Deos lacesso; nec potentem amicum
Largiora flagito,
Satis beatus unicis Sabinis.
Truditur dies die,	15
Novæque pergunt interire Lunæ.
Tu secanda marmora
Locas sub ipsum funus, et sepulchri
Immemor, struis domos;
Marisque Baiis obstrepentis urgues	20
Summovere littora,
Parum locuples continente ripa.
Quid quod usque proximos
Revellis agri terminos, et ultra
Limites clientium	25
Salis avarus? pellitur paternos
In sinu ferens Deos
Et uxor, et vir, sordidosque natos.
Nulla certior tamen
Rapacis Orci fine destinata	30
Aula divitem_manet
Herum. Quid ultra tendis? Equa tellus

Pauperi recluditur, Regumque pueris; nec satelles Orci Callidum Promethea Revexit auro captus: hic superbum Tantalum, atque Tantali Genus coërcet: hic levare functum Pauperem laboribus, Vocatus atque non vocatus audit.	35 40
ODE XIX. (M. XIX.)	,
IN BACCHUM.
IN DICCHOM:
Вассним in remotis carmina rupibus
Vidi docentem (credite posteri)
Nymphasque discentes, et aures
Capripedum Satyrorum acutas.
Evoe! recenti mens trepidat metu,	5
Plenoque Bacchi pectore turbidum
Lætatur. Evoe! parce Liber,
Parce, gravi metuende thyrso.
Fas pervicaces est mihi Thyadas,
Vinique fontem, lactis et uberes	10
Cantare rivos, atque truncis
Lapsa cavis iterare mella:
Fas et beatæ conjugis additum
Stellis honorem, tectaque Penthei
Disjecta non leni ruina,	15
Thracis et exitium Lycurgi.
Tu flectis amnes, tu mare barbarum:
Tu separatis uvidus in jugis
Nodo coërces viperino
Bistonidum sine fraude crines:	20
Tu, cum parentis regna per arduum

CARMINUM LIB. II. 20.	100
Cohors gigantum scanderet impia,
Rhœcum retorsisti leonis
Unguibus horribilisque mala:
Quanquam choreis aptior et jocis	25
Ludoque dictus, non sat idoneus
Pugnæ ferebaris, sed idem
Pacis eras mediusque belli.
Te vidit insons Cerberus aureo
Cornu decorum, leniter atterens	30
Caudam, et recedentis trilingui
Ore pedes tetigitque crura.

ODE XX. (M. XIX.)

AD M.ECENATEM.

5
10
15

Noscent Geloni; me peritus
Discet Iber, Rhodanique potor.
Absint inani funere næniæ,
Luctusque turpes, et querimoniæ:
Compesce clamorem, ac sepulchri
Mitte supervacuos honores.

20

Q. HORATH FLACCI

CARMINUM

LIBER TERTIUS.

ODE I. (M. XIX.)

Od profanum vulgus, et arceo.
Favete linguis: carmina non prius
Audita Musarum sacerdos
Virginibus puerisque canto.
Regum timendorum in proprios greges,	5
Reges in ipsos imperium est Jovis,
Clari Giganteo triumpho,
Cuncta supercilio moventis.
Est ut viro vir latius ordinet
Arbusta suleis; hic generosior	10
Descendat in Campum petitor;
Moribus hic meliorque fama
Contendat; illa turba clientium
Sit major: ÆQUA lege Necessitas
Sortitur insignes et imos;	15
Omne capax movet urna nomen.
Districtus ensis cui super impia
Cervice pendet, non Siculæ dapes
Dulcem elaborabunt saporem;
Non avium citharæque cantus	20
Somnum reducent: somnus agrestium
Lenis virorum non humiles domos
Fastidit, umbrosamque ripam,
Non zephyris agitata Tempe.

Desiderantem quod satis est, neque	25
Tumultuosum solicitat mare,
Nec sævus Arcturi cadentis
Impetus, aut orientis Hædi:
Non verberatæ grandine vineæ
Fundusque mendax, arbore nunc aquas	30
Culpante, nunc torrentia agros
Sidera, nunc hyemes iniquas.
Contracta pisces æquora sentiunt,
Jactis in altum molibus; huc frequens
Cæmenta demittit redemptor	35
Cum famulis, dominusque terræ
Fastidiosus. Sed timor et minæ
Scandunt eodem quo dominus; neque
Decedit ærata triremi, et
Post equitem sedet atra Cura.	40
Quod si dolentem nec Phrygius lapis,
Nec purpurarum sidere clarior
Delinit usus, nec Falerna
Vitis, Achæmeniumque costum:
Cur invidendis postibus, et novo	45
Sublime ritu moliar atrium?
Cur valle permutem Sabina
Divitias operosiores?

ODE II. (M. XIX.)

Angustam, amici, pauperiem pati
Robustus acri militia puer
Condiscat; et Parthos feroces
Vexet eques metuendus hasta;
Vitamque sub divo, et trepidis agat
In rebus: illum ex mœnibus hosticis
Matrona bellantis tyranni
Prospicicus, et adulta virgo.

CARMINUM LIB. 111. 3.	137
Suspiret, Eheu! ne rudis agminum
Sponsus lacessat regius asperum	10
Tactu leonem, quem cruenta
Per medias rapit ira cædes.
Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori :
Mors et fugacem persequitur virum;
Nec parcit imbellis juventæ	15
Poplitibus, timidove tergo.
Virtus, repulsæ nescia sordidæ,
Intaminatis fulget honoribus:
Nec sumit aut ponit secures
Arbitrio popularis auræ.	20
Virtus, recludens immeritis mori
Cœlum, negata tentat iter via;
Cœtusque vulgares et udam
Spernit humum fugiente penna.
Est et fideli tuta silentio	25
Merces: vctabo, qui Cereris sacrum
Vulgarit arcanæ, sub iisdem
Sit trabibus, fragilemve mecum
Solvat phaselum. Sæpe Diespiter
Neglectus incesto addidit integrum:	30
Raro antecedentem scelestum
Descruit pede Pæna claudo.
ODE III. (M. XIX.)
Justum et tenacem propositi virum,
Non eivium ardor prava jubentium,
Non vultus instantis tyranni,
Mente quatit solida, neque Auster
Dux inquicti turbidus Adriæ,	5

Nec fulminantis magna manus Jovis: Si fractus illabatur orbis, Impavidum ferient ruinæ.

Hac arte Pollux et vagus Hercules
Enisus, arces attigit igneas;	10
Quos inter Augustus recumbens
Purpureo bibit ore nectar:
Hae te merentem, Baeche pater, tuæ
Vexere tigres indocili jugum
Collo trahentes: hae Quirinus	15
Martis equis Acheronta fugit,
Gratum elocuta consiliantibus
Junone Divis: Ilion, Ilion
Fatalis incestusque judex,
Et mulier peregrina vertit	20
In pulverem, ex quo destituit Deos
Mercede pacta Laomedon, mihi
Castæque damnatum Minervæ
Cum populo et duce fraudulento.
Jam nec Lacænæ splendet adulteræ	25
Famosus hospes, nec Priami domus
Perjura pugnaces Achivos
Hectoreis opibus refringit ;
Nostrisque ductum seditionibus
Bellum resedit: protinus et graves	30
Iras, et invisum nepotem,
Troica quem peperit sacerdos,
Marti redonabo. Illum ego lucidas
Inire sedes, ducere nectaris
Succes, et adscribi quietis	35
Ordinibus patiar Deorum.
Dum longus inter sæviat Ilion
Romamque pontus, qualibet exsules
In parte regnanto beati :
Dum Priami Paridisque busto	40
Insultet armentum, et eatulos feræ
Celent inultie; stet Capitolium
Fulgens, triumphatisque possit
Roma ferox dare jura Medis

CARMINUM LIB. 111. 4.	139
Horrenda late nomen in ultimas	45
Extendat oras; qua medius liquor
Secernit Europen ab Afro,
Qua tumidus rigat arva Nilus :
Aurum inrepertum, et sic melius situm,
Cum terra celat, spernere fortior,	50
Quam cogere humanos in usus,
Omne sacrum rapiente dextra.
Quicunque mundo terminus obstitit,
Hunc tangat armis, visere gestiens
Qua parte debacchentur ignes,	55
Qua nebulæ pluviique rores.
Sed bellicosis fata Quiritibus
Hac lege dico, ne nimium pii,
Rebusque fidentes, avitæ
Tecta velint reparare Trojac.	60
Trojæ renascens alite lugubri
Fortuna tristi clade iterabitur,
Ducente victrices catervas
Conjuge me Jovis et sorore.
Ter si resurgat murus aheneus	65
Auctore Phœbo, ter pereat meis
Excisus Argivis, ter uxor
Capta virum puerosque ploret.
Non hæc jocosæ conveniunt lyræ:
Quo, Musa, tendis? desine pervicax	70
Referre sermones Deorum, et
Magna modis tenuare parvis.

ODE IV. (M. XIX.)

AD CALLIOPEN.

Descende ecclo, et die age tibia Regina longum Calliope melos,

Seu voce nunc mavis acuta,
Sue fidibus citharaque Phœbi.
Auditis? an me ludit amabilis	5
Insania? audire et videor pios
Errare per lucos, amœnæ
Quos et aquæ subeunt et auræ.
Me fabulosæ Vulture in Appulo,
Nutricis extra limen Apuliæ,	10
Ludo fatigatumque somno,
Fronde nova puerum palumbes
Texere; mirum quod foret omnibus,
Quicunque celsæ nidum Acherontiæ,
Saltusque Bantinos, et arvum	15
Pingue tenent humilis Ferenti,
Ut tuto ab atris corpore viperis
Dormirem et ursis; ut premerer sacra
Lauroque, collataque myrto,
Non sine Diis animosus infans.	20
Vester, Camœnæ, vester in arduos
Tollor Sabinos; seu mihi frigidum
Præneste, seu Tibur supinum,
Seu liquidæ placuere Baiæ.
Vestris amicum fontibus et choris,	25
Non me Philippis versa acies retro,
Devota non extinxit arbos,
Nec Sicula Palinurus unda.
Utcunque mecum vos eritis, libens
Insanientem navita Bosporum	30
Tentabo, et arentes arenas
Littoris Assyrii viator:
Visam Britannos hospitibus feros,
Et lætum equino sanguine Concanum:
Visam pharetratos Gelonos	35
Et Scythicum inviolatus amnem.
Vos Cæsarem altum, militia simul
Fessas cohortes abdidit oppidis,

CARMINUM LIB. 111. 4.	141
Finire quærentem labores,
Pierio recreatis antro.	40
Vos lene consilium et datis, et dato
Gaudetis almæ. Scimus ut impios
Titanas immanemque turmam
Fulmine sustulerit caduco,
Qui terram inertem, qui mare temperat	45
Ventosum, et urbes, regnaque tristia,
Divosque, mortalesque turbas
Imperio regit unus æquo.
Magnum illa terrorem intulerat Jovi
Fidens juventus horrida brachiis,	50
Fratresque tendentes opaco
Pelion imposuisse Olympo.
Sed quid Typhoeus et validus Mimas,
Aut quid minaci Porphyrion statu,
Quid Rhœcus, evulsisque truncis	55
Enceladus jaculator audax,
Contra sonantem Palladis ægida
Possent ruentes? Hinc avidus stetit
Vulcanus, hinc matrona Juno, et
Nunquam humeris positurus arcum,	60
Qui rore puro Castaliæ lavit
Crines solutos, qui Lyciæ tenet
Dumeta natalemque silvam,
Delius et Patareus Apollo.
Vis consilî expers mole ruit sua:	65
Vim temperatam Dii quoque provehunt
In majus; îdem odere vires
Omne nefas animo moventes.
Testis mearum centimanus Gyges
Sententiarum, notus et integræ	70
Tentator Orion Dianæ,
Virginea domitus sagitta.
Injecta monstris terra dolet suis;
Mœretque partus fulmine luridum

7.
•
-80

ODE V. (M. XIX).

CŒLO tonantem credidimus Jovem Regnare: præsens Divus habebitur Augustus, adjectis Britannis	5
	5
	5
Imperio, gravibusque Persis.	5
Titlebile Oldest conjuge
Turpis maritus vixit? et hostium
(Prô curia, inversique mores!)
Consenuit socerorum in arvis,
Sub rege Medo, Marsus et Appulus,
Anciliorum, et nominis, et togæ)
Oblitus, æternæque Vestæ,
Incolumi Jove, et urbe Roma?
Hoc caverat mens provida Reguli,
Dissentientis conditionibus
Fædis, et exemplo trahenti 15	í
Perniciem veniens in ævum;
Si non perirent immiserabiles,
Captiva pubes. Signa ego Punicis
Affixa delubris, et arma
Militibus sine cæde, dixit, 20)
Derepta vidi: vidi ego civium
Retorta tergo brachia libero,
Portasque non clausas, et arva
Marte coli populata nostro.

CARMINUM LIB. 111. 5.	143
Auro repensus scilicet acrior	25
Miles redibit? flagitio additis
Damnum. Neque amissos colores
Lana refert medicata fuco;
Nec vera virtus, cum semel excidit,
Curat reponi deterioribus.	30
Si pugnat extricata densis
Cerva plagis, crit ille fortis,
Qui perfidis se credidit hostibus;
Et Marte Pœnos proteret altero,
Qui lora restrictis lacertis	35
Sensit incrs, timuitque mortem.
Hie unde vitam sumeret inscius,
Pacem duello miscuit. O pudor!
O magna Carthago probrosis
Altior Italiæ ruinis!	40
Fertur pudicæ conjugis osculum,
Parvosque natos, ut capitis minor,
Ab se removisse, et virilem
Torvus humi posuisse vultum;
Donee labantes consilio patres	45
Firmaret auctor nunquam alias dato,
Interque mœrentes amicos
Egregius properaret exsul.
Atqui scicbat quæ sibi barbarus
Tortor pararet: non aliter tamen	50
Dimovit obstantes propinquos,
Et populum reditus morantem,
Quam si clientum longa negotia
Dijudicata lite relinqueret,
Tendens Venafranos in agros,	55
Aut Lacedæmonium Tarentum.

ODE VI. (M. XIX.)

AD ROMANOS.

Delicta majorum immeritus lues,
Romane, donec templa refeceris,
Ædesque labentes Deorum, et
Fæda nigro simulacra fumo.
Diis te minorem quod geris, imperas:	5
Hinc omne principium, huc refer exitum.
Dî multa neglecti dederunt
Hesperiæ mala luctuosæ.
Jam bis Monæses, et Pacori manus
Non auspicatos contudit impetus	10
Nostros; et adjecisse prædam
Torquibus exiguis renidet.
Pene, occupatam seditionibus,
Delevit urbem Dacus et Æthiops;
Hic classe formidatus, ille	15
Missilibus melior sagittis.
Fœcunda culpæ sæcula nuptias
Primum inquinavere, et genus et domos:
Hoc fonte derivata clades
In patriam populumque fluxit.	20
Motus doceri gaudet Ionicos
Matura virgo; et fingitur artubus
Jam nunc, et incestos amores
De tenero meditatur ungui:
Mox juniores quærit adulteros	25
Inter mariti vina, neque eligit
Cui donet impermissa raptim
Gaudia, luminibus remotis;
Sed jussa coram non sine conscio
Surgit marito, seu vocat institor,	30
Seu navis Hispanæ magister,
Dedecorum pretiosus emtor.

•
Non his juventus orta parentibus
Infecit æquor sanguine Punico;
Pyrrhumque et ingentem cecidit	35
Antiochum Annibalemque dirum:
Sed rusticorum mascula militum
Proles, Sabellis docta ligonibus
Versare glebas, et severæ
Matris ad arbitrium recisos	40
Portare fustes; sol ubi montium
Mutaret umbras, et juga demeret
Bobus fatigatis amicum
Tempus agens abeunte curru.
Damnosa quid non imminuit dies?	45
ÆTAS parentum pejor avis tulit
Nos nequiores, mox daturos
Progeniem vitiosiorem.

CARMINUM LIB. 111. 7

145

ODE VII. (M. XVII.)

AD ASTERIEN.

Quin fles, Asterie, quem tibi candidi
Primo restituent vere Favonii,
Thyna merce beatum,
Constantis juvenem fide
Gygen? ille Notis actus ad Oricum
Post insana Capræ sidera, frigidas
Noctes non sine multis
Insomnis lacrimis agit.
Atqui solicitæ nuntius hospitæ,
Suspirare Chloen, et miseram tuis
Dicens ignibus uri,
Tentat mille vafer, modis:

Ut Prætum mulier perfida credulum
Falsis impulerit criminibus, nimis
Casto Bellerophonti	15
Maturare necem, refert.
Narrat pene datum Pelea Tartaro,
Magnessam Hippolyten dum fugit abstinens
Et peccare docentes
Fallax historias movet;	20
Frustra: nam scopulis surdior Icari
Voces audit adhuc integer. At tibi
Ne vicinus Enipeus
Plus justo placeat, cave.
Quamvis non alius flectere equum sciens	25
Æque conspicitur gramine Martio,
Nec quisquam citus æque
Tusco denatat alveo,
Prima nocte domum claude, neque in vias
Sub cantu querulæ despice tibiæ;	30
Et te sæpe vocanti
Duram, difficilis mane.

ODE VIII. (M. XVIII.)

AD MÆCENATEM.

Martis cœlebs quid agam Calendis,
Quid velint flores et acerra turis
Plena, miraris, positusque carbo in Cespite vivo,
Docte sermones utriusque linguæ.

Voveram dulces epulas, et album
Libero caprum, prope funcratus
Arboris ietu.

CARMINUM LIB. III. 9.	147
Hic dies, anno redeunte festus, Corticem astrictum pice dimovebit	1.0
Amphoræ fumum bibere institutæ	10
Consule Tullo.
Sume, Mæcenas, cyathos amici
Sospitis centum; et vigiles lucernas
Perfer in lucem: procul omnis esto	15
Clamor et ira.
Mitte civiles super urbe curas:
Occidit Daci Cotisonis agmen;
Medus infestus sibi luctuosis
Dissidet armis ;	20
Servit Hispana vetus hostis oræ Cantaber, sera domitus catena;
Jam Scythæ laxo meditantur arcu
Cedere campis.
Negligens, ne qua populus laboret,	25
Parce privatus nimium cavere:	 ()
Dona præsentis cape lætus horæ, et
Linque severa.
ODE IX. (m. xv.)
AD LYDIAM,
lor. Donec gratus eram tibi,
Nec quisquam potior brachia candidæ
Cervici juvenis dabat,
Persarum vigui rege beatior.
Ayn. Donec non alia magis	5
Arsisti, neque erat Lydia post Chloen,
Multi Lydia nominis
Romana vigui clarior Hia.
Ior. Me nunc Thressa Chloe regit,
Dulces docta modos, et citharæ sciens;	10

Pro qua non metuam mori,
Si parcent animæ fata superstiti.
Lyd. Me torret face mutua
Thurini Calais filius Ornyti ;
Pro quo bis patiar mori,	15
Si parcent puero fata superstiti.
Hor. Quid si prisca redit Venus,
Diductosque jugo cogit ahenco?
Si flava excutitur Chloe,
Rejectæque patet janua Lydiæ?	20
Lyd. Quanquam sidere pulchrior
Ille est, tu levior cortice, et improbo
Iracundior Adria ,
Tecum vivere amem, tecum obeam libe	ens.

ODE X. (M. XVI.)

AD LYCEN.

Extremum Tanain si biberes, Lyce,
Sævo nupta viro, me tamen asperas
Porrectum ante fores objicere incolis
Plorares Aquilonibus.
Audis quo strepitu janua, quo nemus	5
Inter pulchra satum tecta remugiat
Ventis, et positas ut glaciet nives
Puro numine Jupiter?
Ingratam Veneri pone superbiam,
Ne currente rota funis eat retro.	10
Non te Penelopen difficilem procis
Tyrrhenus genuit parens.
O, quamvis neque te munera, nec preces,
Nec tinctus viola pallor amantium,
Nec vir Pieria pellice saucius	15
Curvat; supplicibus tuis

Parcas, nec rigida mollior æsculo, Nec Mauris animum mitior anguibus: Non hoc semper erit liminis aut aquæ Cælestis patiens latus.

20

149

ODE XI. (M. XVIII.)

AD MERCURIUM.

THE PLANT OF THE PARTY
MERCURI (nam te docilis magistro
Movit Amphion lapides canendo)
Tuque Testudo resonare septem
Callida nervis,
Nec loquax olim neque grata, nune et	5
Divitum mensis et amica templis,
Die modos, Lyde quibus obstinatas
Applicet aures:
Quæ, velut latis equa trima campis,
Ludit exsultim, metuitque tangi,	10
Nuptiarum expers, et adhue protervo
Cruda marito.
Tu potes tigres comitesque sylvas
Ducere, et rivos celeres morari:
Cessit immanis tibi blandienti	15
Janitor aulæ
Cerberus; quamvis furiale centum
Muniant angues caput ejus, atque
Spiritus teter sanicsque manet
Ore trilingui.	20
Quin et Ixion, Tityosque vultu
Risit invito: stetit urna paulum
Sicea, dum grato Danai puellas
Carmine mulces.
Audiat Lyde seelus atque notas	25
Virginum pænas, et inane lymphæ

Dolium fundo percuntis imo,
Scraque fata,
Quæ manent culpas etiam sub Orco:
Impiæ (nam quid potuere majus?)	30
Impiæ sponsos potuere duro
Perdere ferro.
Una de multis, face nuptiali
Digna, perjurum fuit in parentem
Splendide mendax, et in omne virgo	35
Nobilis ævum:
Surge, quæ dixit juveni marito,
Surge, ne longus tibi somnus, unde
Non times, detur: socerum et scelestas
Falle sorores;	40
Quæ, velut nactæ vitulos leænæ,
Singulos, eheu! lacerant: ego illis
Mollior, nec te feriam, neque intra
Claustra tenebo.
Me pater sævis oneret catenis,	45
Quod viro clemens misero peperci:
Me vel extremos Numidarum in agros
Classe releget.
I, pedes quo te rapiunt et auræ;
Dum favet nox, et Venus; i secundo	.50
Omine; ct nostri memorem sepulchro
Scalpe querelam.

ODE XII. (METRUM XII.)

AD NEOBULEN.

MISERARUM est, nec amori dare ludum, neque dulci Mala vino lavere; aut exanimari metuentes Patruæ verbera linguæ. Tibi qualum Cythereæ puer ales, tibi telas Operosæque Minervæ studium aufert, Neobule,
Liparæi nitor Hebri;
Simul unctos Tiberinis humeros lavit in undis
Eques ipso melior Bellerophonte, neque pugno
Neque segni pede victus:
Catus idem per apertum fugientes agitato
Grege cervos jaculari, et celer arcto latitantem
Fruticeto excipere aprum.

ODE XIII. (M. XVII.)

AD FONTEM BANDUSLE.

O FONS Bandusiæ, splendidior vitro, Dulci digne mero, non sine floribus, Cras donaberis hædo. Cui frons turgida cornibus Primis et Venerem et prœlia destinat. 5 Frustra; nam gelidos inficiet tibi Rubro sanguine rivos Lascivi suboles gregis. Te flagrantis atrox hora Caniculæ Nescit tangere: tu frigus amabile 10 Fessis vomere tauris Præbes, et pecori vago. Fies nobilium tu quoque fontium, Me dicente cavis impositam ilicem Saxis, unde loquaces 15

ODE XIV. (M. XVIII.)

DE REDITU AUGUSTI.

HERCULIS ritu modo dictus, O plebs, Morte venalem petiisse laurum, Lymphæ desiliunt tuæ.

Cæsar Hispana repetit penates
Victor ab ora.
Unico gaudens mulier marito,	5
Prodeat, justis operata Divis;
Et soror clari ducis, et decoræ
Supplice vitta
Virginum matres, juvenumque nuper
Sospitum: vos O pueri, et puellæ	10
Jam virum expertæ, male inominatis
Parcite verbis.
Hie dies vere mihi festus atras
Eximet curas: ego nee tumultum,
Nec mori per vim metuam, tenente	15
Cæsare terras.
I, petc unguentum, puer, et coronas,
Et cadum Marsi memorem duelli;
Spartacum siqua potuit vagantem
Fallere testa.	20
Die et argutæ properet Neæræ
Myrrheum nodo cohibere crinem:
Si per invisum mora janitorem
Fiet, abito.
Lenit albescens animos capillus	25
Litium et rixæ cupidos protervæ.
Non ego hoc ferrem, calidus juventa,
Consule Planco.

ODE XV. (M. XV.)

IN CHLORIM.

Uxon pauperis Ibyci,
Tandem nequitiæ fige modum tuæ,
Famosisque laboribus:
Maturo propior desine funeri

CARMINUM LIB. III. 16.	153
Inter ludere virgines, Et stellis nebulam spargere candidis. Non, si quid Pholoen satis, Et te, Chlori, decet: filia rectius	5
Expugnat juvenum domos, Pulso Thyas uti concita tympano. Illam cogit amor Nothi Lascivæ similem ludere caprææ: Te lanæ prope nobilem	10
Tonsæ Luceriam, non citharæ decent, Nec flos purpurcus rosæ, Nec poti vetulam fæce tenus cadi.	15
ODE XVI. (m. xvi.)
AD M.ECENATEM.
INCLUSAM Danaen turris ahenea, Robustæque forcs, et vigilum canum Tristes excubiæ municrant satis
Nocturnis ab adulteris; Si non Acrisium, virginis abditæ Custodem pavidum, Jupiter et Venus Risissent: fore enim tutum iter et patens, Converso in pretium Deo.	5
Aurum per medios ire satellites, Et perrumpere amat saxa, potentius Ictu fulmineo: concidit auguris Argivi domus, ob lucrum Demersa exitio: diffidit urbium Portas vir Macedo, et subruit æmulos	10
Reges muneribus: munera navium Sævos illaqueant duces. Crescentem sequitur cura pecuniam, Majorumque fames: jure perhorrui	15

Late conspicuum tollere verticem,
Mæcenas, equitum decus.	20
Quanto quisque sibi plura negaverit,
A Diis plura feret. Nil cupientium
Nudus castra peto; et transfuga, divitum
Partes linquere gestio,
Contemtæ dominus splendidior rei,	25
Quam si quicquid arat impiger Appulus
Occultare meis dicerer horreis,
Magnas inter opes inops.
Puræ rivus aquæ silvaque jugerum
Paucorum, et segetis certa fides meæ,	30
Fulgentem imperio fertilis Africæ
Fallit sorte beatior.
Quamquam nec Calabræ mella ferunt apes,
Nec Læstrygonia Bacchus in amphora
Languescit mihi, nec pinguia Gallicis	35
Crescunt vellera pascuis;
Importuna tamen pauperies abest:
Nec, si plura velim, tu dare deneges.
Contracto melius parva eupidine
Vectigalia porrigam,	40
Quam si Mygdoniis regnum Alyattei
Campis continuem. Multa petentibus
Desunt multa. Bene est cui Deus obtulit
Parea quod satis est manu.

ODE XVII. (M. XIX.)

AD ÆLIUM LAMIAM.

ÆLI, vetusto nobilis ab Lamo, (Quando et priores hine Lamias ferunt Denominatos, et nepotum Per memores genus omne fastos

CARMINUM LIB. I	11. 18.
-----------------	---------

155

Auctore ab illo ducit originem,)	5
Qui Formiarum mœnia dicitur
Princeps, et innantem Maricæ
Littoribus tenuisse Lirim
Late tyrannus, cras foliis nemus
Multis et alga littus inutili	10
Demissa tempestas ab Euro
Sternet, aquæ nisi fallit augur
Annosa cornix. Dum potis, aridum
Compone lignum: eras genium mero
Curabis, et porco bimestri,	15
Cum famulis operum solutis.

ODE XVIII. (M. XVIII.)

AD FAUNUM.

FAUNE, Nympharum fugientum amator,
Per meos fines et aprica rura
Lenis incedas, abeasque parvis
Æquus alumnis:
Si tener pleno cadit hœdus anno,	5
Larga nec desunt Veneris sodali
Vina crateræ; vetus ara multo
Fumat odore.
Ludit herboso pecus omne campo,
Cum tibi Nonæ redeunt Decembres:	10
Festus in pratis vacat otioso
Cum bove pagus:
Inter audaces lupus errat agnos:
Spargit agrestes tibi silva frondes:
Gaudet invisam pepulisse fossor	15
Ter pede terram.

ODE XIX. (M. XV.)

AD TELEPHUM.

QUANTUM distet ab Inacho
Codrus, pro patria non timidus mori,
Narras, et genus Æaci,
Et pugnata sacro bella sub Ilio:
Quo Chium pretio cadum	5
Mercemur; quis aquam temperet ignibus;
Quo præbente domum, et quota,
Pelignis caream frigoribus, taces.
Da Lunæ propere novæ,
Da Noctis mediæ, da, puer, auguris	10
Murænæ; tribus aut novem
Miscentur cyathis pocula commodis.
Qui Musas amat impares,
Ternos ter cyathos attonitus petet
Vates: tres prohibet supra	15
Rixarum metuens tangere Gratia,
Nudis juncta sororibus.
Insanire juvat: cur Berecyntiæ
Cessant flamina tibiæ?
Cur pendet tacita fistula cum lyra?	20
Parcentes ego dexteras
Odi: sparge rosas: audiat invidus
Dementem strepitum Lycus,
Et vicina seni non habilis Lyco.
Spissa te nitidum coma,	25
Puro te similem, Telephe, Vespero
Tempestiva petit Chloe:
Me lentus Glyceræ torret amor meæ.

ODE XX. (M. XVIII.)

AD PYRRHUM.

Non vides quanto moveas periclo, Pyrrhe, Gætulæ eatulos leænæ? Dura post paulo fugies inaudax Prœlia raptor; Cum per obstantes juvenum catervas 5 Ibit insignem repetens Nearchum: Grande certamen tibi præda cedat Major, an illi. Interim, dum tu celeres sagittas Promis, hee dentes acuit timendos; 10 Arbiter pugnæ posuisse nudo Sub pede palmam Fertur, et leni recreare vento Sparsum odoratis humerum capillis; Qualis aut Nircus fuit, aut aquosa 15 Raptus ab Ida.

ODE XXI. (M. XIX.)

AD AMPHORAM.

O NATA mecum consule Manlio,
Seu tu querelas, sive geris jocos,
Seu rixam et insanos amores,
Seu facilem, pia testa, somnum;
Quocunque lectum nomine Massicum
Servas, moveri digna bono die,
Descende, Corvino jubente,
Promere languidiora vina.
Non ille, quanquam Socraticis madet
Sermonibus, te negliget horridus: 10

Narratur et prisci Catonis Sæpe mero caluisse virtus. Tu lene tormentum ingenio admoves Plerumque duro: tu sapientium 15 Curas et arcanum jocoso Consilium retegis Lyæo: Tu spem reducis mentibus anxiis. Viresque; et addis cornua pauperi, Post te nec iratos trementi Regum apices, neque militum arma. 20 Te Liber, et si læta aderit Venus. Segnesque nodum solvere Gratiæ, Vivæque producent lucernæ, Dum rediens fugat astra Phœbus.

ODE XXII. (M. XVIII.)

IN DIANAM.

Montium custos nemorumque, Virgo,
Quæ laborantes utero puellas
Ter vocata audis, adimisque leto,
Diva triformis;
Imminens villæ tua pinus esto,
Quam per exactos ego lætus annos
Verris obliquum meditantis ictum
Sanguine donem.

ODE XXIII. (M. XIX.)

AD PHIDYLEN.

CœLo supinas si tuleris manus Nascente Luna, rustica Phidyle; Si thure placâris et horna Fruge Lares, avidaque porca;

CARMINUM LIB. III. 24,	159
Nec pestilentem sentiet Africum Fœcunda vitis, nec sterilem seges Rubiginem, aut dulces alumni Pomifero grave tempus anno. Nam, quæ nivali pascitur Algido	5
Devota quercus inter et ilices, Aut erescit Albanis in berbis	10
Victima, pontificum secures Cervice tinguet: te nihil attinet Tentare multa cæde bidentium	٠
Parvos coronantem marino Rore Deos fragilique myrto. IMMUNIS aram si tetigit manus, Non sumtuosâ blandior hostiâ	15
Mollivit aversos penates Farre pio, et saliente mica.	20
ODE XXIV. (m. xv.)
INTACTIS opulentior Thesauris Arabum et divitis Indiæ, Cæmentis licet occupes
Tyrrhenum omne tuis et mare Apulicum Si figit adamantinos Summis verticibus dira Necessitas Clavos, non animum metu, Non mortis laqueis expedies caput.	5
Campestres melius Scythæ, Quorum plaustra vagas rite trahunt domos, Vivunt, et rigidi Getæ, Immetata quibus jugera liberas	10
Fruges et Cererem ferunt; Nec cultura placet longior annua; Defunctumque laboribus Equali recreat sorte vicarius,	15

Illic matre carentibus
Privignis mulier temperat innocens:
Nee dotata regit virum
Conjux, nee nitido fidit adultero.	20
Dos est magna parentium
Virtus, et metuens alterius viri
Certo fœdere eastitas,
Et peccare nefas, aut pretium emori.
O quisquis volet impias	25
Cædes et rabiem tollere civicam;
Si quæret Pater urbium
Subscribi statuis, indomitam audeat
Refrænare licentiam,
Clarus postgenitis: quatenus (heu nefas!)	30
Virtutem incolumem odimus,
Sublatam ex oculis quærimus invidi.
Quid tristes querimoniæ,
Si non supplicio culpa reciditur?
Quid leges sine moribus	35
Vanæ proficiunt? si neque fervidis
Pars inclusa caloribus
Mundi, nec Boreæ finitimum latus,
Duratæque solo nives	4.0
Mercatorem abigunt; horrida callidi	40
Vincunt æquora navitæ;
Magnum pauperies opprobrium jubet
Quidvis et facere et pati,
Virtutisque viam descrit arduæ.	4 ~
Vel nos in Capitolium,	45
Quo clamor vocat et turba faventium,
Vel nos in mare proximum
Gemmas et lapides, aurum et inutile,
Summi materiem mali,	~1
Mittamus, seelerum si bene pænitet.	50
Eradenda cupidinis
Pravi sunt elementa; et teneræ nimis

CARMINUM LIB, III. 25.	161
Mentes asperioribus
Formandæ studiis : nescit equo rudis
Hærere ingenuus puer,	55
Venarique timet, ludere doctior
Seu Græco jubeas trocho,
Seu malis vetita legibus alea;
Cum perjura patris fides
Consortem, socium fallat, et hospitem.	60
Indignoque pecuniam
Hæredi properet. Scilicet improbæ

ODE XXV. (M. XV.)

Curtæ nescio quid semper abest rei.

Crescunt divitiæ; tamen

AD BACCHUM.

Quo me, Bacche, rapis tui
Plenum! quæ nemora aut quos agor in specus,
Velox mente nova! quibus
Antris egregii Cæsaris audiar
Æternum meditans decus	5
Stellis inserere et concilio Jovis!
Dicam insigne, recens, adhuc
Indictum ore alio. Non secus in jugis
Exsomnis stupet Evias,
Hebrum prospiciens, et nive candidam	10
Thracen, ac pede barbaro
Lustratam Rhodopen. Ut mihi devio
Ripas et vacuum nemus
Mirari libet! O Naïadum potens,
Baccharumque valentium	15
Proceras manibus vertere fraxinos,
Nil parvum aut humili modo,
Nil mortale loquar. Dulce periculum est,
7.5

O Lenæe, sequi Deum Cingentem viridi tempora pampino.

20

5

10

ODE XXVI. (M. XIX.)

AD VENEREM.

Vixi puellis nuper idoneus,
Et militavi non sine gloria;
Nunc arma defunctumque bello
Barbiton hic paries habebit,
Lævum marinæ qui Veneris latus
Custodit. Hic, hic ponite lucida
Funalia et vectes et arcus
Oppositis foribus minaces.
O quæ beatum Diva tenes Cyprum et Memphin carentem Sithonia nive
Regina, sublimi flagello
Tange Chloen semel arrogantem.

ODE XXVII. (M. XVIII.)

AD GALATEAM.

Impros parræ recinentis omen
Ducat, et prægnans canis, aut ab agro
Rava decurrens lupa Lanuvino,
Fætaque vulpes;
Rumpat et serpens iter institutum,
Si per obliquum similis sagittæ
Terruit mannos. Ego cui timebo
Providus auspex,
Antequam stantes repetat paludes
Imbrium divina avis imminentum,
Oscinem corvum prece suscitabo
Solis ab ortu

CARMINUM LIB. 111. 27.	163
Sis licet felix ubicunque mavis,
Et memor nostri, Galatea, vivas:
Teque nec lævus vetat ire picus,	15
Nec vaga cornix.
Sed vides quanto trepidet tumultu
Pronus Orion! ego quid sit ater
Adriæ novi sinus, et quid albus
Peccet Iapyx.	20
Hostium uxores puerique cæcos
Sentiant motus erientis Austri, et
Æquoris nigri fremitum, et trementes
Verbere ripas.
Sic et Europe niveum doloso	25
Credidit tauro latus, et scatentem
Beluis pontum mediasque fraudes
Palluit audax.
Nuper in pratis studiosa florum, et
Debitæ Nymphis opifex coronæ,	30
Nocte sublustri nihil astra præter
Vidit et undas:
Quæ simul centum tetigit potentem
Oppidis Creten, Pater O relictum
Filiæ nomen, pietasque, dixit,	35
Victa furore!
Unde? quo veni? levis una mors est
Virginum culpæ. Vigilansne ploro
Turpe commissum? an vitio carentem
Ludit imago	10
Vana, quæ porta fugiens eburna
Somnium ducit? meliusne fluctus
Ire per longos fuit, an recentes
Carpere flores?
Si quis infamem mihi nunc juvencum	45
Dedat iratæ, lacerare ferro et Frangere enitar modo multum amati
Cornua monstri.

Impudens liqui patrios penates,
Impudens Orcum moror. O Deorum	50
Si quis hæc audis! utinam inter errem
Nuda leones.
Antequam turpis macies decentes
Occupet malas, teneræque succus
Defluat prædæ, speciosa quæro	55
Pascere tigres.
Vilis Europe, pater urguet absens,
Quid mori cessas? potes hac ab orno
Pendulum zona bene te secuta e-
lidere collum:	60
Sive te rupes et acuta leto
Saxa delectant; age, te procellæ
Crede veloci: nisi herile mavis
Carpere pensum,
Regius sanguis, dominæque tradi	65
Barbaræ pellex. Aderat querenti
Perfidum ridens Venus, et remisso
Filius arcu.
Mox ubi lusit satis, Abstineto,
Dixit, irarum calidæque rixæ,	70
Cum tibi invisus laceranda reddet
Cornua taurus.
Uxor invicti Jovis esse nescis?
Mitte singultus; bene ferre magnam
Disce fortunam: tua sectus orbis	75
Nomina ducet.

ODE XXVIII. (M. XV.)

AD LYDEN.

Festo quid potius die Neptuni faciam? Prome reconditum, Lyde strenua, Cæcubum, Munitæque adhibe vim sapientiæ.

CARMINUM LIB. III. 29.	165
Inclinare meridiem Sentis; ac, veluti stet volueris dies, Parcis deripere horreo	5
Cessantem Bibuli consulis amphoram. Nos cantabimus invicem Neptunum, et virides Nereïdum comas: Tu curva recines lyra Latonam, et celeris spicula Cynthiæ:	10
Summo carmine, quæ Cnidon Fulgentesque tenet Cycladas, et Paphon Junctis visit oloribus: Dicetur merita Nox quoque nænia.	15
ODE XXIX. (m. xix.)
AD M.ECENATEM.
Tyrrhena regum progenies, tibi Non ante verso lene merum cado Cum flore, Mæcenas, rosarum, et Pressa tuis balanus capillis
Jamdudum apud me est: eripe te moræ; Ut semper-udum Tibur et Æsulæ Declive contempleris arvum, et Telegoni juga parricidæ.	5
Fastidiosam desere copiam, et Molem propinquam nubibus arduis: Omitte mirari beatæ Fumum et opes strepitumque Romæ.	10
Plerumque gratæ divitibus vices, Mundæque parvo sub lare pauperum	1 =
Cœnæ, sine aulæis et ostro, Solicitam explicuere frontem. Jam clarus occultum Andromedæ pater Ostendit ignem: jam Procyon furit,	15

Et stella vesani Leonis,
Sole dies referente siccos.	20
Jam pastor umbras cum grege languido
Rivumque fessus quærit, et horridi
Dumeta Silvani ; caretque
Ripa vagis taciturna ventis.
Tu civitatem quis deceat status,	25
Curas; et urbi solicitus times,
Quid Seres et regnata Cyro
Bactra parent, Tanaisque discors.
Prudens futuri temporis exitum
Caliginosa nocte premit Deus;	30
Ridetque, si mortalis ultra
Fas trepidat. Quod adest, memento
Componere æquus: cætera fluminis
Ritu feruntur, nunc medio alveo
Cum pace delabentis Etruscum	35
In mare, nunc lapides adesos,
Stirpesque raptas, et pecus, et domos,
Volventis una, non sine montium
Clamore vicinæque silvæ,
Cum fera diluvies quietos	40
Irritat amnes. ILLE potens sui
Lætusque deget, cui licet in diem
Dixisse, Vixi: cras vel atra
Nube polum Pater occupato,
Vel sole puro: non tamen irritum,	45
Quodeunque retro est, efficiet; neque
Diffinget infectumque reddet,
Quod fugiens semel hora vexit.
Fortuna, sævo læta negotio, et
Ludum insolentem ludere pertinax,	50
Transmutat incertos honores,
Nunc mihi, nunc alii benigna.
Laudo manentem: si celercs quatit
Pennas, resigno quæ dedit, et mea

Chiminom hib. III. 601	107
Virtute me involvo, probamque	55
Pauperiem sine dote quæro.
Non est meum, si mugiat Africis
Malus procellis, ad miseras preces
Decurrere et votis pacisci,
Ne Cypriæ Tyriæque merces	60
Addant avaro divitias mari :
Tum me biremis præsidio scaphæ
Tutum per Ægæos tumultus
Aura feret, geminusque Pollux.

ODE XXX. (M. XIV.)

Exegi monumentum ære perennius,
Regalique situ Pyramidum altius:
Quod non imber edax, non Aquilo impotens
Possit diruere, aut innumerabilis
Annorum series, et fuga temporum.	5
Non omnis moriar, multaque pars mei
Vitabit Libitinam. Usque ego postera
Crescam laude recens, dum Capitolium
Seandet cum tacita virgine pontifex.
Dicar, qua violens obstrepit Aufidus,	10
Et qua pauper aquæ Daunus agrestium
Regnavit populorum, ex humili potens,
Princeps Æolium earmen ad Italos
Deduxisse modos. Sume superbiam
Quæsitam meritis, et milii Delphica	15
Lauro einge volens, Melpomene, comam.

Q. HORATII FLACCI

EPISTOLARUM

LIBER PRIMUS.

EPISTOLA I.

AD MÆCENATEM.

Prima dicte mihi, summa dicende Camœna,
Spectatum satis, et donatum jam rude, quæris,
Mæcenas, iterum antiquo me includere ludo.
Non eadem est ætas, non mens. Veianius armis
Herculis ad postem fixis, latet abditus agro,	Š
Ne populum extrema toties exoret arena.
Est mihi purgatam crebro qui personet aurem;
Solve senescentem mature sanus equum, ne
Peccet ad extremum ridendus, et ilia ducat.
Nunc itaque et versus et cætera ludicra pono:)
Quid verum atque decens, curo et rogo, et omnis in hoc	3
Condo et compono quæ mox depromere possim. [sum	:
Ac ne forte roges, quo me duce, quo lare tuter:
Nullius addictus jurare in verba magistri,
Quo me cumque rapit tempestas, deferor hospes. 18	5
Nune agilis fio, et mersor civilibus undis,
Virtutis veræ custos rigidusque satelles:
Nunc in Aristippi furtim præcepta relabor,
Et mihi res, non me rebus subjungere conor.
Ut nox longa, quibus mentitur amica, diesque 20)
Lenta videtur opus debentibus; ut piger annus
Pupillis, quos dura premit custodia matrum:
Sic mihi tarda fluunt ingrataque tempora, quæ spcm
Consiliumque morantur agendi guaviter id quod

Eque pauperibus prodest, locupletibus æque,	25
Eque neglectum pueris senibusque nocebit.
Restat ut his ego me ipse regam solerque elementis:
Non possis oculo quantum contendere Lynccus,
Non tamen ideirco contemnas lippus inungui;
Nec, quia desperes invicti membra Glyconis,	30
Nodosa corpus nolis prohibere cheragra.
Est quadam prodire tenus, si non datur ultra.
Fervet avaritia miscroque cupidine pectus?
Sunt verba et voces, quibus hunc lenire dolorem
Possis, et magnam morbi deponere partem.	35
Laudis amore tumes? sunt certa piacula, quæ te
Ter pure lecto poterunt recreare libello.
Invidus, iracundus, iners, vinosus, amator,
Nemo adeo ferus est ut non mitescere possit,
Si modo culturæ patientem commodet aurem.	40
Virtus est vitium fugere, et sapientia prima
Stultitia caruisse. Vides, quæ maxima credis
Esse mala, exiguum censum, turpemque repulsam,
Quanto devites animo capitisque labore:
Impiger extremos curris mercator ad Indos,	45
Per mare pauperiem fugiens, per saxa, per ignes:
Ne cures ea quæ stulte miraris et optas,
Discere et audire et meliori credere non vis?
Quis circum pagos et circum compita pugnax,
Magna coronari contemnat Olympia, cui spes,	50
Cui sit conditio dulcis sine pulvere palmæ?	00
Vilius argentum est auro, virtutibus aurum.
O cives, cives quærenda pecunia primum est,
Virtus post nummos. Hæc Janus summus ab imo
Prodocet: hæc recinunt juvenes dictata senesque,	55
Lævo suspensi loculos tabulamque lacerto.	99
Est animus tibi, sunt mores, est lingua fidesque: Sed quadringentis sex, septem millia desint;
Plebs eris. At pueri ludentes, Rex eris, aiunt, Si recte facies — Hic murus abeneus esto.	60

Nil conscire sibi, nulla pallescere culpa. Roscia (dic sodes) melior lex, an puerorum est Nænia, quæ regnum recte facientibus offert, Et maribus Curiis et decantata Camillis? 65 Isne tibi melius suadet, qui, Rem facias; rem, Si possis, recte; si non, quocunque modo rem, Ut propius spectes lacrimosa poëmata Pupî: An qui fortunæ te responsare superbæ Liberum et erectum præsens hortatur et aptat? Quod si me populus Romanus forte roget, cur 70 Non, ut porticibus, sic judiciis fruar iisdem, Nec sequar, aut fugiam, quæ diligit ipse, vel odit: Olim quod vulpes ægroto cauta leoni Respondit, referam: Quia me vestigia terrent Omnia te adversum spectantia, nulla retrorsum. Belua multorum es capitum : nam quid sequar? aut quem? Pars hominum gestit conducere publica: sunt qui Crustis et pomis viduas venentur avaras, Excipiantque senes, quos in vivaria mittant: Multis occulto crescit res fœnore. Verum 80 Esto aliis alios rebus studiisque teneri; Iidem eadem possunt horam durare probantes? Nullus in orbe sinus Baiis prælucet amænis. Si dixit dives, lacus et mare sentit amorem Festinantis heri: cui si vitiosa libido 85 Fecerit auspicium, cras ferramenta Teanum Tolletis, fabri. Lectus genialis in aula est? Nil ait esse prius, melius nil cœlibe vita; Si non est, jurat bene solis esse maritis. Quo teneam vultus mutantem Protea nodo? 90 Quid pauper? ride: mutat coenacula, lectos, Balnea, tonsores; conducto navigio æque Nauscat ac locuples, quem ducit priva triremis. Si curatus inæquali tonsore capillos Occurri, rides: si forte subucula pexæ 95 Trita subest tunicæ, vel si toga dissidet impar, Rides: quid, mea cum pugnat sententia secum?

Quod petiit, spernit, repetit quod nuper omisit?

Æstuat, et vitæ disconvenit ordine toto?

Diruit, ædificat, mutat quadrata rotundis?

Insanire putas solennia me, neque rides,

Nec medici credis nec curatoris egere

A prætore dati, rerum tutela mearum

Cum sis, et prave sectum stomacheris ob unguem

De te pendentis, te respicientis amici.

Ad summam, sapiens uno minor est Jove, dives,

Liber, honoratus, pulcher, rex denique regum;

Præcipue sanus, nisi cum pituita molesta est.

EPISTOLA II.

AD LOLLIUM.

TROJANI belli scriptorem, maxime Lolli, Dum tu declamas Romæ, Præneste relegi; Qui, quid sit pulchrum, quid turpe, quid utile, quid non, Planius ac melius Chrysippo et Crantore dicit. Cur ita crediderim, nisi quid te detinet, audi. 5 Fabula, qua Paridis propter narratur amorem Gracia Barbaria lento collisa duello, Stultorum regum et populorum continet æstus. Antenor censet belli præcidere causam. Quid Paris? ut salvus regnet, vivatque beatus, 10 Cogi posse negat. Nestor componere lites Inter Peliden festinat et inter Atriden: Hunc amor, ira quidem communiter urit utrumque. Quicquid delirant reges; plectuntur Achivi. Seditione, dolis, scelere, atque libidine et ira, Iliacos intra muros peccatur, et extra. Rursus, quid virtus et quid sapientia possit, Utile proposuit nobis exemplar Ulyssem;

Qui, domitor Trojæ, multorum providus urbes
Et mores hominum inspexit; latumque per æquor,	20
Dum sibi, dum sociis reditum parat, aspera multa
Pertulit, adversis rerum immersabilis undis.
Sirenum voces et Circæ pocula nôsti;
Quæ si cum sociis stultus cupidusque bibisset,
Sub domina meretrice fuisset turpis et excors,	25
Vixisset canis immundus, vel amica luto sus.
Nos numerus sumus, et fruges consumere nati,
Sponsi Penelopæ, nebulones, Alcinoique,
In cute curanda plus æquo operata juventus;
Cui pulchrum fuit in medios dormire dies, et	30
Ad strepitum citharæ cessatum ducere curam.
Ut jugulent hominem, surgunt de nocte latrones :
Ut teipsum serves, non expergisceris? atqui
Si noles sanus, curres hydropicus: et ni
Posces ante diem librum cum lumine, si non	35
Intendes animum studiis et rebus honestis;
Invidia vel amore vigil torquebere. Nam cur
Quæ lædunt oculum, festinas demere; siquid
Est animum, differs curandi tempus in annum?
Dimidium facti, qui cœpit, habet: sapere aude;	40
Incipe: vivendi recte qui prorogat horam,
Rusticus exspectat dum defluat amnis; at ille
Labitur, et labetur in omne volubilis ævum.
Quæritur argentum, puerisque beata creandis
Uxor, et incultæ pacantur vomere silvæ.	45
Quod satis est cui contingit, nihil amplius optet.
Non domus et fundus, non æris acervus et auri
Ægroto domini deduxit corpore febres,
Non animo curas. Valeat possessor oportet,
Si comportatis rebus bene cogitat uti.	50
Qui cupit aut metuit, juvat illum sic domus, et res,
Ut lippum pictæ tabulæ, fomenta podagram,
Auriculas citharæ collecta sorde dolentes.
Sincerum est nisi vas; quodeumque infundis, accseit.

Sperne voluptates: nocet emta dolore voluptas, 55 Semper avarus eget: certum voto pete finem. Invidus alterius macrescit rebus opimis: Invidia Siculi non invenere tyranni Maius tormentum. Qui non moderabitur iræ, Infectum volet esse, dolor quod suaserit et mens, Dum pænas odio per vim festinat inulto. Ira furor brevis est: animum rege; qui nisi paret. Imperat: hunc franis, hunc tu compesce catena. Fingit equum tenera docilem cervice magister Ire, viam qua monstret eques. Venaticus, ex quo Tempore cervinam pellem latravit in aula, Militat in silvis catulus. Nunc adbibe puro Pectore verba puer, nunc te melioribus offer. Quo semel est imbuta recens, servabit odorem Testa diu. Quod si cessas, aut strenuus anteis, 70 Nec tardum opperior, nec præcedentibus insto.

EPISTOLA III.

AD JULIUM FLORUM.

Juli Flore, quibus terrarum militet oris
Claudius Augusti privignus, scire laboro.
Thracane vos, Hebrusque nivali compede vinctus,
An freta vicinas inter currentia turres,
An pingues Asiæ campi collesque morantur?

Quid studiosa cohors operum struit? Hæc quoque curo:
Quis sibi res gestas Augusti scribere sumit?
Bella quis et paces longum diffundit in ævum?
Quid Titius, Romana brevi venturus in ora,
Pindarici fontis qui non expalluit haustus,
10
Fastidire lacus, et rivos ausus apertos?
Ut valet? ut meminit nostri? fidibusne Latinis
Thebanos aptare modos studet, auspice Musa?
An tragica desævit et ampullatur in arte?

Quid mihi Celsus agit? monitus multumque monendus, 15 Privatas ut quærat opes, et tangere vitet Scripta, Palatinus quæcumque recepit Apollo; Ne, si forte suas repetitum venerit olim Grex avium plumas, moveat cornicula risum Furtivis nudata coloribus. Ipse quid audes? 90 Quæ circumvolitas agilis thyma? non tibi parvum Ingenium, non incultum est, nec turpiter hirtum. Seu linguam causis acuis, seu civica iura Respondere paras, seu condis amabile carmen; Prima feres hederæ victricis præmia: quod si 25 Frigida curarum fomenta relinquere posses, Quo te cœlestis sapientia duceret, ires. Hoc opus, hoc studium parvi properemus et ampli, Si patriæ volumus, si nobis vivere cari. Debes hoc etiam rescribere, si tibi curæ, 30 Quantæ conveniat, Munatius: an male sarta Gratia nequicquam coit, et rescinditur? At vos Seu calidus sanguis, seu rerum inscitia vexat, Indomita cervice feros; ubicunque locorum Vivitis, indigni fraternum rumpere fœdus, 35 Pascitur in vestrum reditum votiva iuvenca.

EPISTOLA IV.

AD ALBIUM TIBULLUM.

Albi, nostrorum sermonum candide judex,
Quid nunc te dicam facere in regione Pedana?
Scribere quod Cassî Parmensis opuscula vincat?
An tacitum silvas inter reptare salubres,
Curantem quicquid dignum sapiente bonoque est?
Non tu corpus eras sine pectore. Dii tibi formam,
Dii tibi divitias dederunt, artemque fruendi.
Quid voveat dulci nutricula majus alumno,

5

Qui sapere et fari possit quæ sentiat, et cui
Gratia, fama, valetudo contingat abunde,
Et mundus victus, non deficiente crumcna?
Inter spem curamque, timores inter et iras,
Omnem crede diem tibi diluxisse supremum:
Grata superveniet, quæ non sperabitur, hora.
Me pinguem et nitidum bene curata cute vises,
Cum ridere voles, Epicuri de grege porcum.

EPISTOLA V.

AD TORQUATUM.

St potes Archiacis conviva recumbere lectis, Nec modica cœnare times olus omne patella; Supremo te sole domi, Torquate, manebo. Vina bibes iterum Tauro diffusa, palustres Inter Minturnas Sinuessanumque Petrinum. 5 Sin melius quid habes, arcesse, vel imperium fer. Jamdudum splendet focus, et tibi munda supellex. Mitte leves spes, et certamina divitiarum, Et Moschi causam: cras nato Cæsare festus Dat veniam somnumque dies; impune licebit 10 Æstivam sermone benigno tendere noctem. Quo mihi fortunam, si non conceditur uti? Parcus ob hæredis curam nimiumque severus Potare et spargere flores Assidet insano. Incipiam, patiarque vel inconsultus haberi. 15 Quid non ebrietas designat? operta recludit; Spes jubet esse ratas; in prœlia trudit inertem; Solicitis animis onus eximit; addocet artes: Fœcundi calices quem non fecere disertum? Contracta quem non in paupertate solutum? 20 Hæc ego procurare et idoneus imperor, et non Invitus; ne turpe toral, ne sordida mappa

Corruget nares; ne non et cantharus et lanx
Ostendat tibi te; ne fidos inter amicos
Sit qui dicta foras eliminet; ut coëat par
Jungaturque pari. Butram tibi, Septiciumque,
Et nisi cœna prior potiorque puella Sabinum
Detinet, assumam: locus est et pluribus umbris;
Sed nimis arcta premunt olidæ convivia capræ.
Tu quotus esse velis, rescribe; et rebus omissis
Atria servantem postico falle clientem.

EPISTOLA VI.

AD NUMICIUM.

NIL admirari prope res est una, Numici, Solaque, quæ possit facere et servare beatum Hunc solem, et stellas, et decedentia certis Tempora momentis, sunt qui formidine nulla Imbuti spectent: quid censes munera terræ? 5 Quid maris extremos Arabas ditantis et Indos? Ludicra quid, plausus, et amici dona Quiritis? Quo spectanda modo, quo sensu credis et ore? Qui timet his adversa, fere miratur eodem Quo cupiens pacto: pavor est utrobique molestus: 10 Improvisa simul species exterret utrumque. Gaudeat, an doleat; cupiat, metuatne; quid ad rem, Si, quiequid vidit melius pejusve sua spe, Defixis oculis, animoque et corpore torpet? Insani sapiens nomen ferat, æquus iniqui, 15 Ultra quam satis est, virtutem si petat ipsam. I nunc, argentum, et marmor vetus, æraque et artes Suspice, cum gemmis Tyrios mirare colores: Gaude quod spectant oculi te mille loquentem : Gnavus mane forum, et vespertinus pete teetum: 20 Ne plus frumenti dotalibus emetat agris Mutus; et (indignum quod sit) pejoribus ortus, Hic tibi sit potius, quam tu mirabilis illi.

Quicquid sub terra est, in apricum proferet ætas,
Defodiet condetque nitentia. Cum bene notum	25
Porticus Agrippæ, et via te conspexerit Appî,
Ire tamen restat Numa quo devenit et Ancus,
Si latus aut renes morbo tentantur acuto,
Quære fugam morbi. Vis recte vivere? quis non?
Si virtus hoc una potest dare, fortis omissis	30
Hoc age deliciis. Virtutem verba putes, ut
Lucum ligna? cave ne portus occupet alter;
Ne Cibyratica, ne Bithyna negotia perdas.
Mille talenta rotundentur, totidem altera, porro et
Tertia succedant, et quæ pars quadret acervum.	35
Scilicet uxorem cum dote, fidemque, et amicos,
Et genus et formam regina pecunia donat:
Ac bene nummatum decorat Suadela Venusque.
Mancipiis locuples eget æris Cappadocum rex:
Ne fueris hic tu. Chlamydes Lucullus, ut aiunt,	40
Si posset centum scenæ præbere rogatus,
Qui possum tot? ait: tamen et quæram, et quot habe	bo,
Mittam: post paulo scribit, sibi millia quinque
Esse domi chlamydum; partem, vel tolleret omnes.
Exilis domus est, ubi non et multa supersunt,	45
Et dominum fallunt, et prosunt furibus. Ergo
Si res sola potest facere et servare beatum,
Hoc primus repetas opus, hoc postremus omittas.
Si fortunatum species et gratia præstat,
Mercemur servum, qui dictet nomina, lævum	50
Qui fodicet latus, et cogat trans pondera dextram
Porrigere: Hic multum in Fabia valet, ille Velina;
Cui libet is fasces dabit, eripietque curule
Cui volet importunus ebur: Frater, Pater, adde;
Ut cuique est ætas, ita quemque facetus adopta.	55
Si, bene qui cœnat, bene vivit; lucet, eamus
Quo ducit gula: piscemur, venemur; ut olim
Gargilius, qui mane plagas, venabula, servos.

Differtum transire forum populumque jubebat,
Unus et e multis populo spectante referret
Emtum mulus aprum. Crudi tumidique lavemur,
Quid deceat, quid non, obliti, Cærite cera
Digni, remigium vitiosum Ithacensis Ulyssei,
Cui potior patria fuit interdicta voluptas.
Si, Mimnermus uti censet, sine amore jocisque
Nil est jucundum; vivas in amore jocisque.
Vive, vale: siquid novisti rectius istis,
Candidus imperti; si non, his utere mecum.

EPISTOLA VII.

AD MÆCENATEM.

QUINQUE dies tibi pollicitus me rure futurum, Sextilem totum mendax desideror. Atqui Si me vivere vis sanum recteque valentem, Quam mihi das ægro, dabis ægrotare timenti, Mæcenas, veniam; dum ficus prima calorque 5 Designatorem decorat lictoribus atris; Dum pueris omnis pater et matercula pallet; Officiosaque sedulitas, et opella forensis Adducit febres, et testamenta resignat. Quod si bruma nives Albanis illinet agris, 10 Ad mare descendet vates tuus, et sibi parcet, Contractusque leget; te, dulcis amice, reviset Cum Zephyris, si concedes, et hirundine prima. Non quo more pyris vesci Calaber jubet hospes, Tu me fecisti locupletem. ¶ Vescere sodes. 15 ¶Jam satis est. ¶At tu quantumvis tolle. ¶ Benigne. ¶ Non invisa feres pueris munuscula parvis. Tam teneor dono quam si dimittar onustus. ¶ Ut libet: hæc porcis hodie comedenda relinquis.— Prodigus et stultus donat quæ spernit et odit. 20

Hæc seges ingratos tulit, et feret omnibus annis.
Vir bonus et sapiens dignis ait esse paratus;
Nec tamen ignorat quid distent æra lupinis.
Dignum præstabo me etiam pro laude merentis.
Quod si me noles usquam discedere, reddes	25
Forte latus, nigros angusta fronte capillos;
Reddes dulce loqui; reddes ridere decorum, et Inter vina fugam Cinaræ mærere protervæ.
Forte per angustam tenuis nitedula rimam
Repserat in cumeram frumenti; pastaque rursus	30
Ire foras pleno tendebat corpore frustra:
Cui mustela procul, Si vis, ait, effugere istinc,
Macra cavum repetes arctum, quem macra subisti.
Hac ego si compellor imagine, cuncta resigno:
Nec somnum plebis laudo, satur altilium, nec	35
Otia divitiis Arabum liberrima muto.
Sæpe verecundum laudâsti; rexque paterque
Audisti coram; nec verbo pareius absens:
Inspice si possum donata reponere lætus.
Haud male Telemachus, proles patientis Ulyssei,	40
Non est aptus equis Ithace locus; ut neque planis
Porrectus spatiis, neque multæ prodigus herbæ:
Atride, magis apta tibi tua dona relinquam.
Parvum parva decent: mihi jam non regia Roma,
Sed vacuum Tibur placet, aut imbelle Tarentum.	45
Strenuus et fortis, causisque Philippus agendis
Clarus, ab officiis octavam circiter horam
Dum redit, atque Foro nimium distare Carinas
Jam grandis natu queritur, conspexit, ut aiunt,
Adrasum quendam vacua tonsoris in umbra,	50
Cultello proprios purgantem leniter ungues.
Demetri (puer hic non læve jussa Philippi Accipiebat) abi; quære, et refer; unde domo; quis;
Cujus fortunæ; quo sit patre, quove patrono.
It, redit, et narrat; Vulteium nomine Menam,	55
Program tonui consu sina arimina natura :

Et properare loco et cessare, et quærere et uti, Gaudentem parvisque sodalibus, et lare certo, Et ludis, et post decisa negotia Campo. Scitari libet ex ipso quæcunque refers : dic 60 Ad conam veniat. Non sane credere Mena: Mirari secum tacitus. Quid multa? Benigne. Respondet. ¶Neget ille mihi? ¶Negat improbus, et te Negligit aut horret. ¶Vulteium mane Philippus Vilia vendentem tunicato scruta popello 65 Occupat, et salvere jubet prior. Ille Philippo Excusare laborem, et mercenaria vincla, Quod non mane domum venisset; denique quod non Providisset eum. ¶Sic ignovisse putato Me tibi, si conas hodie mecum. ¶Ut libet. ¶Ergo 70 Post nonam venies: nunc i, rem strenuus auge.-Ut ventum ad conam est, dicenda tacenda locutus. Tandem dormitum dimittitur. Hic, ubi sæpe Occultum visus decurrere piscis ad hamum, Mane cliens et jam certus conviva, jubetur 75 Rura suburbana indictis comes ire Latinis. Impositus mannis, arvum cœlumque Sabinum Non cessat laudare; videt ridetque Philippus: Et sibi dum requiem, dum risus undique quærit, Dum septem donat sestertia, mutua septem 80 Promittit, persuadet uti mercetur agellum. Mercatur: ne te longis ambagibus ultra Quam satis est morer; ex nitido fit rusticus, atque Sulcos et vineta crepat mera, præparat ulmos, Immoritur studiis et amore senescit habendi. 85 Verum ubi oves furto, morbo periere capella, Spem mentita seges, bos est enectus arando; Offensus damnis, media de nocte caballum Arripit, iratusque Philippi tendit ad ædes: Quem simul aspexit scabrum intonsumque Philippus, 90 Durus, ait, Vultei, nimis attentusque videris Esse mihi. Pol, me miserum, patrone, vocares,

Si velles, inquit, verum mihi ponere nomen.

Quod te per Genium dextramque Deosque Penates
Obsecro et obtestor, vitæ me redde priori.—

Qui semel aspexit quantum dimissa petitis
Præstent, mature redeat, repetatque relicta.

Metiri se quemque suo modulo ac pede, verum est.

EPISTOLA VIII.

AD CELSUM ALBINOVANUM.

CELSO gaudere et bene rem gerere Albinovano, Musa rogata refer, comiti scribæque Neronis. Si quæret quid agam; dic, multa et pulchra minantem, Vivere nec recte, nec suaviter: haud quia grando Contuderit vites, oleamve momorderit æstus, 5 Nec quia longinquis armentum regrotet in agris : Sed quia mente minus validus quam corpore toto, Nil audire velim, nil dicere, quod levet ægrum ; Fidis offendar medicis, irascar amicis, Cur me funesto properent arcere veterno; Quæ nocuere sequar, fugiam quæ profore credam; Romæ Tibur amem ventosus, Tibure Romam. Post hæc, ut valeat, quo pacto rem gerat et se; Ut placeat Juveni, percontare, utque cohorti. Si dicet, Recte; primum gaudere; subinde 15 Præceptum auriculis hoc instillare memento: Ut tu fortunam, sic nos te, Celse, feremus.

EPISTOLA IX.

AD CLAUDIUM NERONEM.

Septimius, Claudi, nimirum intelligit unus Quanti me facias: nam cum rogat, et prece cogit, Scilicet ut tibi se laudare et tradere coner,
Dignum mente domoque legentis honesta Neronis;
Munere cum fungi propioris censet amici;
Quid possim, videt ac novit me valdius ipso.
Multa quidem dixi, cur excusatus abirem:
Sed timui, mea ne finxisse minora putarer,
Dissimulator opis propriæ, mihi commodus uni.
Sic ego, majoris fugiens opprobria culpæ,
Frontis ad urbanæ descendi præmia. Quod si
Depositum laudas ob amici jussa pudorem,
Scribe tui gregis lunc, et fortem crede bonumque.

EPISTOLA X.

AD FUSCUM ARISTIUM.

Urbis amatorem Fuscum salvere jubemus Ruris amatores, hac in re scilicet una Multum dissimiles, at cætera pene gemelli, Fraternis animis, quicquid negat alter, et alter: Annuimus pariter vetuli notique columbi. 5 Tu nidum servas, ego laudo ruris amœni Rivos, et musco circumlita saxa, nemusque. Quid quæris? vivo et regno, simul ista reliqui Quæ vos ad cœlum effertis rumore secundo: Utque sacerdotis fugitivus, liba recuso; 10 Pane egeo jam mellitis potiore placentis. Vivere naturæ si convenienter oportet, Ponendæque domo quærenda est area primum, Novistine locum potiorem rure beato? Est ubi plus tepeant hiemes? ubi gratior aura 15 Leniat et rabiem Canis, et momenta Leonis, Cum semel accepit solem furibundus acutum? Est ubi divellat somnos minus invida cura? Deterius Libycis olet aut nitet herba lapillis? Purior in vicis aqua tendit rumpere plumbum, 20

Quam quæ per pronum trepidat cum murmure rivum	?
Nempe inter varias nutritur silva columnas,
Laudaturque domus longos quæ prospicit agros.
Naturam expelles furca, tamen usque recurret,
Et mala perrumpet furtim fastidia victrix.	25
Non, qui Sidonio contendere callidus ostro
Nescit Aquinatem potantia vellera fucum,
Certius accipiet damnum, propiusve medullis,
Quam qui non poterit vero distinguere falsum.
Quem res plus nimio delectavere secundæ,	30
Mutatæ quatient: siquid mirabere, pones
Invitus: fuge magna: licet sub paupere tecto
Reges et regum vita præcurrere amicos.
Cervus equum pugna melior communibus herbis
Pellebat, donec minor in certamine longo	35
Imploravit opes hominis, frænumque recepit:
Sed postquam violens victo discessit ab hoste,
Non equitem dorso, non frænum depulit ore.
Sic qui pauperiem veritus, potiore metallis
Libertate caret, dominum vehet improbus, atque	40
Serviet æternum; quia parvo nesciet uti.
Cui non conveniet sua res, ut calceus olim,
Si pede major erit, subvertet; si minor, uret.
Lætus sorte tua vives sapienter, Aristi:
Nec me dimittes incastigatum, ubi plura	45
Cogere quam satis est, ac non cessare videbor.
Imperat aut servit collecta pecunia cuique,
Tortum digna sequi potius quam ducere funem.
Hæc tibi dictabam post fanum putre Vacunæ,
Excepto and non simul esses, catera latus.	50

EPISTOLA XI.

AD BULLATIUM.

Quid tibi visa Chios, Bullati, notaque Lesbos? Quid concinna Samos? quid Crœsi regia Sardis?

Smyrna quid, et Colophon? majora minorane fama? Cunctaque præ Campo et Tiberino flumine sordent? An venit in votum Attalicis ex urbibus una? 5 An Lebedum laudas, odio maris atque viarum? Scis, Lebedus quid sit; Gabiis desertior atque Fidenis vicus; tamen illic vivere vellem. Oblitusque meorum, obliviscendus et illis, Neptunum procul e terra spectare furentem. 10 Sed neque qui Capua Romam petit, imbre lutoque Aspersus, volet in caupona vivere; nec qui Frigus collegit, furnos et balnea laudat, Ut fortunatam plene præstantia vitam · Nec, si te validus jaetaverit Auster in alto, Ideireo navem trans Ægæum mare vendas. Incolumi Rhodos et Mitylene pulchra facit, quod Pænula solstitio, campestre nivalibus auris, Per brumam Tiberis, Sextili mense caminus. Dum licet, et vultum servat Fortuna benignum. 20 Romæ laudetur Samos, et Chios, et Rhodos absens. Tu quamcunque Deus tibi fortunaverit horam, Grata sume manu; neu dulcia differ in annum; Ut auocunque loco fueris, vixisse libenter Te dicas: nam si ratio et prudentia curas, 25 Non locus, effusi late maris arbiter, aufert: Cœlum, non animum, mutant qui trans mare currunt; Strenua nos exercet inertia: navibus atque Quadrigis petimus bene vivere: quod petis, hic est; Est Ulubris; animus si te non deficit æquus.

EPISTOLA XII.

AD ICCIUM.

FRUCTIBUS Agrippæ Siculis, quos colligis, Icci, Si recte frueris, non est ut copia major Ab Jove donari possit tibi: tolle querelas; Pauper enim non est cui rerum suppetit usus.

Si ventri bene, si lateri est pedibusque tuis, nil Divitiæ poterunt regales addere majus. Si forte in medio positorum abstemius herbis Vivis et urtica, sic vives protinus, ut te Confestim liquidus fortunæ rivus inauret: Vel quia naturam mutare pecunia nescit; 10 Vel quia cuncta putas una virtute minora. Miramur si Democriti pecus edit agellos Cultaque, dum peregre est animus sine corpore velox? Cum tu inter scabiem tantam et contagia lucri Nil parvum sapias, et adhuc sublimia cures : 15 Quæ mare compescant causæ; quid temperet annum; Stellæ sponte sua, jussæne vagentur et crrent; Quid premat obscurum Lunæ, quid proferat orbem; Quid velit et possit rerum concordia discors; Empedocles, an Stertinium deliret acumen. 20 Verum seu pisces, seu porrum et cæpe trucidas, Utere Pompeio Grospho; et siquid petet, ultro Defer: nil Grosphus nisi verum orabit et æquum. Vilis amicorum est annona, bonis ubi quid de'st. Ne tamen ignores quo sit Romana loco res: 25 Cantaber Agrippæ, Claudî virtute Neronis Armenius cecidit: jus imperiumque Phraates Cæsaris accepit genibus minor: aurea fruges Italiæ pleno defudit Copia cornu.

EPISTOLA XIII.

AD VINIUM ASELLAM.

Ut proficiscentem docui te sæpe diuque,
Augusto reddes signata volumina, Vini,
Si validus, si lætus erit, si denique poscet;
Ne studio uostri pecces, odiumque libellis
Sedulus importes, opera vehemente minister.
Si te forte meæ gravis uret sarcina chartæ,

5

Abjicito potius, quam quo perferre juberis
Clitellas ferus impingas, Asinæque paternum
Cognomen vertas in risum, et fabula fias.
Viribus uteris per clivos, flumina, lamas: 10
Victor propositi simul ac perveneris illuc,
Sic positum servabis onus, ne forte sub ala
Fasciculum portes librorum, ut rusticus agnum;
Ut vinosa glomos furtivæ Pyrrhia lanæ;
Ut cum pileolo soleas conviva tribulis. 15
Ne vulgo narres te sudavisse ferendo
Carmina; quæ possint oculos auresque morari
Cæsaris: oratus multa prece, nitere porro.
Vade, vale, cave ne titubes, mandataque frangas.

EPISTOLA XIV.

AD VILLICUM SUUM.

5

10

15

VILLICE silvarum et mihi me reddentis agelli, Quem tu fastidis, habitatum quinque focis, et Quinque bonos solitum Variam dimittere patres; Certemus spinas animone ego fortius, an tu Evellas agro; et melior sit Horatius, an res. Me quamvis Lamiæ pietas et cura moratur, Fratrem mœrentis, rapto de fratre dolentis Insolabiliter; tamen istuc mens animusque Fert, et amat spatiis obstantia rumpere claustra. Rure ego viventem, tu dicis in urbe beatum: Cui placet alterius, sua nimirum est odio sors. Stultus uterque locum immeritum causatur inique: In culpa est animus, qui se non effugit unquam. Tu mediastinus tacita prece rura petebas. Nunc urbem et ludos et balnea villicus optas: Me constare mihi scis, et discedere tristem. Quandocunque trahunt invisa negotia Romam. Non eadem miramur; eo disconvenit inter

Meque et te: nam, quæ deserta et inhospita tesqua
Credis, amœna vocat mecum qui sentit, et odit	20
Quæ tu pulchra putas. Fornix tibi et uncta popina
Incutiunt urbis desiderium, video; et quod
Angulus iste feret piper et tus ocius uva;
Nec vicina subest vinum præbere taberna
Quæ possit tibi ; nec meretrix tibicina, cujus	25
Ad strepitum salias terræ gravis: et tamen urgues
Jampridem non tacta ligonibus arva, bovemque
Disjunctum curas, et strictis frondibus exples:
Addit opus pigro rivus, si decidit imber,
Multa mole docendus aprico parcere prato.	30
Nunc, age, quid nostrum concentum dividat, audi.
Quem tenues decuere togæ nitidique capilli,
Quem scis immunem Cinaræ placuisse rapaci,
Quem bibulum liquidi media de luce Falerni,
Cœna brevis juvat, et prope rivum somnus in herba:	35
Nec lusisse pudet, sed non incidere ludum.
Non istic obliquo oculo mea commoda quisquam
Limat; non odio obscuro morsuque venenat:
Rident vicini glebas et saxa moventem.
Cum servis urbana diaria rodere mavis;	40
Horum tu in numerum voto ruis: invidet usum
Lignorum et pecoris tibi calo argutus, et horti.
Optat ephippia bos, piger optat arare caballus:
Quam scit uterque, libens, censebo, exerceat artem.

EPISTOLA XV.

AD NUMONIUM VALAM.

Que sit hiems Veliæ, quod cœlum, Vala, Salerni, Quorum hominum regio, et qualis via: (nam mihi Baias Musa supervacuas Antonius, et tamen illis Me facit invisum, gelida cum perluor unda Per medium frigus: sane murteta relinqui, Dictaque cessantem nervis elidere morbum Sulphura contemni, vicus gemit, invidus ægris, Qui caput et stomachum supponere fontibus audent Clusinis, Gabiosque petunt, et frigida rura. Mutandus locus est, et diversoria nota 10 Præteragendus equus: Quo tendis! non mihi Cumas Est iter, aut Baias, læva stomachosus habena Dicet eques; sed equi frænato est auris in ore:)-Major utrum populum frumenti copia pascat; Collectosne bibant imbres, puteosne perennes 15 Jugis aquæ; nam vina nihil moror illius oræ. Rure meo possum quidvis perferre patique; Ad mare cum veni, generosum et lene requiro; Quod curas abigat, quod cum spe divite manet In venas animumque meum, quod verba ministret, 20 Quod me Lucanæ juvenem commendet amicæ:-Tractus uter plures lepores, uter educet apros: Utra magis pisces et echinos æquora celent; Pinguis ut inde domum possim Phæaxque reverti:-Scribere te nobis, tibi nos, accredere par est. 25 Mænius, ut rebus maternis atque paternis Fortiter absumtis, urbanus coepit haberi. Scurra vagus, non qui certum præscpe tenerct, Impransus non qui civem dignosceret hoste; Quælibet in quemvis opprobria fingere sævus; 30 Pernicies et tempestas barathrumque macelli, Quicquid quæsierat, ventri donabat avaro: Hic ubi nequitiæ fautoribus et timidis nil Aut paulum abstulerat, patinas cœnabat omasi, Vilis et agninæ, tribus ursis quod satis esset; 35 Scilicet ut ventres lamna candente nepotum Diceret urendos, corrector Bestius. Idem Si quid erat nactus prædæ majoris, ubi omne Verterat in fumum et cinerem, Non hercule miror, Aiebat, siqui comedunt bona; cum sit obeso 40 Nil melius turdo, nil vulva pulchrius ampla.

Nimirum hic ego sum: nam tuta et parvula laudo, Cum res deficiunt, satis inter vilia fortis: Verum ubi quid melius contingit et unctius, idem Vos sapere et solos aio bene vivere, quorum Conspicitur nitidis fundata pecunia villis.

45

EPISTOLA XVI.

AD QUINCTIUM.

NE perconteris, fundus meus, optime Quincti,
Arvo pascat herum, an baccis opulentet olivæ,
Pomisne, an pratis, an amicta vitibus ulmo:
Scribetur tibi forma loquaciter, et situs agri.
Continui montes, nisi dissocientur opaca	5
Valle; sed ut veniens dextrum latus aspiciat Sol,
Lævum decedens curru fugiente vaporet.
Temperiem laudes. Quid si rubicunda benigne
Corna vepres et pruna ferunt? si quercus et ilex
Multa fruge pecus, multa dominum juvat umbra?	10
Dicas adductum propius frondere Tarentum.
Fons etiam rivo dare nomen idoneus, ut nec
Frigidior Thracam, nec purior ambiat Hebrus;
Infirmo capiti fluit utilis, utilis alvo.
Hæ latebræ dulces, etiam, si credis, amœnæ,	15
Incolumem tibi me præstant Septembribus horis.
Tu recte vivis, si curas esse quod audis:
Jactamus jampridem omnis te Roma beatum
Sed vereor ne cui de te plus quam tibi credas,
Neve putes alium sapiente bonoque beatum,	20
Neu, si te populus sanum recteque valentem
Dictitet, occultam febrem sub tempus edendi
Dissimules, donec manibus tremor incidat unctis.
Stultorum incurata pudor malus ulcera celat.
Siquis bella tibi terra pugnata marique	25

Dicat, et his verbis vacuas permulceat aures;
"Tene magis salvum populus velit, an populum tu,
"Servet in ambiguo, qui consulit et tibi et urbi,
"Jupiter"; Augusti laudes agnoscere possis.
Cum pateris sapiens emendatusque vocari,	30
Respondesne tuo, dic sodes, nomine? ¶ Nempe
Vir bonus et prudens dici delector ego ac tu.
¶ Qui dedit hoc hodie, cras, si volet, auferet; ut si
Detulerit fasces indigno, detrahet idem.
Pone, meum est, inquit: pono tristisque recedo.	35
Idem si clamet furem, neget esse pudicum,
Contendat laqueo collum pressisse paternum,
Mordear opprobriis falsis, mutemque colores?
Falsus honor juvat, et mendax infamia terret,
Quem, nisi mendosum et medicandum? Vir bonus est qu
Qui consulta patrum, qui leges juraque servat;	41
Quo multæ magnæque secantur judice lites;
Quo res sponsore et quo causæ teste tenentur:
Sed videt hunc omnis domus et vicinia tota
Introrsus turpem, speciosum pelle decora.	45
Nec furtum feci, nec fugi, si mihi dicat
Servus: Habes pretium, loris non ureris, aio.
¶ Non hominem occidi: ¶ Non pasces in cruce corv
¶ Sum bonus, et frugi: ¶ Renuit negitatque Sabellu
Cautus enim metuit foveam lupus, accipiterque	50
Suspectos laqueos, et opertum milius hamum.
Oderunt peccare boni virtutis amore;
Tu nihil admittes in te formidine pænæ:
Sit spes fallendi, miscebis sacra profanis.
Nam de mille fabæ modiis cum surripis unum,	55
Damnum est, non facinus mihi pacto lenius isto.	1
Vir bonus, omne forum quem spectat et omne tribuna	۸١,
Quandocunque Deos vel porco vel bove placat,
Jane pater, clare, clare cum dixit, Apollo:	60
Labra movet, metuens audiri: Pulchra Laverna,	00
Da mihi fallere, da justo sanctoque videri;

Noctem peccatis, et fraudibus objice nubem. Quî melior servo, quî liberior sit avarus, In triviis fixum cum se demittit ob assem, Non video: nam qui cupiet, metuet quoque; porro 65 Qui metuens vivet, liber mihi non erit unquam. Perdidit arma, locum virtutis deseruit, qui Semper in augenda festinat et obruitur re. Vendere cum possis captivum, occidere noli: Serviet utiliter: sine pascat durus, aretque; 70 Naviget ac mediis hiemet mercator in undis; Annonæ prosit; portet frumenta penusque. Vir bonus et sapiens audebit dicere; Penthcu, Rector Thebarum, quid me perferre patique 74 Indignum coges? ¶ Adimam bona. ¶ Nempe pecus, rem, Lectos, argentum: tollas licet. In manicis et Compedibus sævo te sub custode tenebo. ¶ Ipse Deus, simul atque volam, me solvet.—Opinor, Hoc sentit: Moriar; mors ultima linea rerum est.

EPISTOLA XVII.

AD SCEVAM

Quantis, Scæva, satis per te tibi consulis, ct scis
Quo tandem pacto deceat majoribus uti;
Disce, docendus adhuc quæ censet amiculus; ut si
Cæcus iter monstrare velit: tamen aspice, si quid
Et nos, quod cures proprium fecisse, loquamur.
Si te grata quies et primam somnus in horam
Delectat; si te pulvis strepitusque rotarum,
Si lædit caupona, Ferentinum ire jubebo:
Nam neque divitibus contingunt gaudia solis;
Nec vixit male, qui natus moriensque fefellit.
Si prodesse tuis, pauloque benignius ipsum
Te tractare volcs, accedes siccus ad unctum.

¶ Si pranderet olus patienter, regibus uti
Nollet Aristippus. ¶ Si sciret regibus uti,
Fastidiret olus, qui me notat. ¶ Utrius horum	15
Verba probes et facta, doce ; vel junior audi,
Cur sit Aristippi potior sententia: namque
Mordacem Cynicum sic eludebat, ut ajunt:
¶ Scurror ego ipse mihi, populo tu: rectius hoc et
Splendidius multo est. Equus ut me portet, alat rex,	20
Officium facio: tu poscis vilia rerum
Dante minor, quamvis fers te nullius egentem.—
Omnis Aristippum decuit color, et status, et res
Tentantem majora, fere præsentibus æquum.
Contra, quem duplici panno patientia velat,	25
Mirabor, vitæ via si conversa decebit.
Alter purpureum non exspectabit amictum,
Quidlibet indutus celeberrima per loca vadet,
Personamque feret non inconcinnus utramque:
Alter Mileti textam cane pejus et angue	30
Vitabit chlamydem; morietur frigore, si non Retuleris pannum: refer, et sine vivat ineptus,
Res gerere et captos ostendere civibus hostes,
Attingit solium Jovis, et cœlestia tentat:
Principibus placuisse viris, non ultima laus est.	35
Non cuivis homini contingit adire Corinthum.
Sedit qui timuit ne non succederet: esto:
Quid, qui pervenit, fecitne viriliter? Atqui
Hic est, aut nusquam, quod quærimus: hic onus hor	ret,
Ut parvis animis et parvo corpore majus;	40
Hic subit, et perfert. Aut virtus nomen inane est,
Aut decus et pretium recte petit experiens vir.
Coram rege sua de paupertate tacentes
Plus poscente ferent: distat, sumasne pudenter,
An rapias: atqui rerum caput hoc erat, hic fons.	45
"Indotata mihi soror est, paupercula mater,
"Et fundus nec vendibilis, nec pascere firmus,"
Qui dicit, clamat, "Victum date": succinit alter,

"Et mihi dividuo findetur munere quadra." Sed tacitus pasci si posset corvus, haberet 50 Plus dapis, et rixæ multo minus invidiæque. Brundusium comes aut Surrentum ductus amcenum. Qui queritur salebras, et acerbum frigus, et imbres, Aut eistam effractam aut subducta viatica plorat, Nota refert meretricis acumina, sæpe catellam, Sæpe periscelidem raptam sibi flentis; uti mox Nulla fides damnis verisque doloribus adsit. Nec semel irrisus triviis attollere curat Fracto erure planum : licet illi plurima manet Lacrima; per sanctum juratus dicat Osirim, 60 Credite, non ludo; crudeles tollite claudium: Quære peregrinum, vicinia rauca reclamat.

EPISTOLA XVIII.

AD LOLLIUM,

Si bene te novi, metues, liberrime Lolli, Scurrantis speciem præbere, professus amicum Ut matrona meretrici dispar crit atque Discolor, infido scurræ distabit amicus. Est huic diversum vitio vitium prope maius. Asperitas agrestis, et inconcinna, gravisque, Quæ se commendat tonsà cute, dentibus atris: Dum vult libertas dici mera, veraque virtus. VIRTUS est medium vitiorum, et utrinque reductum. Alter, in obsequium plus æquo pronus, et imi 10 Derisor lecti, sic nutum divitis horret, Sic iterat voces, et verba cadentia tollit. Ut puerum sævo credas dictata magistro Reddere, vel partes mimum tractare secundas: Alter, rixator, de lana sæpe caprina 15 Propugnat nugis armatus: Seilicet, ut non Sit mihi prima fides, et vere quod placet ut non Acriter elatrem, pretium ætas altera sordet.

Ambigitur quid enim? Castor sciat an Dolichos plus	s;
Brundusium Minucî melius via ducat, an Appî.	20
Quem damnosa Venus, quem præceps alea nudat,
Gloria quem supra vires et vestit et unguit,
Quem tenet argenti sitis importuna famesque,
Quem paupertatis pudor et fuga, dives amicus,
Sæpe decem vitiis instructior, odit et horret:	25
Aut, si non odit, regit: ac, veluti pia mater,
Plus quam se sapere et virtutibus esse priorem
Vult: et ait prope vera; Meæ (contendere noli)
Stultitiam patiuntur opes; tibi parvula res est:
Arcta decet sanum comitem toga; desine mecum	30
Certare. Eutrapelus cuicunque nocere volebat,
Vestimenta dabat pretiosa: beatus enim jam
Cum pulchris tunicis sumet nova consilia, et spes;
Dormiet in lucem; scorto postponet honestum
Officium; nummos alienos pascet; ad imum	35
Threx erit, aut olitoris aget mercede caballum.
Arcanum neque tu scrutaberis illius unquam;
Commissumque teges, et vino tortus et ira.
Nec tua laudabis studia, aut aliena reprendes;
Nec, cum venari volet ille, poëmata panges.	40
Gratia sic fratrum geminorum, Amphionis atque
Zethi, dissiluit, donec suspecta severo
Conticuit lyra; fraternis cessisse putatur
Moribus Amphion: tu cede potentis amici
Lenibus imperiis; quotiesque educet in agros	45
Ætolis onerata plagis jumenta canesque,
Surge, et inhumanæ senium depone Camænæ,
Cœnes ut pariter pulmenta laboribus emta;
Romanis solenne viris opus, utile famæ,
Vitæque et membris; præsertim cum valeas, et	50
Vel cursu superare canem vel viribus aprum
Possis: adde, virilia quod speciosius arma
Non-est qui tractet : seis que clamore corona

EPISTOLARUM	LIB.	1.	18.	195

Prœlia sustineas campestria : denique sævam
Militiam puer et Cantabrica bella tulisti,	55
Sub duce qui templis Parthorum signa refigit
Nunc, et siquid abest, Italis adjudicat armis.
Ac, ne te retrahas et inexcusabilis abstes,
Quamvis nil extra numerum fecisse modumque
Curas, interdum nugaris rure paterno:	60
Partitur lintres exercitus; Actia pugna
Te duce per pueros hostili more refertur;
Adversarius est frater; lacus, Adria; donec
Alterutrum velox victoria fronde coronet.
Consentire suis studiis qui crediderit te,	65
Fautor utroque tuum laudabit pollice ludum.
Protinus ut moneam (siquid monitoris eges tu)
Quid, de quo-que viro, et cui dicas, sæpe videto.
Percontatorem fugito: nam garrulus idem est;
Nec retinent patulæ commissa fideliter aures;	70
Et semel emissum volat inrevocabile verbum.
Non ancilla tuum jecur ulceret ulla, puerve,
Intra marmoreum venerandi limen amici:
Ne dominus pueri pulchri caræve puellæ
Munere te parvo beet, aut incommodus angat.	75
Qualem commendes, etiam atque etiam aspice; ne m	ox.
Incutiant aliena tibi peccata pudorem.
Fallimur, et quondam non dignum tradimus : ergo
Quem sua culpa premet, deceptus omitte tueri;
Ut, penitus notum si tentent crimina, serves,	80
Tuterisque tuo fidentem præsidio: qui
Dente Theonino cum circumroditur, ecquid
Ad te post paulo ventura pericula sentis?
Nam tua res agitur, paries cum proximus ardet;
Et neglecta solent incendia sumere vires.	85
Dulcis inexpertis cultura potentis amici,
Expertus metuit. Tu, dum tua navis in alto est,
Hoc age, ne mutata retrorsum te ferat aura.
Odamint bilanam triatas triatamana igagai

Sedatum celeres, agilem gnavum	nque remissi ; 90)
Potores liquidi media de luce Fa	alerni
Oderunt porrecta negantem pocu	ıla; quamvis
Nocturnos jures te formidare vap	ores.
Deme supercilio nubem: plerum	ique modestus
Occupat obscuri speciem, tacitur	nus acerbi. 95	ĭ
Inter cuneta leges et percunetabe	ere doctos,
Qua ratione queas traducere leni	ter ævum,
Ne te semper-inops agitet vexetq	jue eupido,
Ne pavor et rerum mediocriter u	tilium spes:
Virtutem doetrina paret, naturan	ie donet; 100)
Quid minuat curas, quid te tibi r	eddat amicum;
Quid pure tranquillet, honos, an
An secretum iter, et fallentis sem
Me quoties reficit gelidus Digent	*
Quem Mandela bibit, rugosus fri	igore pagus, 105
Quid sentire putas? quid credis,
Sit mihi quod nunc est; etiam n
Quod superest ævi, siquid supere	sse volunt Dii :
Sit bona librorum et provisæ frug	gis in annum
Copia; neu fluitem dubiæ spe pe	endulus horæ. 110
Sed satis est orare Jovem quæ de	onat et aufert:
Det vitam, det opes: æquum mi	animum ipse parabo.

EPISTOLA XIX.

AD M.ECENATEM.

Paisco si credis, Mæcenas docte, Cratino,
Nulla placere diu, nec vivere carmina possunt,
Quæ scribuntur aquæ potoribus: ut male sanos
Ascripsit Liber Satyris Faunisque poëtas,
Vina fere dulces olucrunt mane Camænæ.

Laudibus arguitur vini vinosus Homerus:
Ennius ipse pater nunquam nisi potus ad arma

Prosiluit dicenda. "Forum putealque Libonis " Mandabo siccis, adimam cantare severis." Hoc simul edixi, non cessavere poëtæ 10 Nocturno certare mero, putere diurno. Quid? siquis vultu torvo ferus, et pede nudo, Exiguæque togæ simulet textore Catonem, Virtutemne repræsentet moresque Catonis? Rupit Iarbitam Timagenis æmula lingua, 15 Dum studet urbanus, tenditque disertus haberi. Decipit exemplar vitiis imitabile: quod si Pallerem casu, biberent exsangue cuminum. O imitatores, servum pecus, ut milii bilem, Ut mihi sæpe jocum vestri movere tumultus! 20 Libera per vacuum posui vestigia princeps; Non aliena meo pressi pede: qui sibi fidit, Dux regit examen. Parios ego primus iambos Ostendi Latio, numeros animosque secutus Archilochi, non res et agentia verba Lycamben. 25 Ac. ne me foliis ideo brevioribus ornes, Quod timui mutare modos et carminis artem, Temperat Archilochi musam pede mascula Sappho, Temperat Alcæus; sed rebus et ordine dispar. Nec socerum quærit quem versibus oblinat atris, 30 Nec sponsæ laqueum famoso carmine nectit. Hunc ego, non alio dictum prius ore, Latinus Vulgavi fidicen: juvat immemorata ferentem Ingenuis oculisque legi manibusque teneri. Scire velis mea cur ingratus opuscula lector 35 Laudet ametque domi, premat extra limen iniquus? Non ego ventosæ plebis suffragia venor Impensis conarum et tritæ munere vestis; Non ego nobilium scriptorum auditor et ultor, Grammaticas ambire tribus et pulpita dignor : 40 Hinc illæ lacrymæ. Spissis indigna theatris Scripta pudet recitare, et nugis addere pondus,

Si dixi; Rides, ait, et Jovis auribus ista Servas: fidis enim manare poëtica mella Te solum, tibi pulcher. Ad hæc ego naribus uti 45 Formido: et, luctantis acuto ne secer ungui, Displicet iste locus, clamo, et diludia posco. Ludus enim genuit trepidum certamen et iram. Ira truces inimicitias et funchre bellum

EPISTOLA XX.

AD LIBRUM SUUM.

5

VERTUMNUM Janumque, liber, spectare videris; Scilicet ut prostes Sosiorum pumice mundus. Odisti claves, et grata sigilla pudico: Paucis ostendi gemis, et communia laudas, Non ita nutritus. Fuge quo descendere gestis: Non erit emisso reditus tibi. Quid miser egi? Quid volui? dices, ubi quid te læserit, et scis In breve te cogi, plenus cum languet amator. Quod si non odio peccantis desipit augur, Carus cris Romæ, donec te deserat ætas. 10 Contrectatus ubi manibus sordescere vulgi Coeperis, aut tineas pasces taciturnus inertes, Aut fugies Uticam, aut vinctus mitteris Ilerdam. Ridebit monitor non exauditus; ut ille Qui male parentem in rupes protrusit asellum 15 Iratus: quis enim invitum servare laboret? Hoc quoque te manet, ut pueros elementa docentem Occupet extremis in vicis balba senectus. Cum tibi sol tepidus plures admoverit aures. Me libertino natum patre et in tenui re 20 Majores pennas nido extendisse loqueris: Ut quantum generi demas, virtutibus addas:

Me primis urbis belli placuisse domique,
Corporis exigui, præcanum, solibus aptum,
Irasci celerem, tamen ut placabilis essem. 25
Forte meum siquis te percontabitur ævum,
Me quater undenos sciat implevisse Decembres,
Collegam Lepidum quo duxit Lollius anno.

Q. HORATII FLACCI

CARMEN SÆCULARE.

(METRUM XVIII.)

PHŒBE silvarumque potens Diana,
Lucidum cœli decus, O colendi
Semper et culti, date quæ precamur
Tempore prisco;
Quo Sibyllini monuere versus,	ā
Virginestlectas, puerosque castos,
Diis, quibus septem placuere colles,
Dicere carmen.
Alme Sol, curru nitido diem qui
Promis et celas, aliusque et idem	10
Nasceris; possis nihil urbe Roma
Visere majus.
Rite maturos aperire partus
Lenis Ilithyia, tuere matres;
Sive tu Lucina probas vocari,	15
Seu Genitalis.
Diva, producas subolem, patrumque
Prosperes decreta super jugandis
Fæminis, prolisque novæ feraci
Lege marita:	20
Certus undenos decies per annos
Orbis ut cantus referatque ludos,
Ter die claro, totiesque grata
Nocte, frequentes.
Vosque veraces cecinisse Pareæ,	25
Quod semel dictum est, stabilisque rerum
Terminus servat ; bona jam peractis
Impoito fata

(0	o	1
4	-	v

CARMEN SECULARE.

202 Q. HORATII FLACCI CARMEN SÆCULARE.

Si Palatinas videt æquus aras,	65
Remque Romanam Latiumque felix
Alterum in lustrum meliusque semper
Proroget ævum.
Quæque Aventinum tenet Algidumque,
Quindecim Diana preces virorum	70
Curet, et votis puerorum amicas
Applicet aures.
Hæc Jovem sentire Deosque cunctos,
Spem bonam certamque domum reporto,
Doctus et Phœbi chorus et Dianæ	75
Dicere laudes.	•

Q. HORATII FLACCI

CARMINUM

LIBER QUARTUS.

ODE I. (M. XV.)

AD VENEREM.

Intermissa, Venus, diu,
Rursus bella moves? Parce, precor, precor.
Non sum qualis eram bonæ
Sub regno Cinaræ. Desine, dulcium
Mater sæva Cupidinum,	5
Circa lustra decem flectere mollibus
Jam durum imperiis. Abi
Quo blandæ juvenum te revocant preces.
Tempestivius in domum
Pauli, purpureis ales oloribus,	10
Comissabere Maximi,
Si torrere jecur quæris idoneum.
Namque et nobilis et decens
Et pro solicitis non tacitus reis,
Et centum puer artium,	15
Late signa feret militiæ tuæ.
Et quandoque potentior
Largis muneribus riserit æmuli,
Albanos prope te lacus
Ponet marmoream, sub trabe citrea.	20
Illic plurima naribus
Duces tura, lyræque et Berecyntiæ
Delectabere tibiæ
Mistis carminibus, non sine fistula.
Illic bis pucri die	25
Numen cum teneris virginibus tuum

Laudantes, pede candido
In morem Saliûm, ter quatient humum.
Me nec fœmina, nec puer
Jam, nec spes animi credula mutui,	30
Nec certare juvat mero,
Nec vincire novis tempora floribus.
Sed cur, heu! Ligurine, cur
Manat rara meas lacrima per genas?
Cur facunda parum decoro	35
Inter verba cadit lingua silentio?
Nocturnis ego somniis
Jam captum teneo: jam volucrem sequor
Te per gramina Martii
Campi; te per aquas, dure, volubiles.	40
 The state of t
ODE II. (m. xviii.)

AD ANTONIUM IULUM.

PINDARUM quisquis studet æmulari, Jule, ceratis ope Dædalea Nititur pennis, vitreo daturus Nomina ponto. Monte decurrens velut amnis, imbres 5 Quem super notas aluere ripas, Fervet immensusque ruit profundo Pindarus ore, Laurea donandus Apollinari, Seu per audaces nova Dithyrambos 10 Verba devolvit, numerisque fertur Lege solutis; Seu Deos, regesve canit, Deorum Sanguinem, per quos cecidere justa Morte Centauri, eecidit tremendæ 15 Flamma Chimæræ;

CARMINUM LIB. IV. 2.	205
Sive, quos Elea domum reducit
Palma cœlestes, pugilemve equumve
Dicit, et centum potiore signis
Munere donat;	20
Flebili sponsæ juvenemve raptum
Plorat; et vires animumque moresque
Aureos educit in astra, nigroque
Invidet Orco.
Multa Dircæum levat aura cycnum,	25
Tendit, Antoni, quoties in altos
Nubium tractus: ego, apis Matina
More modoque
Grata carpentis thyma per laborem
Plurimum, circa nemus uvidique	30
Tiburis ripas operosa parvus
Carmina fingo.
Concines majore Poeta plectro
Cæsarem, quandoque trahet feroces
Per Sacrum clivum, merita decorus	35
Fronde, Sicambros;
Quo nihil majus meliusve terris
Fata donavere, bonique Divi;
Nec dabunt, quamvis redeant in aurum
Tempora priscum.	40
Concines lætosque dies, et urbis
Publicum ludum, super impetrato
Fortis Augusti reditu, forumque
Litibus orbum.
Tum meæ (siquid loquar audiendum)	45
Vocis accedet bona pars: et, O Sol
Pulcher, O laudande, canam, recepto
Cæsare felix.
Isque dum procedit, Io Triumphe!
Non semel dicemus, Io Triumphe!	50
Civitas omnis; dabimusque Divis
Tura benignis.

Te decem tauri totidemque vaccæ,
Me tener solvet vitulus relicta
Matre, qui largis juvenescit herbis	55
In mea vota,
Fronte curvatos imitatus ignes
Tertium Lunæ referentis ortum,
Qua notam duxit, niveus videri,
Cætera fulvus.	60
ODE III. (m. xv.)
AD MELPOMENEN.
QUEM tu Melpomene semel
Nascentem placido lumine videris,
Illum non labor Isthmius
Clarabit pugilem, non equus impiger
Curru ducet Achaico	5
Victorem; neque res bellica Deliis
Ornatum foliis ducem,
Quod regum tumidas contuderit minas,
Ostendet Capitolio;
Sed quæ Tibur aquæ fertile præfluunt,	10
Et spissæ nemorum comæ,
Fingent Æolio carmine nobilem.
Romæ principis urbium
Dignatur suboles inter amabiles
Vatum ponere me choros;	15
Et jam dente minus mordeor invido.
O testudinis aureæ
Dulcem quæ strepitum, Pieri, temperas!
O mutis quoque piscibus
Donatura cycni, si libeat, sonum!	20
Totum muneris hoc tui est,
Quod monstror digito prætereuntium,
Romanæ fidicen lyræ:
Quod spiro et placeo (si placeo), tuum est.

ODE IV. (M. XIX.)

QUALEM ministrum fulminis alitem
(Cui rex Deorum regnum in aves vagas
Permisit, expertus fidelem
Jupiter in Ganymede flavo)
Olim juventas et patrius vigor	5
Nido laborum propulit inscium,
Vernique, jam nimbis remotis,
Insolitos docuere nisus
Venti paventem; mox in ovilia
Demisit hostem vividus impetus;	10
Nunc in reluctantes dracones
Egit amor dapis atque pugnæ:
Qualemve lætis caprea pascuis
Intenta, fulvæ matris ab uberc
Jam lacte depulsum leonem,	15
Dente novo peritura, vidit:
Videre Rhætis bella sub Alpibus
Drusum gerentem Vindelici; quibus
Mos unde deductus per omne
Tempus Amazonia securi	20
Dextras obarmet, quærere distuli,
Nec scire fas est omnia: sed diu
Lateque victrices catervæ,
Consiliis juvenis repressæ,
Sensere quid mens rite, quid indoles	25
Nutrita faustis sub penetralibus
Posset, quid Augusti paternus
In pueros animus Nerones.
Fortes creantur fortibus; et bonis
Est in juvencis, est in equis patrum	30
Virtus; nec imbellem feroces
Progenerant aquilæ columbam.
Doctrina sed vim promovet insitam;
Rections cultus nectors reherent:

35
40
45
50
55 60
• 65
· ·
70

Spes omnis, et fortuna nostri Nominis, Asdrubale interempto. Nil Claudiæ non perficient manus. Quas et benigno numine Jupiter Defendit, et curæ sagaces Expediunt per acuta belli.

75

ODE V. (M. XVI.)

AD AUGUSTUM.

Divis orte bonis, optime Romulæ Custos gentis, abes jam nimium diu ; Maturum reditum pollicitus patrum Sancto concilio, redi. Lucem redde tuæ, dux bone, patriæ; 5 Instar veris enim vultus ubi tuus Affulsit populo, gratior it dies, Et soles melius nitent. Ut mater juvenem, quem Notus invido Flatu Carpathii trans maris æquora 10 Cunctantem spatio longius annuo Dulci distinet a domo. Votis ominibusque et precibus vocat, Curvo nec faciem littore dimovet : Sic desideriis icta fidelibus 1.5 Quærit patria Cæsarem. Tutus bos etenim rura perambulat: Nutrit rura Ceres, almaque Faustitas; Pacatum volitant per mare navitæ; Culpari metuit Fides: 20 Nullis polluitur casta domus stupris: Mos et lex maculosum edomuit nefas: Laudantur simili prole puerperæ; Culpam Pæna premit comes.

Quis Parthum paveat? quis gelidum Scythen?

25

Quis Germania quos horrida parturit
Fœtus, incolumi Cæsare? quis feræ
Bellum curet Iberiæ?
Condit quisque diem collibus in suis,
Et vitem viduas ducit ad arbores;	30
Hinc ad vina redit lætus, et alteris
Te mensis adhibet Deum:
Te multa prece, te prosequitur mero
Defuso pateris; et Laribus tuum
Miscet numen, uti Græcia Castoris,	35
Et magni memor Herculis.
Longas O utinam, dux bone, ferias
Præstes Hesperiæ, dicimus integro
Sicci mane die, dicimus uvidi,
Cum sol Occano subest.	40
ODE VI. (M. XVIII.)
AD APOLLINEM.
Dive, quem proles Niobæa magnæ
Vindicem linguæ, Tityosque raptor
Sensit, et Trojæ prope victor altæ
Phthius Achilles,
Cæteris major, tibi miles impar;	5
Filius quamquam Thetidos marinæ
Dardanas turres quateret tremenda
Cuspide pugnax.
Ille, mordaci velut icta ferro
Pinus, aut impulsa cupressus Euro,	10
Procidit late, posuitque collum in Pulvere Teucro.
Ille non inclusus equo Minervæ
Sacra mentito male feriatos
Troas et lætam Priami choreis	15

Falleret aulam:

CARMINUM LIB. IV. 7.	211
Sed palam captis gravis (heu nefas! heu!)
Nescios fari pueros Achivis
Ureret flammis, etiam latentem
Matris in alvo:	20
Ni tuis victus Venerisque gratæ
Vocibus Divûm pater adnuisset
Rebus Æneæ potiore ductos
Alite muros.
Doctor Argivæ Fidicen Thaliæ,	25
Phœbe, qui Xantho lavis amne crines,
Dauniæ defende decus Camænæ,
Levis Agyicu.
Spiritum Phœbus mihi, Phœbus artem
Carminis nomenque dedit Poetæ.	30
Virginum primæ, puerique claris
Patribus orti
Deliæ tutela Deæ, fugaces
Lyncas et cervos cohibentis arcu,
Lesbium servate pedem, meique	35
Pollicis ictum;
Rite Latonæ puerum canentes,
Rite crescentem face Noctilucam,
Prosperam frugum, celeremque pronos

Nupta jam dices, Ego Diis amicum, Sæculo festas referente luces, Reddidi carmen, docilis modorum Vatis Horati.

Volvere menses.

ODE VII. (M. IX.)

AD TORQUATUM.

DIFFUGERE nives, redeunt jam gramina campis, Arboribusque comæ: 40

Mutat terra vices, et decrescentia ripas
Flumina prætereunt:
Gratia cum Nymphis geminisque sororibus audet	5
Ducere nuda choros.
IMMORTALIA ne speres, monet annus, et almum
Quæ rapit hora diem.
Frigora mitescunt Zephyris, ver proterit æstas
Interitura, simul	10
Pomifer autumnus fruges effuderit, et mox
Bruma recurrit iners.
Damna tamen celeres reparant cœlestia lunæ:
Nos ubi decidimus
Quo pius Æneas, quo dives Tullus et Ancus,	15
Pulvis et umbra sumus.
Quis scit an adjiciant hodiernæ crastina summæ
Tempora Dii superi?
Cuncta manus avidas fugient hæredis, amico
Quæ dederis animo.	20
Cum semel occideris, et de te splendida Minos
Fecerit arbitria,
Non, Torquate, genus, non te facundia, non te
Restituet pietas:
Infernis neque enim tenebris Diana pudicum	25
Liberat Hippolytum;
Nec Lethæa valet Theseus abrumpere caro
Vincula Pirithoo.

ODE VIII. (M. XIV.)

AD CENSORINUM.

Donarem pateras grataque commodus, Censorine, meis æra sodalibus: Donarem tripodas, præmia fortium

Graiorum; neque tu pessima munerum
Ferres, divite me scilicet artium,	5
Quas aut Parrhasius protulit, aut Scopas;
Hic saxo, liquidis ille coloribus
Sollers nunc hominem ponere, nunc Deum.
Sed non hæc mihi vis: nec tibi talium
Res est aut animus deliciarum egens.	10
Gaudes carminibus: carmina possumus
Donare, et pretium dicere muneris.
Non incisa notis marmora publicis,
Per quæ spiritus et vita redit bonis
Post mortem ducibus; non celeres fugæ,	15
Rejectæque retrorsum Annibalis minæ;
Non incendia Carthaginis impiæ,
Ejus qui domita nomen ab Africa
Lucratus rediit, clarius indicant
Laudes, quam Calabræ Pierides: neque,	20
Si chartæ sileant quod bene feceris,
Mercedem tuleris. Quid foret Iliæ
Mavortisque puer, si taciturnitas
Obstaret meritis invida Romuli?
Ereptum Stygiis fluctibus Æacum	25
Virtus et favor et lingua potentium
Vatum divitibus consecrat insulis.
DIGNUM laude virum Musa vetat mori,
Cœlo Musa beat. Sie Jovis interest
Optatis epulis impiger Hercules:	30
Clarum Tyndaridæ sidus ab infimis
Quassas eripiunt æquoribus rates:
Ornatus viridi tempora pampino
Liber vote bones ducit ad evitus.

ODE IX. (m. xix.)

AD LOLLIUM.

NE forte credas interitura, quæ
Longe sonantem natus ad Aufidum
Non ante vulgatas per artes
Verba loquor socianda chordis:
Non, si priores Mæonius tenet	5
Sedes Homerus, Pindaricæ latent,
Ceæque, et Alcæi minaces,
Stesichorique graves Camœnæ.
Nec, siquid olim lusit Anacreon,
Delevit ætas: spirat adhuc amor,	10
Vivuntque commissi calores
Æoliæ fidibus puellæ.
Non sola comtos arsit adulteri
Crines, et aurum vestibus illitum
Mirata, regalesque cultus	15
Et comites, Helene Lacæna;
Primusve Teucer tela Cydonio
Direxit arcu: non semel Ilios
Vexata: non pugnavit ingens
Idomeneus Sthenelusque solus	20
Dicenda Musis prœlia: non ferox
Hector, vel acer Deiphobus graves
Excepit ietus pro pudicis
Conjugibus puerisque primus.
Vixere fortes ante Agamemnona	25
Multi; sed omnes illacrymabiles
Urguentur ignotique longa
Nocte, carent quia vate sacro-
Paulum sepultæ distat inertiæ
Celata virtus: non ego te meis	30
Chartis inornatum silebo,
Totve tuos patiar labores

5

Impune, Lolli, carpere lividas Obliviones. Est animus tibi Rerumque prudens, et secundis 35 Temporibus dubiisque rectus; Vindex avaræ fraudis, et abstinens Ducentis ad se cuncta vecuniæ; Consulque non unius anni, Sed quoties bonus atque fidus 10 Judex honestum prætulit utili, et Rejecit alto dona nocentium Vultu, et per obstantes catervas Explicuit sua victor arma. 45 Non possidentem multa vocaveris Recte beatum; rectius occupat Nomen beati, qui Deorum Muneribus sapienter uti, Duramque callet pauperiem pati; Pejusque leto flagitium timet : 50 Non ille pro caris amicis Aut patria timidus perire.

ODE X. (M. XIII.)

AD LIGURINUM.

O CRUDELIS adhuc, et Veneris muneribus potens,
Insperata tuæ cum veniet pluma superbiæ,
Et, quæ nunc humeris involitant, deciderint comæ,
Nunc et qui color est puniceæ flore prior rosæ,
Mutatus Ligurinum in faciem verterit hispidam:
Dices, Heu! (quoties te in speculo videris alterum)
Quæ mens est hodie, cur cadem non puero fuit?
Vel cur his animis incolumes non redeunt genæ?

ODE XI. (M. XVIII.)

AD PHYLLIDEM.

Est mihi nonum superantis annum
Plenus Albani cadus; est in horto,
Phylli, nectondis apium coronis;
Est hederæ vis
Multa, qua crines religata fulges:	ð
Ridet argento domus: ara castis
Vincta verbenis avet immolato
Spargier agno:
Cuncta festinat manus: huc et illuc
Cursitant mistæ pueris puellæ:	10
Sordidum flammæ trepidant rotantes
Vertice fumum.
Ut tamen nôris quibus advoceris
Gaudiis; Idus tibi sunt agendæ,
Qui dies mensem Veneris marinæ	15
Findit, Aprilem;
Jure solennis mihi, sanctiorque
Pene natali proprio, quod ex hac
Luce Mæcenas meus affluentes
Ordinat annos.	20
Telephum, quem tu petis, occupavit
(Non tuæ sortis juvenem) puella
Dives et lasciva: tenetque grata
Compede vinctum.
Terret ambustus Phaethon avaras	25
Spes; et exemplum grave præbet ales
Pegasus, terrenum equitem gravatus
Bellerophonten,
Semper ut te digna sequare; et, ultra
Quam licet sperare nefas putando,	30
Disparem vites : age jam meorum
Finis amorum,

CARMINUM LIB. IV. 12.	217
	•
(Non enim posthac alia calebo
Fœmina,) condisce modos amanda
Voce quos reddas: minuuntur atræ	35
Carmine curæ.
ODE XII. (M. XVI.)
AD VIRGILIUM.
JAM veris comites, quæ mare temperant.
Impellunt animæ lintea Thraciæ:
Jam nec prata rigent, nec fluvii strepunt
Hiberna nive turgidi.
Nidum ponit, Ityn flebiliter gemens,	5
Infelix avis, et Cecropiæ domus
Æternum opprobrium, quod male barbaras
Regum est ulta libidines.
Dicunt in tenero gramine pinguium	10
Custodes ovium carmina fistula,	10
Delectant que Deum, cui pecus et nigri
Colles Arcadiæ placent.
Adduxere sitim tempora, Virgili:
Sed pressum Calibus ducere Liberum	1.0
Si gestis, juvenum nobilium cliens,	15
Nardo vina mereberis.
Nardi parvus onyx eliciet cadum,
Qui nunc Sulpiciis accubat horreis,
Spes donare novas largus, amaraque Curarum cluere efficax;	20
Ad quæ si properas gaudia, cum tua	20
Velox merce veni: non ego te meis
Immunem meditor tinguere poeulis,
9 1
Plena dives ut in domo.

Verum pone moras, et studium lueri; Nigrorumque memor, dum licet, ignium,

25

Misce stultitiam consiliis brevem : Dulce est desipere in loco.

ODE XIII. (M. XVII.)

AD LYCEN.

Audivere, Lyce, Dii mea vota; Dii
Audivere, Lyce: fis anus, et tamen
Vis formosa videri ;
Ludisque, et bibis impudens,
Et cantu tremulo pota Cupidinem	£
Lentum solicitas; ille virentis et Doctæ psallere Chiæ
Pulchris excubat in genis.
Importunus enim transvolat aridas
Quercus, et refugit te, quia luridi	10
Dentes, te quia rugæ
Turpant et capitis nives.
Nec Coæ referunt jam tibi purpuræ,
Nec clari lapides, tempora, quæ semel
Notis condita fastis	15
Inclusit volucris dies.
Quo fugit Venus? Heu! quove color? decens
Quo motus? quid habes illius, illius,
Quæ spirabat amores,
Quæ me surpuerat mihi?	20
Felix post Cinaram, notaque et artium
Gratarum facies: sed Cinaræ breves
Annos fata dederunt,
Servatura diu parem
Cornicis vetulæ temporibus Lycen;	25
Possent ut juvenes visere fervidi,
Multo non sine risu,
Delapsam in cincres facem.

ODE XIV. (M. X1X.)

AD AUGUSTUM.

Que cura patrum, quæve Quiritium,
Plenis honorum muneribus tuas,
Auguste, virtutes in ævum
Per titulos memoresque fastos
Æternet? O qua sol habitabiles	5
Illustrat oras, maxime principum,
Quem legis expertes Latinæ
Vindelici didicere nuper
Quid Marte posses: milite nam tuo
Drusus Genaunos, implacidum genus,	10
Brencosque veloces, et arces
Alpibus impositas tremendis
Dejecit acer plus vice simplici.
Major Neronum mox grave prœlium
Commisit, immanesque Rhætos	15
Auspiciis pepulit secundis;
Spectandus in certamine Martio,
Devota morti pectora liberæ
Quantis fatigaret ruinis:
Indomitas prope qualis undas	20
Exercet Auster, Pleïadum choro
Scindente nubes, impiger hostium
Vexare turmas, et frementem
Mittere equum medios per ignes.
Sic tauriformis volvitur Aufidus,	25
Qui regna Dauni præfluit Appuli,
Cum sævit, horrendamque cultis
Diluviem meditatur agris :
Ut barbarorum Claudius agmina
Ferrata vasto diruit impetu;	30
Primosque et extremos metendo,
Stravit humum sine clade victor

Te copias, te consilium et tuos
Præbente Divos: nam tibi, quo die
Portus Alexandrea supplex	35
Et vacuam patefecit aulam,
Fortuna lustro prospera tertio
Belli secundos reddidit exitus,
Laudemque et optatum peractis
Imperiis decus arrogavit.	40
Te Cantaber non ante domabilis,
Medusque et Indus, te profugus Scythes
Miratur, O tutela præsens
Italiæ dominæque Romæ!
Te, fontium qui celat origines	45
Nilusque, et Ister, te rapidus Tigris,
Te beluosus qui remotis
Obstrepit Oceanus Britannis,
Te non paventis funera Galliæ,
Duræque tellus audit Iberiæ.	50
Te cæde gaudentes Sicambri
Compositis venerantur armis.

ODE XV. (M. XIX.)

AUGUSTI LAUDES.

Phœbus volentem prœlia me loqui
Victas et urbes increpuit lyra,
Ne parva Tyrrhenum per æquor
Vela darem. Tua, Cæsar, ætas
Fruges et agris rettulit uberes,
Et signa nostro restituit Jovi,
Derepta Parthorum superbis
Postibus, et vacuum duellis
Janum Quirini clausit, et ordinem
Rectum evaganti fræna licentiæ

10

CARMINUM LIB. IV. 19.	221
Injecit, emovitque culpas,
Et veteres revocavit artes;
Per quas Latinum nomen et Italæ
Crevere vires, famaque, et imperî
Porrecta majestas ad ortum	15
Solis ab Hesperio cubili.
Custode rerum Cæsare, non furor
Civilis, aut vis exiget otium ;
Non ira, quæ procudit enses,
Et miseras inimicat urbes.	20
Non, qui profundum Danubium bibunt,

25

30

Edicta rumpent Julia; non Getæ, Non Seres infidive Persæ, Non Tanain prope flumen orti. Nosque et profestis lucibus et sacris, Trojamque et Anchisen et almæ Progeniem Veneris canemus.

Inter jocosi munera Liberi, Cum prole matronisque nostris, Rite Deos prius adprecati, Virtute functos, more patrum, duces, Lydis remixto carmine tibiis,

Q. HORATH FLACCI

EPISTOLARUM

LIBER SECUNDUS.

EPISTOLA I.

AD AUGUSTUM.

Cum tot sustineas et tanta negotia solus,
Res Italas armis tuteris, moribus ornes,
Legibus emendes; in publica commoda peccem,
Si longo sermone morer tua tempora, Cæsar.
Romulus, et Liber pater, et cum Castore Pollux,	5
Post ingentia facta Deorum in templa recepti,
Dum terras hominumque colunt genus, aspera bella
Componunt, agros assignant, oppida condunt;
Ploravere suis non respondere favorem
Speratum meritis: diram qui contudit Hydram,	10
Notaque fatali portenta labore subegit,
Comperit invidiam supremo fine domari.
Urit enim fulgore suo, qui prægravat artes
Infra se positas: extinctus amabitur idem.
Præsenti tibi maturos largimur honores,	15
Jurandasque tuum per nomen ponimus aras,
Nil oriturum alias, nil ortum tale fatentes.
Sed tuus hoc populus sapiens et justus in uno,
Te nostris ducibus, te Graiis anteferendo,
Cætera nequaquam simili ratione modoque	20
Æstimat; et, nisi quæ terris semota suisque
Temporibus defuncta videt, fastidit et odit:
Sie fautor veterum, ut tabulas peccare vetantes,
Quas bis quinque viri sanxerunt, fœdera regum
Vel Gabiis vel eum rigidis æquata Sabinis,	25

Pontificum libros, annosa volumina vatum,
Dictitet Albano Musas in monte locutas.
Si, quia Græcorum sunt antiquissima quæque
Scripta vel optima, Romani pensatur eadem
Scriptores trutina, non est quod multa loquamur:	3()
Nil intra est oleam, nil extra est in nuce duri.
Venimus ad summum fortunæ: pinguimus atque
Psallimus, et luctamur Achivis doctius unetis.
Si meliora dies, ut vina, poëmata reddit,
Scire velim, pretium chartis quotus arroget annus.	35
Scriptor abhine annos centum qui decidit, inter
Perfectos veteresque referri debet? an inter
Viles atque novos? excludat jurgia finis.
¶ Est vetus atque probus, centum qui perficit annos.
¶ Quid, qui deperiit minor uno mense, vel anno,	40
Inter quos referendus crit? veteresne poëtas?
An quos et præsens et postera respuat ætas?
Iste quidem veteres inter ponetur honeste,
Qui vel mense brevi vel toto est junior anno.
¶ Utor permisso, caudæque pilos ut equinæ,	45
Paulatim vello, et demo unum, demo etiam unum;
Dum cadat elusus ratione ruentis acervi,
Qui redit ad fastos, et virtutem æstimat annis,
Miraturque nihil nisi quod Libitina sacravit.
Ennius, et sapiens et fortis, et alter Homerus,	50
Ut critici dicunt, leviter curare videtur,
Quo promissa cadant, et somnia Pythagorea.
Nævius in manibus non est, et mentibus hæret
Pene recens? adeo sanctum est vetus omne poëma.
Ambigitur quoties uter utro sit prior, aufert	55
Pacuvius docti famam senis, Accius alti:
Dicitur Afranî toga convenisse Menandro;
Plautus ad exemplar Siculi properare Epicharmi;
Vincere Cacilius gravitate, Terentius arte.
Hos ediscit, et hos arcto stipata theatro	60
Spectat Roma potens; habet hos numeratque poëtas

Ad nostrum tempus Livî scriptoris ab ævo. Interdum vulgus rectum videt: est ubi peccat. Si veteres ita miratur laudatque poëtas. Ut nihil anteferat, nihil illis comparet, errat: 65 Si quædam nimis antique, si pleraque dure Dicere cedit eos, ignave multa fatetur: Et sapit, et mecum facit, et Jove judicat æquo. Non equidem insector, delendave carmina Livî Esse reor, memini quæ plagosum mihi parvo 70 Orbilium dictare; sed emendata videri. Pulchraque, et exactis minimum distantia, miror. Inter quæ verbum emicuit si forte decorum, et Si versus paulo concinnior unus et alter, Injuste totum ducit venditque poëma. 75 Indignor quidquam reprehendi, non quia crasse Compositum illepideve putetur, sed quia nuper; Nec veniam antiquis, sed honorem et præmia posci. Recte neene crocum floresque perambulet Attæ Fabula si dubitem, clament periisse pudorem 80 Cuneti pene patres; ca cum reprehendere coner Quæ gravis Æsopus, quæ doctus Roscius egit: Vel quia nil rectum, nisi quod placuit sibi, ducunt; Vel quia turpe putant parere minoribus, et quæ Imberbi didicere, senes perdenda fateri. 85 Jam Saliare Numæ carmen qui laudat, et illud Quod mecum ignorat, solus vult scire videri; Ingeniis non ille favet plauditque sepultis, Nostra sed impugnat, nos nostraque lividus edit. Quod si tam Graiis novitas invisa fuisset 90 Quam nobis, quid nunc esset vetus? aut quid haberet Quod legeret tereretque viritim publicus usus? Ut primum positis nugari Gracia bellis Copit, et in vitium fortuna labier æqua, Nunc athletarum studiis, nunc arsit equorum; 95 Marmoris aut eboris fabros aut æris amavit; Suspendit picta vultum mentemque tabella;

Nune tibicinibus, nune est gavisa tragædis: Sub nutrice puella velut si luderet infans, Quod cupide petiit, mature plena reliquit. 100 Quid placet aut odio est, quod non mutabile credas? Hoc paces habuere bonæ, ventique secundi. Romæ dulce diu fuit et solenne reclusa Mane domo vigilare, clienti promere jura, Cautos nominibus rectis expendere nummos, 105 Majores audire, minori dicere per quæ Crescere res posset, minui damnosa libido. Mutavit mentem populus levis, et calet uno Scribendi studio: puerique patresque severi Fronde comas vincti comant, et carmina dictant. 110 Ipse ego, qui nullos me affirmo scribere versus, Invenior Parthis mendacior; et prius orto Sole vigil, calamum et chartas et scrinia posco. Navim agere ignarus navis timet; abrotonum ægro Non audet nisi qui didicit, dare: quod medicorum est, 115 Promittunt medici : tractant fabrilia fabri : Scribimus indocti doctique poëmata passim. Hic error tamen, et levis hæc insania quantas Virtutes habeat, sic collige: vatis avarus Non temere est animus; versus amat, hoc studet unum; Detrimenta, fugas servorum, incendia ridet; 121 Non fraudem socio, puerove incogitat ullam Pupillo: vivit siliquis et pane secundo. Militiæ quanquam piger et malus, utilis urbi ; Si das hoc, parvis quoque rebus magna juvari. 125 Os tenerum pueri balbumque poëta figurat; Torquet ab obscœnis jam nunc sermonibus aurem; Mox etiam pectus præceptis format amicis Asperitatis et invidiæ corrector et iræ; Recte facta refert; orientia tempora notis 130 Instruit exemplis; inopem solatur et ægrum. Castis cum pueris ignara puella mariti Disceret unde preces, vatem ni Musa dedisset?

Poscit opem chorus, et præsentia numina sentit;	104
Cœlestes implorat aquas docta prece blandus;	135
Avertit morbos, metuenda pericula pellit; Impetrat et pacem, et locupletem frugibus annum.
Carmine Dii superi placantur, carmine Manes.
Agricolæ prisci, fortes, parvoque beati,
Condita post frumenta, levantes tempore festo	140
Corpus, et ipsum animum spe finis dura ferentem,	140
Cum sociis operum, pueris, et conjuge fida,
Tellurem porco, Sylvanum lacte piabant,
Floribus et vino Genium, momorem brevis ævi.
Fescennina per hunc inventa licentia morem	145
Versibus alternis opprobria rustica fudit;	1 10
Libertasque recurrentes accepta per annos
Lusit amabiliter, donec jam sævus apertam
In rabiem verti cœpit jocus, et per honestas
Ire domos impune minax: doluere cruento	150
Dente lacessiti; fuit intactis quoque cura
Conditione super communi: quin etiam lex
Pœnaque lata, malo quæ nollet carmine quenquam
Describi: vertere modum, formidine fustis,
Ad benedicendum delectandumque redacti.	155
Græcia capta ferum victorem cepit, et artes
Intulit agresti Latio: sic horridus ille
Defluxit numerus Saturnius, et grave virus
Munditiæ pepulere: sed in longum tamen ævum
Manserunt, hodicque manent vestigia ruris.	160
Serus enim Græcis admovit acumina chartis;
Et post l'unica bella quietus, quærere cœpit
Quid Sophocles et Thespis et Æschylus utile ferren	t.
Tentavit quoque rem; si digne vertere posset;
Et placuit sibi, natura sublimis et acer:	165
Nam spirat tragicum satis, et feliciter audet;
Sed turpem putat inscite metuitque lituram.
Creditur, ex medio quia res arcessit, habere
Sudoris minimum; sed habet Comcedia tanto

Plus oneris, quanto veniæ minus. Aspice Plautus 170 Quo pacto partes tutctur amantis ephebi; Ut patris attenti; lenonis ut insidiosi: Quantus sit Dossennus edacibus in parasitis; Quam non adstricto percurrat pulpita socco. Gestit enim nummum in loculos demittere, post hoc 175 Securus cadat an recto stet fabula talo. Quem tulit ad scenam ventoso Gloria curru, Exanimat lentus spectator, sedulus inflat, Sic leve, sic parvum est, animum quod laudis avarum Subruit ac reficit. Valeat res ludicra, si me Palma negata macrum, donata reducit opimum. Sæpe etiam audacem fugat hoc terretque poëtam, Quod numero plures, virtute et honore minores, Indocti stolidique, et depugnare parati, Si discordet eques, media inter carmina poscunt 185 Aut ursum aut pugiles: his nam plebecula gaudet. Verum equiti quoque jam migravit ab aure voluptas Omnis ad incertos oculos et gaudia vana. Quattuor aut plures aulæa premuntur in horas, Dum fugiunt equitum turmæ peditumque catervæ; 190 Mox trahitur manibus regum fortuna retortis, Esseda festinant, pilenta, petorrita, naves; Captivum portatur ebur, captiva Corinthus. Si foret in terris, rideret Democritus; seu Diversum confusa genus panthera camelo; 195 Sive Elephas albus vulgi converteret ora: Spectaret populum ludis attentius ipsis, Ut sibi præbentem mimo spectacula plura. Scriptores autem narrare putaret asello Fabellam surdo: nam quæ pervincere voccs 200 Evaluere sonum, referunt quem nostra theatra? Garganum mugire putes nemus, aut mare Tuscum: Tanto cum strepitu ludi spectantur, et artes, Divitiæque peregriuæ; quibus oblitus actor Cum stetit in scena, concurrit dextera lævæ. 205

Dixit adhuc aliquid? ¶ Nil sane. ¶ Quid placet e	ergo?
¶ Lana Tarentino violas imitata veneno.	Ü
Ac ne forte putes me, quæ facere ipse recusem,
Cum recte tractent alii, laudare maligne;
Ille per extentum funem mihi posse videtur	210
Ire poëta, meum qui pectus inaniter angit,
Irritat, mulcet, falsis terroribus implet
Ut magus; et modo me Thebis, modo ponit Athe	nis.
Verum age, et his, qui se lectori credere malunt,
Quam spectatoris fastidia ferre superbi,	215
Curam redde brevem; si munus Apolline dignum
Vis complere libris, et vatibus addere calcar,
Ut studio majore petant Helicona virentem.
Multa quidem nobis facimus mala sæpe Poëtæ,
(Ut vineta egomet cædam mea,) cum tibi librum	. 220
Solicito damus, aut fesso; cum lædimur, unum
Siquis amicorum est ausus reprêndere versum;
Cum loca jam recitata revolvimus inrevocati;
Cum lamentamur, non apparere labores
Nostros, et tenui deducta poëmata filo;	225
Cum speramus eo rem venturam, ut simul atque
Carmina rescieris nos fingere, commodus ultro
Arcessas, et egere vetes, et scribere cogas.
Sed tamen est operæ pretium cognoscere, quales
Ædituos habeat belli spectata domique	230
Virtus, indigno non committenda poëtæ.
Gratus Alexandro regi Magno fuit ille
Chœrilus, incultis qui versibus et male natis
Rettulit acceptos, regale nomisma, Philippos.
Sed veluti tractata notam labemque remittunt	235
Atramenta, fere scriptores carmine fædo
Splendida facta linunt. Idem rex ille, poëma
Qui tam ridiculum tam care prodigus emit,
Edicto vetuit nequis se, præter Apellen,
Pingeret, aut alius Lysippo duceret æra	240
Fortic Alexandri vultum cimulantia Quad si

Judicium subtile videndis artibus illud Ad libros et ad hæc Musarum dona vocares, Bœotûm in crasso jurares aere natum. At neque dedecorant tua de se judicia, atque 245 Munera, quæ multa dantis cum laude tulerunt, Dilecti tibi Virgilius Variusque poëtæ: Nec magis expressi vultus per ahenea signa. Quam per vatis opus mores animique virorum Clarorum apparent. Nec sermones ego mallem 250 Repentes per humum, quam res componere gestas; Terrarumque situs, et flumina dicere, et arces Montibus impositas, et barbara regna, tuisque Auspiciis totum confecta duella per orbem, Claustraque custodem pacis cohibentia Janum, 255 Et formidatam Parthis te principe Romam ; Si, quantum cuperem, possem quoque: sed neque parvum Carmen majestas recipit tua, nec meus audet Rem tentare pudor, quam vires ferre recusent. Sedulitas autem, stulte quem diligit, urguet 260 Præcipue cum se numeris commendat et arte: Discit enim citius meminitque libentius illud Quod quis deridet, quam quod probat et veneratur. Nil moror officium quod me gravat: ac neque ficto In pejus vultu proponi cereus usquam, 265 Nec prave factis decorari versibus opto: Ne rubeam pingui donatus munere, et una Cum scriptore meo capsa porrectus aperta, Deferar in vicum vendentem tus et odores, Et piper, et quidquid chartis amicitur ineptis. 270

EPISTOLA II.

AD JULIUM FLORUM.

FLORE, bono claroque fidelis amice Neroni, Siquis forte velit puerum tibi vendere natum

Tibure vel Gabiis, et tecum sic agat; Hic et Candidus, et talos a vertice pulcher ad imos,
Fiet eritque tuus nummorum millibus octo,	5
Verna ministeriis ad nutus aptus heriles,
Litterulis Græcis imbutus, idoneus arti
Cuilibet, argilla quidvis imitaberis uda:
Quin etiam canet indoctum, sed dulce bibenti.
Multa fidem promissa levant, ubi plenius æquo	10
Laudat venales, qui vult extrudere, merces.
Res urguet me nulla; meo sum pauper in ære:
Nemo hoc mangonum faceret tibi: non temere a me
Quivis ferret idem; semel hic cessavit, et, ut fit,
In scalis latuit metuens pendentis habenæ.	15
Des nummos, excepta nihil te si fuga lædit.
Ille ferat pretium, pænæ securus, opinor.
¶ Prudens emisti vitiosum; dicta tibi est lex:
Insequeris tamen hune, et lite moraris iniqua.
¶ Dixi me pigrum proficiscenti tibi, dixi	20
Talibus officiis prope mancum; ne mea sævus
Jurgares ad te quod epistola nulla veniret.
Quid tum profeci, mecum facientia jura
Si tamen attentas? Quereris super hoc etiam, quod
Exspectata tibi non mittam carmina mendax.	25
Luculli miles collecta viatica multis
Ærumnis, lassus dum noctu stertit, ad assem
Perdiderat: post hoc vehemens lupus, et sibi et hosti
Iratus pariter jejunis dentibus acer,
Præsidium regale loco dejecit, ut aiunt,	30
Summe munito, et multarum divite rerum.
Clarus ob id factum, donis ornatur honestis;
Accipit et bis dena super sestertia nummûm.
Forte sub hoc tempus castellum evertere prætor
Nescio quod cupiens, hortari cœpit cundem	35
Verbis que timido quoque possent addere mentem.
I bone quo virtus tua te vocat; i pede fausto,
Grandia laturus meritorum pramia : onid stas ?

Post hæc ille catus, quantumvis rusticus, Ibit, Ibit co quo vis, qui zonam perdidit, inquit. 40 Romæ nutriri mihi contigit atque doceri, Iratus Graiis quantum nocuisset Achilles: Adjecere bonæ paulo plus artis Athenæ; Scilicet ut possem curvo dignoscere rectum, Atque inter sylvas Academi quærere verum. 15 Dura sed emovere loco me tempora grato; Civilisque rudem belli tulit æstus in arma, Cæsaris Augusti non responsura lacertis. Unde simul primum me dimisere Philippi, Decisis humilem pennis, inopemque paterni 50 Et laris et fundi, paupertas impulit audax Ut versus facerem: sed, quod non desit, habentem Quæ poterunt unquam satis expurgare cicutæ, Ni melius dormire putem quam scribere versus? Singula de nobis anni prædantur cuntes; 55 Eripuere jocos, venerem, convivia, ludum; Tendunt extorquere poëmata: quid faciam vis? Denique non omnes cadem mirantur amantque: Carmine tu gaudes; hic delectatur Iambis; Ille Bioneis sermonibus, et sale nigro. 60 Tres mihi convivæ prope dissentire videntur, Poscentes vario multum diversa palato. Quid dem? quid non dem? renuis tu, quod jubet alter; Quod petis, id sanc est invisum acidumque duobus. Præter cætera, me Romæne poëmata censes 65 Scribere posse, inter tot curas, totque labores? Hic sponsum vocat, hic auditum scripta, relictis Omnibus officiis: cubat hic in colle Quirini, Hic extremo in Aventino; visendus uterque; Intervalla vides humane commoda. ¶ Verum 70 Puræ sunt plateæ, nihil ut meditantibus obstet. Festinat calidus mulis gerulisque redemtor; Torquet nune lapidem, nune ingens machina tignum; Tristia robustis luctantur funera plaustris;

Hac rabiosa fugit canis, hac lutulenta ruit sus:	75
I nunc, et versus tecum meditare canoros.
Scriptorum chorus omnis amat nemus, et fugit urbes
Rite cliens Bacchi, somno gaudentis et umbra:
Tu me inter strepitus nocturnos atque diurnos
Vis canere, et contracta sequi vestigia vatum?	80
Ingenium, sibi quod vacuas desumsit Athenas,
Et studiis annos septem dedit, insenuitque
Libris et curis, statua taciturnius exit
Plerumque, et risu populum quatit: hic ego rerum
Fluctibus in mediis, et tempestatibus urbis,	85
Verba lyræ motura sonum connectere digner?
Frater erat Romæ consulti rhetor, ut alter
Alterius sermone meros audiret honores;
Gracchus ut hic illi foret, huic ut Mucius ille.
Qui minus argutos vexat furor iste poëtas?	90
Carmina compono, hic elegos; mirabile visu
Cælatumque novem Musis opus. Aspice primum,
Quanto cum fastu, quanto molimine circum-
Spectemus vacuam Romanis vatibus ædem.
Mox etiam, si forte vacas, sequere, et procul audi	95
Quid ferat, et quare sibi nectat uterque coronam.
Cædimur, et totidem plagis consumimus hostem,
Lento Samnites ad lumina prima duello.
Discedo Alcæus puncto illius: ille meo quis?
Quis nisi Callimachus? si plus adposcere visus,	100
Fit Mimnermus, et optivo cognomine crescit.
Multa fero, ut placem genus irritabile vatum,
Cum scribo, et supplex populi suffragia capto:
Idem, finitis studiis, et mente recepta,
Obturem patulas impune legentibus aures.	105
Ridentur mala qui componunt carmina: verum
Gaudent scribentes, et se venerantur, et ultro,
Si taceas, laudant quidquid scripsere, beati.
At qui legitimum cupiet fecisse poëma,	170
Cum tabulis animum censoris sumet honesti;	110

Audebit quæcunque parum splendoris habebunt, Et sine pondere erunt, et honore indigna ferentur, Verba movere loco, quamvis invita recedant, Et versentur adhuc intra penetralia Vestæ. 115 Obscurata diu populo bonus eruet, atque Proferet in lucem speciosa vocabula rerum, Quæ priscis memorata Catonibus atque Cethegis, Nunc situs informis premit et deserta vetustas: Adsciscet nova, quæ genitor produxerit usus. Vehemens et liquidus puroque simillimus amni, 120 Fundet opes, Latiumque beabit divite lingua. Luxuriantia compescet, nimis aspera sano Levabit cultu, virtute carentia tollet : Ludentis speciem dabit; et torquebitur, ut qui Nunc satyrum, nunc agrestem cyclopa movetur. 125 ¶ Prætulerim scriptor delirus inersque videri, Dum mea delectent mala me, vel denique fallant, Quam sapere, et ringi. Fuit haud ignobilis Argis, Qui se credebat miros audire tragædos, In vacuo lætus sessor plausorque theatro; 130 Cætera qui vitæ servaret munia recto More; bonus sane vicinus, amabilis hospes, Comis in uxorem, posset qui ignoscere servis, Et signe læso non insanire lagenæ, Posset qui rupem et puteum vitare patentem. 135 Hic ubi cognatorum opibus curisque refectus, Expulit helleboro morbum, bilemque meraco, Et redit ad sese; Pol, me occidistis amici, Non servâstis, ait, cui sic extorta voluptas, Et demtus per vim mentis gratissimus error. 140 ¶ Nimirum sapere est abjectis utile nugis, Et tempestivum pueris concedere ludum ; Ac non verba sequi fidibus modulanda Latinis, Sed veræ numerosque modosque ediscere vitæ. Quocirca mecum loquor hæc, tacitusque recordor; Si tibi nulla sitim finiret copia lymphæ,

Narrares medicis: quod quanto plura parasti,
Tanto plura cupis, nulline faterier audes?
Si vulnus tibi monstrata radice vel herba
Non fieret levius, fugeres, radice vel herba	150
Proficiente nihil, curarier? Audieras, cui
Rem dii donârint, illi decedere pravam
Stultitiam; et cum sis nihilo sapientior, ex quo
Plenior es; tamen uteris monitoribus iisdem?
At si divitiæ prudentem reddere possent,	155
Si cupidum timidumque minus te; nempe ruberes,
Viveret in terris te siquis avarior uno.
Si proprium est quod quis libra mercatus et ære est,
Quædam, si eredis consultis, mancipat usus;
Qui te pascit ager, tuus est; et villicus Orbî,	160
Cum segetes occat, tibi mox frumenta daturas,
Te dominum sentit; das nummos, accipis uvam,
Pullos, ova, cadum temeti : nempe modo isto
Paulatim mercaris agrum, fortasse trecentis,
Aut etiam supra, nummorum millibus emtum.	165
Quid refert, vivas numerato nuper an olim?
Emtor Arieini quondam Veientis et arvi
Emtum coenat olus, quamvis aliter putat; emtis
Sub noctem gelidam lignis calefactat ahenum;
Sed vocat usque suum, qua populus adsita certis	170
Limitibus vicina refugit jurgia; tanquam
Sit proprium quidquam, puncto quod mobilis horæ,
Nunc prece, nunc pretio, nunc vi, nunc sorte suprem	ıa,
Permutet dominos, et cedat in altera jura.
Sic quia perpetuus nulli datur usus, et hæres	175
Hæredem alterius, velut unda supervenit undam;
Quid vici profunt, aut horrea? quidve Calabris
Saltibus adjecti Lucani, si metit Orcus
Grandia cum parvis, non exorabilis auro?
Gemmas, marmor, ebur, Tyrrhena sigilla, tabellas,	180
Argentum, vestes Gætulo murice tinetas,
Sunt qui non habeant, est qui non curat habere.

Cur alter fratrum cessare, et ludere, et ungui
Præferat Herodis palmetis pinguibus; alter,
Dives et importunus, et umbram lucis ab ortu	185
Silvestrem flammis et ferro mitiget agrum,
Scit Genius, natale comes qui temperat astrum,
Naturæ Deus humanæ, mortalis in unum-
Quodque caput, vultu mutabilis, albus et ater.
Utar, et ex modico quantum res poscet acervo	190
Tollam; nec metuam quid de me judicet hæres;
Quod non plura datis invenerit; et tamen idem
Scire volam quantum simplex hilarisque nepoti
Discrepet, et quantum discordet parcus avaro.
Distat enim, spargas tua prodigus, an neque sumtum	195
Invitus facias, neque plura parare labores;
Ac potius, puer ut festis quinquatribus olim,
Exiguo gratoque fruaris tempore raptim.
Pauperies immunda domu procul absit: ego, utrum
Nave ferar magna an parva, ferar unus et idem.	200
Non agimur tumidis velis Aquilone secundo;
Non tamen adversis ætatem ducimus Austris;
Viribus, ingenio, specie, virtute, loco, re,
Extremi primorum, extremis usque priores.
Non es avarus: abi. Quid cætera? jam simul isto	205
Cum vitio fugere? caret tibi pectus inani
Ambitione? caret mortis formidine, et ira?
Somnia, terrores magicos, miracula, sagas,
Nocturnos lemures portentaque Thessala rides?
Natales grate numeras? ignoscis amicis?	210
Lenior et melior fis accedente senecta?
Quid te exemta juvat spinis de pluribus una?
Vivere si recte nescis, decede peritis.
Lusisti satis, edisti satis, atque bibisti;
Tempus abire tibi est; ne potum largius æquo	215
Rideat et pulset lasciva decentius ætas.

Q. HORATII FLACCI

DE ARTE POETICA,

AD PISONES EPISTOLA.

Humano capiti cervicem pictor equinam
Jungere si velit, et varias inducere plumas,
Undique collatis membris, ut turpiter atrum
Desinat in piscem mulier formosa superne,
Spectatum admissi risum teneatis, amici?	5
Credite, Pisones, isti tabulæ fore librum
Persimilem, cujus, velut ægri somnia, vanæ
Fingentur species; ut nec pes, nec caput uni
Reddatur formæ. ¶ Pictoribus atque poëtis
Quidlibet audendi semper fuit æqua potestas.	10
¶ Scimus, et hanc veniam petimusque damusque vicis	sim:
Sed non ut placidis coëant immitia; non ut
Serpentes avibus geminentur, tigribus agni.
Inceptis gravibus plerumque et magna professis
Purpureus, late qui splendeat, unus et alter	15
Assuitur pannus ; cum lucus et ara Dianæ,
Et properantis aquæ per amœnos ambitus agros,
Aut flumen Rhenum, aut pluvius describitur arcus:
Sed nunc non erat his locus: et fortasse cupressum
Scis simulare; quid hoc, si fractis enatat exspes	20
Navibus, ære dato qui pingitur? amphora cœpit
Institui; currente rota cur urceus exit?
Denique sit quod vis, simplex duntaxat et unum.
Maxima pars vatum, pater et juvenes patre digni,
Decipimur specie recti: brevis esse laboro,	25
Obscurus fio: sectantem lenia nervi
Deficiunt animique: professus grandia turget:

Serpit humi tutus nimium; timidusque procellæ. Qui variare cupit rem prodigialiter unam, Delphinum sylvis appingit, fluctibus aprum. 30 In vitium ducit culpæ fuga, si caret arte. Æmilium circa ludum faber imus et ungues Exprimet, et molles imitabitur ære capillos. Infelix operis summa, quia ponere totum Nesciet: hunc ego me, siquid componere curem, 35 Non magis esse velim, quam pravo vivere naso, Spectandum nigris oculis nigroque capillo, Sumite materiam vestris qui scribitis æquam Viribus, et versate diu quid ferre recusent, Quid valeant humeri : cui lecta potenter erit res, 40 Nec facundia deseret hunc, nec lucidus ordo. Ordinis hæc virtus erit et venus, aut ego fallor, Ut jam nunc dicat, jam nunc debentia dici Pleraque differat, et præsens in tempus omittat. In verbis etiam tenuis cautusque serendis: 45 Hoc amet, hoc spernat promissi carminis auctor. Dixeris egregie, notum si callida verbum Reddiderit junctura novum. Si forte necesse est Indiciis monstrare recentibus abdita rerum, Fingere cinctutis non exaudita Cethegis 50 Continget; dabiturque licentia sumpta pudenter. Et nova fictaque nuper habebunt verba fidem, si Græco fonte cadant, parce detorta: quid autem Cæcilio Plautoque dabit Romanus, ademtum Virgilio Varioque? ego cur, acquirere pauca 55 Si possum, invideor, cum lingua Catonis et Eunî Sermonem patrium ditaverit, et nova rerum Nomina protulerit? Licuit, semperque licebit. Signatum præsente nota procudere nomen. Ut silvæ foliis pronos mutantur in annos; 60 Prima cadunt: ita verborum vetus interit ætas, Et juvenum ritu florent modo nata, vigentque. Debemur morti nos nostraque; sive receptus

Terra Neptunus classes Aquilonibus arcet,
Regis opus; sterilisque diu palus, aptaque remis,	65
Vicinas urbes alit, et grave sentit aratrum;
Seu cursum mutavit iniquum frugibus amnis,
Doctus iter melius: mortalia facta peribunt;
Nedum sermonum stet honos, et gratia vivax.
Multa renascentur quæ jam cecidere, cadentque	70
Quæ nunc sunt in honore vocabula, si volet usus,	•
Quem penes arbitrium est et jus et norma loquendi.
Res gestæ regumque ducumque, et tristia bella,
Quo scribi possent numero, monstravit Homerus.
Versibus impariter junctis querimonia primum,	75
Post etiam inclusa est voti sententia compos:
Quis tamen exiguos elegos emiserit auctor,
Grammatici certant, et adhuc sub judice lis est.
Archilochum proprio rabies armavit iambo:
Hunc socci cepere pedem, grandesque cothurni,	80
Alternis aptum sermonibus, et populares
Vincentem strepitus, et natum rebus agendis.
Musa dedit fidibus Divos, puerosque Deorum,
Et pugilem victorem, et equum certamine primum,
Et juvenum curas, et libera vina referre.	85
Descriptas servare vices operumque colores
Cur ego si nequeo ignoroque, Poëta salutor?
Cur nescire, pudens prave, quam discere malo?
Versibus exponi tragicis res comica non vult:
Indignatur item privatis, ac prope socco	90
Dignis carminibus narrari cœna Thyestæ.
Singula quæque locum teneant sortita decenter.
Interdum tamen et vocem comædia tollit,
Iratusque Chremes tumido delitigat ore:
Et tragicus plerumque dolet sermone pedestri.	95
Telephus et Peleus, cum pauper et exsul, uterque
Projicit ampullas, et sesquipedalia verba,
Si curat cor spectantis tetigisse querela.
Non estic est pulchra esca poimata dulcia sunto

Et quocunque volent, animum auditoris agunto.	100
Ut ridentibus arrident, ita flentibus adsunt
Humani vultus: si vis me flere, dolendum est
Primum ipsi tibi; tunc tua me infortunia lædent.
Telephe, vel Peleu, male si mandata loqueris,
Aut dormitabo, aut ridebo: tristia mœstum	105
Vultum verba decent; iratum, plena minarum;
Ludentem, lasciva; severum, seria dictu.
Format enim natura prius nos intus ad omnem
Fortunarum habitum; juvat, aut impellit ad iram,
Aut ad humum mœrore gravi deducit, et angit;	110
Post effert animi motus interprete lingua.
Si dicentis erunt fortunis absona dicta,
Romani tollent equites peditesque cachinnum.
Intererit multum Davusne loquatur, an Heros;
Maturusne senex, an adhuc florente juventa	115
Fervidus; et matrona potens, an sedula nutrix;
Mercatorne vagus, cultorne virentis agelli;
Colchus, an Assyrius; Thebis nutritus, an Argis.
Aut famam sequere, aut sibi convenientia finge,
Scriptor. Honoratum si forte reponis Achillem;	120
Impiger, iracundus, inexorabilis, acer,
Jura neget sibi nata, nihil non arroget armis:
Sit Medea ferox invictaque, flebilis Ino,
Perfidus Ixion, Io vaga, tristis Orestes.
Siquid inexpertum scenæ committis, et audes	125
Personam formare novam, servetur ad imum
Qualis ab incepto processerit, et sibi constet
Difficile est proprie communia dicere: tuque
Rectius Iliacum carmen deducis in actus,
Quam si proferres ignota indictaque primus.	130
Publica materies privati juris erit, si
Nec circa vilem patulumque moraberis orbem :
Nec verbum verbo curabis reddere fidus
Interpres; nec desilies imitator in arctum,
Unde pedem proferre pudor vetet, aut operis lex.	135

Nec sic incipies, ut scriptor cyclicus olim; "Fortunam Priami cantabo et nobile bellum." Quid dignum tanto feret hic promissor hiatu? Parturiunt montes, nascetur ridiculus mus. Quanto rectius hic, qui nil molitur inepte: 140 "Dic mihi, Musa, virum, captæ post tempora Trojæ, "Qui mores hominum multorum vidit et urbes." Non fumum ex fulgore, sed ex fumo dare lucem Cogitat, ut speciosa dehinc miracula promat, Antiphaten, Scyllamque, et cum Cyclope Charybdin; 145 Nec reditum Diomedis ab interitu Meleagri, Nec gemino bellum Trojanum orditur ab ovo. Semper ad eventum festinat, et in medias res, Non secus ac notas, auditorem rapit, et quæ Desperat tractata nitescere posse, relinquit; 150 Atque ita mentitur, sic veris falsa remiscet, Primo ne medium, medio ne discrepet imum. Tu, quid ego, et populus mecum desideret, audi. Si plausoris eges aulæa manentis, et usque Sessuri donec cantor, Vos plaudite, dicat, 155 Ætatis cujusque notandi sunt tibi mores; Mobilibusque decor naturis dandus et annis. Reddere qui voces jam scit puer, et pede certo Signat humum, gestit paribus colludere, et iram Colligit ac ponit temere, et mutatur in horas. 160 Imberbus juvenis, tandem custode remoto. Gaudet equis canibusque, et aprici gramine campi; Cereus in vitium flecti, monitoribus asper, Utilium tardus provisor, prodigus æris, Sublimis, cupidusque, et amata relinquere pernix. 165 Conversis studiis, ætas animusque virilis Quærit opes et amicitias, inservit honori, Commisisse cavet quod mox mutare laboret. Multa senem circumveniunt incommoda; vel quod Quærit, et inventis miser abstinet, ac timet uti; 170 Vel quod res omnes timide gelideque ministrat, Dilator, spe longus, iners, avidusque futuri, Difficilis, querulus, laudator temporis acti Se puero, censor castigatorque minorum. Multa ferunt anni venientes commoda secum. 175 Multa recedentes adimunt. Ne forte seniles-Mandentur juveni partes, pueroque viriles, Semper in adjunctis ævogue morabimur aptis. Aut agitur res in scenis, aut acta refertur. Segnius irritant animos demissa per aurem. 180 Quam quæ sunt oculis subjecta fidelibus, et quæ Ipse sibi tradit spectator. Non tamen intus Digna geri, promes in scenam: multaque tolles Ex oculis, quæ mox narret facundia præsens. Nec pueros coram populo Medea trucidet, 185 Aut humana palam coquat exta nefarius Atreus, Aut in avem Progne vertatur, Cadmus in anguem; Quodcunque ostendis mihi sic, incredulus odi. Neve minor, neu sit quinto productior actu Fabula, quæ posci vult, et spectata reponi: 190 Nec Deus intersit, nisi dignus vindice nodus Inciderit: nec quarta loqui persona laboret. Actoris partes chorus officiumque virile Defendat: neu quid medios intercinat actus. Quod non proposito conducat et hæreat apte : 195 Ille bonis faveatque et consilietur amice; Et regat iratos, et amet peccare timentes: Ille dapes laudet mensæ brevis: ille salubrem Justitiam, legesque, et apertis otia portis: Ille tegat commissa; Deosque precetur et oret. 200 Ut redeat miseris, abeat fortuna superbis. Tibia non, ut nunc orichalco vincta, tubæque Æmula, sed tenuis simplexque foramine pauco Aspirare, et adesse choris erat utilis, atque Nondum spissa nimis complere sedilia flatu; 205 Quo sane populus numerabilis, utpote parvus, Et frugi, castusque verecundusque coibat.

Postquam cœpit agros extendere victor, et urbem Latior amplecti murus, vinoque diurno Placari Genius festis impune diebus, 210 Accessit numerisque modisque licentia major. Indoctus quid enim saperet, liberque laborum, Rusticus urbano confusus, turpis honesto: Sic priscæ motumque et luxuriem addidit arti Tibicen, traxitque vagus per pulpita vestem: 215 Sic etiam fidibus voces crevere severis, Et tulit eloquium insolitum facundia præceps ; Utiliumque sagax rerum, et divina futuri, Sortilegis non discrepuit sententia Delphis. Carmine qui tragico vilem certavit ob hircum. 220 Mox etiam agrestes Satyros nudavit, et asper Incolumi gravitate jocum tentavit, eo quod Illecebris erat et grata novitate morandus Spectator, functusque sacris, et potus, et exlex. Verum ita risores, ita commendare dicaces 225 Conveniet Satyros, ita vertere seria ludo; Ne quicunque Deus, quicunque adhibebitur heros, Regali conspectus in auro nuper et ostro. Migret in obscuras humili sermone tabernas; Aut, dum vitat humum, nubes et inania captet. 230 Effutire leves indigna tragædia versus; Ut festis matrona moveri jussa diebus, Intererit Satyris paulum pudibunda protervis. Non ego inornata et dominantia nomina solum, Verbaque, Pisones, Satyrorum scriptor amabo; 235 Nec sic enitar tragico differre colori, Ut nihil intersit Davusne loquatur, et audax Pythias, emuncto lucrata Simone talentum, An custos famulusque Dei Silenus alumni. Ex noto fictum carmen sequar, ut sibi quivis 240 Speret idem; sudet multum, frustraque laboret Ausus idem : tantum series juncturaque pollet; Tantum de medio sumtis accedit honoris.

Silvis deducti caveant, me judice, Fauni,
Ne, velut innati triviis ac penc forenses,	245
Aut nimium teneris juvenentur versibus unquam;
Aut immunda crepent ignominiosaque dicta:
Offenduntur enim quibus est equus, et pater, et res;
Nec, siquid fricti ciceris probat, et nucis emtor,
Æquis accipiunt animis, donantve corona.	250
Syllaba longa brevi subjecta vocatur Iambus;
Pes citus; unde etiam trimetris accrescere jussit
Nomen Iambeis, cum senos redderet ictus,
Primus ad extremum similis sibi: non ita pridem,
Tardior ut paulo graviorque veniret ad aures,	255
Spondeos stabiles in jura paterna recepit
Commodus et patiens; non ut de sede secunda
Cederet aut quarta socialiter : hic et in Accî
Nobilibus Trimetris apparet rarus, et Ennî.
In scenam missos magno cum pondere versus,	260
Aut operæ celeris nimium curaque carentis,
Aut ignoratæ premit artis crimine turpi.
Non quivis videt immodulata poëmata judex;
Et data Romanis venia est indigna poëtis.
Idcircone vager, scribamque licenter? Ut omnes	265
Visuros peccata putem mea, tutus, et intra
Spem veniæ cautus; vitavi denique culpam,
Non laudem merui. Vos exemplaria Græca
Nocturna versate manu, versate diurna.
At vestri proavi Plautinos et numeros, et	270
Laudavere sales; nimium patienter utrumque,
Ne dicam stulte, mirati; si modo ego et vos
Scimus inurbanum lepido seponere dicto,
Legitimumque sonum digitis callemus et aure.
Ignotum tragicæ genus invenisse Camænæ	275
Dicitur, et plaustris vexisse poëmata Thespis,
Quæ canerent agerentque peruncti fæcibus ora.
Post hunc personæ, pallæque repertor honestæ
Æschylus, et modicis instravit pulpita tignis,

Et docuit magnumque loqui, nitique cothurno.	280
Successit vetus his Comædia, non sine multa
Laude; sed in vitium libertas excidit, et vim
Dignam lege regi: lex est accepta, chorusque
Turpiter obticuit, sublato jure nocendi.
Nil intentatum nostri liquere Poëtæ:	285
Nec minimum meruere decus, vestigia Græca
Ausi deserere, et celebrare domestica facta;
Vel qui prætextas, vel qui docuere togatas.
Nec virtute foret clarisve potentius armis,
Quam lingua, Latium, si non offenderet unum-	290
Quemque Poëtarum limæ labor et mora. Vos, O
Pompilius sanguis, carmen reprehendite quod non Multa dies et multa litura coërcuit, atque
Præsectum decies non castigavit ad unguem,
Ingenium misera quia fortunatius arte	295
Credit, et excludit sanos Helicone poëtas
Democritus, bona pars non ungues ponere curat,
Non barbam, secreta petit loca, balnea vitat.
Nanciscetur enim pretium nomenque poëtæ,
Si tribus Anticyris caput insanabile nunquam	300
Tonsori Licino commiserit. O ego lævus,
Qui purgor bilem sub verni temporis horam!
Non alius faceret meliora poëmata; verum
Nil tanti est; ergo fungar vice cotis, acutum
Reddere quæ ferrum valet, exsors ipsa secandi:	305
Munus et officium, nil scribens ipse, docebo;
Unde parentur opes; quid alat formetque poëtam;
Quid deceat, quid non; quo virtus, quo ferat error.
Scribendi recte, sapere est et principium et fons:
Rem tibi Socraticæ poterunt ostendere chartæ:	310
Verbaque provisam rem non invita sequentur.
Qui didicit patriæ quid debeat, et quid amicis,
Quo sit amore parens, quo frater amandus et hospes,
Quod sit conscripti, quod judicis officium, quæ
Partes in bellum missi ducis, ille profecto	315

Reddere personæ scit convenientia cuique. Respicere exemplar vitæ morumque jubebo Doctum imitatorem, et veras hinc ducere voces. Interdum speciosa locis morataque recte Fabula, nullius veneris, sine pondere et arte, 320 Valdius oblectat populum meliusque moratur, Quam versus inopes rerum, nugæque canoræ. Graiis ingenium, Graiis dedit ore rotundo Musa loqui, præter laudem nullius avaris: Romani pueri longis rationibus assem 325 Discunt in partes centum diducere. ¶ Dicat Filius Albini, Si de quincunce remota est Uncia, quid superat? ¶ Poteras dixisse, Triens. ¶ Rem poteris servare tuam. Redit uncia, quid fit? ¶ Semis. ¶ An, hæc animos ærugo et cura peculi 330 Cum semel imbuerit, speramus carmina fingi Posse linenda cedro, et levi servanda cupresso? Aut prodesse volunt aut delectare poëtæ, Aut simul et jucunda et idonea dicere vitæ. Quicquid præcipies, esto brevis; ut cito dicta 335 Percipiant animi dociles, teneantque fideles: Omne supervacuum pleno de pectore manat. Ficta voluptatis causa, sint proxima veris; Ne, quodeunque volet, poscat sibi fabula credi, Neu pransæ Lamiæ vivum puerum extrahat alvo. 340 Centuriæ seniorum agitant expertia frugis; Celsi prætereunt austera poëmata Rhamnes: Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci. Lectorem delectando, pariterque monendo. Hic meret æra liber Sosiis; hic et mare transit, 345 Et longum noto scriptori prorogat ævum. Sunt delicta tamen quibus ignovisse velimus: Nam neque chorda sonum reddit quem vult manus et mens, Poscentique gravem persæpe remittit acutum; Nec semper feriet quodeunque minabitur arcus. 350 Verum ubi plura nitent in carmine, non ego paucis

Offendar maculis, quas aut incuria fudit, Aut humana parum cavit natura. Quid ergo est? Ut scriptor si peccat idem librarius usque, Quamvis est monitus, venia caret; et citharcedus 355 Ridetur, chorda qui semper oberrat eadem : Sic mihi, qui multum cessat, fit Chcerilus ille, Quem bis terque bonum, cum risu miror; et idem Indignor quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus? Verum operi longo fas est obrepere somnum. 360 Ut pictura, poësis: erit quæ, si propius stes Te capiat magis, et quædam, si longius abstes. Hæc amat obscurum, volet hæc sub luce videri, Judicis argutum quæ non formidat acumen: Hæc placuit semel, hæc decies repetita placebit, 365 O major juvenum, quamvis et voce paterna Fingeris ad rectum, et per te sapis, hoc tibi dictum Tolle memor; certis medium et tolerabile rebus Recte concedi: consultus juris et actor Causarum mediocris abest virtute diserti 370 Messalæ, nec seit quantum Cascellius Aulus; Sed tamen in pretio est; mediocribus esse poëtis Non homines, non Dii, non concessere columnæ. Ut gratas inter mensas symphonia discors Et crassum unguentum, et Sardo cum melle papaver 375 Offendunt; poterat duci quia cœna sine istis: Sic animis natum inventumque poëma juvandis, Si paulum a summo decessit, vergit ad imum. Ludere qui nescit campestribus abstinet armis. Indoctusque pilæ discive trochive quiescit, 380 Ne spissæ risum tollant impune coronæ: Qui nescit, versus tamen audet fingere! ¶ Quid ni? Liber et ingenuus, præsertim census equestrem Summam nummorum, vitioque remotus ab omni. ¶ Tu nihil invita dices faciesve Minerva: 385 Id tibi judicium est, ea mens: siquid tamen olim Scripseris, in Mæcî descendat judicis aures,

Et patris, et nostras, nonumque prematur in annum,
Membranis intus positis. Delere licebit,
Quod non edideris; nescit vox missa reverti.	390
Silvestres homines sacer interpresque Deorum
Cædibus et vietu fædo deterruit Orpheus;
Dictus ob hoc lenire tigres, rabidosque leones:
Dictus et Amphion Thebanæ conditor arcis
Saxa movere sono testudinis, et prece blanda	395
Ducere quo vellet: fuit hæc sapientia quondam,
Publica privatis secernere, sacra profanis,
Concubitu prohibere vago, dare jura maritis,
Oppida moliri, leges incidere ligno:
Sie honor et nomen divinis vatibus atque	400
Carminibus venit. Post hos insignis Homerus,
Tyrtæusque mares animos in Martia bella
Versibus exacuit; dictæ per carmina sortes;
Et vitæ monstrata via est; et gratia regum
Pieriis tentata modis: ludusque repertus,	405
Et longorum operum finis: ne forte pudori
Sit tibi Musa lyræ solers, et cantor Apollo.
Natura fieret laudabile carmen, an arte,
Quæsitum est: ego nec studium sine divite vena;
Nec rude quid possit video ingenium: alterius sic	410
Altera poscit opem res, et conjurat amice.
Qui studet optatam cursu contingere metam,
Multa tulit fecitque puer; sudavit et alsit;
Abstinuit venere et vino: qui Pythia cantat
Tibicen, didicit prius extimuitque magistrum.	415
Nec satis est dixisse, "Ego mira poëmata pango:
"Occupet extremum scabies; mihi turpe relinqui es	st,
"Et, quod non didici, sane nescire fateri".
Ut præco ad merces turbam qui cogit emendas,
Assentatores jubet ad lucrum ire poëta	420
Dives agris, dives positis in fœnore nummis.
Si vero est, unctum qui recte ponere possit,
Et spondere levi pro paupere, et eripere atris

Litibus implicitum, mirabor si sciet inter-
Noscere mendacem verumque beatus amicum.	425
Tu seu donâris, seu quid donare voles cui,
Nolito ad versus tibi factos ducere plenum
Lætitiæ; clamabit enim, Pulchre! bene! recte!
Pallescet; super his etiam stillabit amicis
Ex oculis rorem; saliet, tundet pede terram.	430
Ut qui conducti plorant in funere, dicunt
Et faciunt prope plura dolentibus ex animo; sic
Derisor vero plus laudatore movetur.
Reges dicuntur multis urguere culullis,
Et torquere mero, quem perspexisse laborent	435
An sit amicitia dignus : si carmina condes,
Nunquam te fallant animi sub vulpe latentes.
Quintilio siquid recitares, Corrige sodes
Hoc, aiebat, et hoc: melius te posse negares,
Bis terque expertum frustra, delere jubebat,	440
Et male tornatos incudi reddere versus.
Si defendere delictum quam vertere malles,
Nullum ultra verbum aut operam sumebat inanem;
Quin sine rivali teque et tua solus amares.
Vir bonus et prudens versus reprehendet inertes,	445
Culpabit duros, incomtis allinet atrum
Transverso calamo signum, ambitiosa recidet
Ornamenta, parum claris lucem dare coget,
Arguet ambigue dictum, mutanda notabit;
Fiet Aristarchus; non dicet, Cur ego amicum	450
Offendam in nugis? Hæ nugæ seria ducent
In mala derisum semel exceptumque sinistre.
Ut mala quem scabies aut morbus regius urguet,
Aut fanaticus error et iracunda Diana,
Vesanum tetigisse timent fugiuntque poëtam	455
Qui sapiunt; agitant pueri, incautique sequuntur.
Hic, dum sublimis versus ructatur et errat,
Si veluti merulis intentus decidit auceps
In puteum foveamve, licet Succurrite, longum

,,
Clamet, Io cives! non sit qui tollere curet:	460
Si curet quis opem ferre, et demittere funem,
Quî scis an prudens huc se dejecerit, atque
Servari nolit? dicam, Siculique poëtæ
Narrabo interitum: Deus immortalis haberi
Dum cupit Empedocles, ardentem frigidus Ætnam	465
Insiluit; sit jus liceatque perire poëtis:
Invitum qui servat, idem facit occidenti:
Nec semel hoc fecit: nec, si retractus erit, jam
Fiet homo, et ponet famosæ mortis amorem.
Nec satis apparet cur versus factitet; utrum	470
Minxerit in patrios cineres, an triste bidental
Moverit incestus; certe furit, ac velut ursus
Objectos caveæ valuit si frangere clathros,
Indoctum doctumque fugat recitator acerbus:
Quem vero arripuit, tenet occiditque legendo,	475
Non missura cutem, nisi plena cruoris, hirudo.

DE ARTE POETICA, AD PISONES. 240

ERRATA.

PRELIMINARY DISSERTATION, ETC.

Page (7), line 30, for 8vo read 4to

(27), line 8, for translation read transition

(30), lines 26, 7, dele "in sacrificia"

(32), line 2, for (10th) read (12th)

(74), last line, read a comma at next,

TEXT.

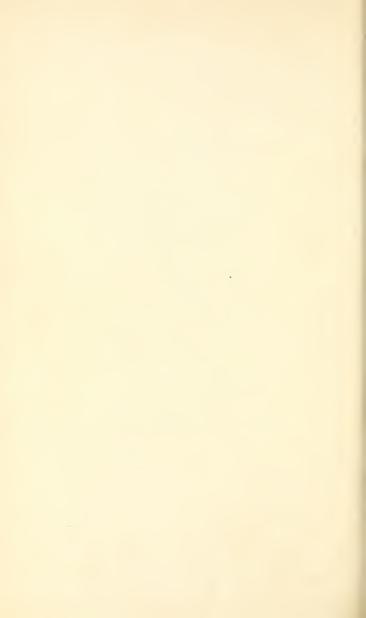

- 1 S. IV., line 69, for Cœli Birrique read Cœli Birrique 80, for jacis: read jacis?
- 2 S. II., line 34, read a full point at est.
- 2 S. III., line 166, for Naviger read Naviget
- 2 S. vIII., line 86, for puei read pueri
- 3 C. Iv., line 4, for Sue read Seu
- 3 C. xxvi., line 9, for beatum read beatam
- E. vi., line 2, read a full point at beatum.
 for comma, read a full point at Ancus

27, for comma, read a full point at Ancus 60, for et read ut

2 E. II., line 151, for curarier? read curarier.

Ad Pis., line 65, for diu palus read palus prius [with Bentley]

379100

1/

